WE BEG TO DIFFER

The Raleigh Times, picking up the loose ends of alumni discussions on the Oxford-Carolina debate, appears very dissatisfied with what happened Thursday night and finds no comfort whatever in the showing made by the Carolina men.

We quote in part: "University alumni who on their way to the teachers' meeting here stopped over Thursday night at Chapel Hill to attend the Carolina Oxford debate are frankly dissatisfied with the showing made by North Carolina's representatives.

"They admit straightway that the British university style of public discussion differs from ours in that it is a discussion rather than a debate; but they believe that even though our University was host to Oxford, the Carolina speakers should have at some point in the proceedings made an effort to present the matter according to their own best traditions."

We beg to differ. The Oxford team was brought to Chapel Hill primarily to furnish a first hand glimpse at the English method of debating. And Chapel Hill got that glimpse and a few other glimpses besides.

Had the two teams lined up, institution against institution, the slaughter would have been so thorough that the Britishers might have felt a little avenged for some of the insults offered the Union Jack in days gone by. The visitors would have murdered the local debaters in so far as the debating goes.

And there's a reason. The Oxford team has dabbled in the World Court issue so long that they could almost be called professionals if compared to the University team.

The debate was not held in order to add another scalp to Carolina's belt. The chief attraction of the affair lay in the presence of the visitors, and their being here was the feature that attracted the capacity house. If the alumni and out-of-town visitors expected a great showing by the North Carolina team they were certainly given a big dose of disappointment.

But we have seen the real working of a debating system superior to our own, and the University does not begrudge the affair. It may feel that the Englishmen so completely trampled the local team and that the University of Oxford produces students superior to those produced at the University of North Carolina. But that is neither here nor there. They have come and we have seen something better. Now we must seek to approach that superior level, and should not adorn sackcloth and ashes in chagrin.

THE FAIR WEEK GAME

There will be no annual Fair Week Classic betwixt the University of North Carolina and the State College of Agriculture and Engineering during the year of 1926—unless State College comes down from its high horse in mighty short order. And the absence of a game next year might be the beginning of a long series of absences.

The passing of the Fair Week game is to be regretted but the University is clearly in the right and should, and probably will, stand pat. The press accounts have been hostile toward the local institution. This hostility is misdirected.

The University of North Carolina has done everything possible to patch up the trouble. State College has made the trouble and has done nothing to smooth it over. Carolina has offered to place the game at a date nine days later than the Thursday of Fair Week. That's the best she could do. State fixes a November date and, Carolina's schedule and Thanksgiving game notwithstanding, refuses to budge.

The Carolina-State game is the most important game on the schedule of State College. But it is not the most important game on the University's seasonal offering. The Raleigh school should take the latter fact, not the first, into premiere consideration. State reminds us of an old woman. She demands a change in date and doesn't give a darn about the University's end of the bargain. And if Carolina doesn't gallantly throw everything to the wind; bow gracefully, and give way and act exactly as it suits the pleasure of the West Raleigh school, it is a tyrant and is guilty of handing out a raw deal.

To use the words of a member of the University Athletic Committee, it's like a man coming up to another and asking for a loan of $400.00. Says the man approached, haven't got but $250.00 but will gladly lend you that." Whereupon the would-be borrower takes offense because he can't borrow the whole business and goes off without even appreciating the help generously offered.

We believe that State attempted to put across a bluff, and the University severely called it. State college admits that the Carolina game is its biggest money-maker. Perhaps she may be able to sign up another school that will be a worthy successor. But we doubt it and State's pocket-book is probably headed for bankruptcy, if the Fair Week game has been its saviour in the past.

As for Carolina, it is to be hoped that a bigger Southern school will be booked. Carolina claims to be among the big boys. Let it play with Georgia, Alabama or Vanderbilt, and see if the vaunted greatness holds water. And if State wants a berth on the University schedule in the future, let her ask for it and let Carolina make way for her by dropping one of the more unimportant games

RELIGIOUS WORKERS CHANGE DATE OF MEETING ONE WEEK

The Council of Religious Workers will not meet tonight as was scheduled but will meet instead next Tuesday night at 6 o'clock in the Methodist Hut. The meeting is changed for this one time only and will be held on the usual day of each month in the future unless something comes up to prevent it.

It is the custom of the council to meet the first Tuesday in each month at one of the Chapel Hill churches and to be served with a supper by members of that church. Representatives from the various religious organizations, churches and University "Y" make up the membership. Mr. Comer is president of the organization. It is the purpose of the council to further religious work in the town and on the campus.

EXTENSION DIVISION OFFERS MORE COURSES

Number of New Correspondence Courses are Available for People of the State.

According to an announcement by Director C. D. Snell, the Extension Division of the University is offering a number of new correspondence courses by members of the faculty that will be available at once to the people of the state. The offering of these new correspondence courses is to create several special courses for school teachers, who are working for certificates, and for that ever-growing number of people in the state who register for correspondence work for purely cultural reasons.

Among the special courses for school teachers, a new course in penmanship is offered, and several courses are available, counting for credit of a primary or grammar grade certificate. Two new courses are being offered, which give both college degree and certificate credit: one is by Prof. W. E. Caldwell in the teaching of history in the high school, and the other is a similar course on the teaching of mathematics in the high school, by Prof. A. W. Hobbs.

For citizens interested in English, courses are offered in Shakespeare's comedies, by Prof. A. T. Johnson, and Prof. A. C. Hibbard offers a course in short-story writing. It is interesting to note how the demand for correspondence work is growing in the state. Courses in history, English, sociology, modern language, and music are coming into great demand by ministers, members of women's clubs, lawyers, and housekeepers for the increment of their personal culture.

DUPLIN COUNTY CLUB HAS AN INTERESTING MEETING

The Duplin County club met Thursday night in the club room of the "Y" for the second meeting of the year. There was a good attendance, and the prospects are good for a flourishing organization this year.

President N. M. Carrol outlined the purpose of the club, which is to promote a better acquaintance and spirit of amity among the students from Duplin, and to have an organization worthy of the pride of Duplin county.

After the business of the meeting was disposed of, the members enjoyed a delightful social hour. Enormous plates of barbecue, potato salad and cabbage slaw were served. Cold drinks and smokes concluded the meeting. The members are planning to have another meeting in the near future.

2. Did God reveal any more to the author of John than to the author of Genesis?

3. Does the Bible substantiate the idea of progressive revelation of God and the meaning of life, or does it seem to claim that its pages hold God's complete and final revelation to man?
4. What is your opinion of the Garden of Eden story, and to your mind what central lesson does it seek to teach? Gen. II:8-III:9.

Remind your group that there are only two more meeting nights this quarter. Get all reports in.

U. N. C. BAND PLAYS WELL IN OLD DOMINION

Gives Two Concerts in Jefferson-Serenades Governor and Mayor, and is Invited to Broadcast.

The thirty-five piece University Band accompanied the football team to Richmond, Saturday, and aided the Tar Heels in crushing V. M. I. The band, led by T. S. McCorkle of the music department, gave two concerts in the lobby of the Jefferson hotel, serenaded Governor Trinkle, of Virginia, and the mayor of Richmond, and was accorded much applause and praise.

In accordance with the request of the manager of the Jefferson hotel, the band gave a morning concert in the lobby of the hotel, at 10:30 A. M. At 11 A. M. the band, in connection with the pep meeting of the Carolina supporters, staged a parade from the Jefferson hotel to the Capitol, and back up Broad Street, stopping to serenade the governor and mayor. During the game the band furnished the usual selections of music. Between the halves, the band took the field and played a number of marches, which it had been practicing, during which they visited the special grand stand of Governor Trinkle, stopped, and played "Hark the Sound." Governor Trinkle arose, giving dignified respect to the University anthem and expressed his appreciation for the band for according him that honor.

By a second request from the management of the Jefferson hotel, an evening concert was given in the hotel lobby, at 7 P. M. Audience of the second concert was greatly augmented by their hearing the morning concert, those present in the morning expressing a desire to hear the band again in another concert. The band also received an invitation to broadcast from a Richmond station, but the invitation came too late, as several of the members of the band had already made other arrangements for the evening. In speaking of the success of the trip, Mr. McCorkle, leader of the band, stated that he had never seen a band accorded more praise and honor than was accorded the University band at Richmond, Saturday. He said that the concerts were highly appreciated and won great praise, at every turn, so to speak, the band was applause and praise.

Tickets for Va. Game Sell Fast

Applications for tickets for the Thanksgiving Day annual grid classic between Carolina and Virginia have been pouring into Graduate Manager Woolen's office in great numbers since October 16.

University students will not be required to exchange their coupons for tickets, but will be passed into the game by presenting the coupon issued them at the first of the year.

Emerson field has a seating capacity of approximately 15,000 people, and with the present value of Carolina football stock, a record crowd is expected on the big day.

Those desiring to secure tickets for friends or parents should make application at once, for no tickets will be sold except through applications and at the box office at the game. The price of each ticket is two dollars, and with the present deluge of applications it is thought that after the 16th of this month tickets can be had for neither love nor money.

Miss Miriam Sauls attended the Carolina-V. M. I. game in Richmond. She was with Miss Fetzer's party.

HARRIERS DIVIDE THE HONORS WITH STATE

Carolina Varsity and Freshmen Cross-Country Teams Open Against State College in Raleigh.

The Carolina cross-country team opened its season against State at Raleigh last Saturday in a race held between the halves of the Carolina Freshmen-State Freshmen football game. The Carolina varsity harriers and the State Freshmen runners turned in victories, giving the two institutions an even count for the day. The score of the varsity race was 22 to 33 in favor of the Tar Heels, while 21 to 34 tells the tale of the first year race which the Wolfcubs won.

The races were run over a hilly course that measured a little over three miles, with the start and finish on Riddick field. The winning team in each race placed three men in one-two-three order, Elliott, Pritchett, and Daniels led the Tar Heels to the tape in the order named, while the first three runners for the State yearlings were Loman, Greaves and Walker.
