We're not betting today. Reason: Placed ours on Dempsey and the Tar Heels last Saturday.

Nearly all the victors last Saturday won on passes. We wonder if the Tar Heels can break their record of completing forward passes for the past two years. Was it last year or year before that they completed only three passes during the season?

Bill Gant contributes this interesting paragraph: "Speaking of football, a coach was asked recently by the faculty of the institution which employed him what he considered to be a fair salary for an athletic director. The mentor replied that he believed that the coaches should be paid more, or at least as much, as some of the football players."

Jake Wade has picked Wake Forest to win the state championship and gives Carolina the edge over Davidson for second place. He puts the Blue Devils next and leaves State to bring up the rear. We'll be surprised if Jake misses his pick.

Two of the Demon Deacons had a lot to fight for last Saturday. News has leaked out that Riley and Sykes were both secretly married at the time, and that their wives were there cheering them on to victory.

But there is one thing that we can't forgive the Deacons for. About three weeks ago several of the players allied themselves together with the solemn and avowed purpose of letting their beards run wild until a day should come when Wake Forest had again defeated a certain assortment of football players from the University of North Carolina. Think of the villains rubbing their hirsute appendages against the faces of our Beau Brummels!

State College Sophs have a new trick that they use on the Froshes. They tell the first-year men that Ethel or Mabel is a hot date and that telephone number 56 will get her, which number gets the police station.

Excuse for "Excuses." The writer of the column failed to be subtle enough to put over his intended satire. He says that it was meant for satire, at any rate. But whether it was meant for satire, equivocation, prevarication, or what, it seems that he did not get it across.

FOR BETTER SCHEDULES

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a story telling of the first full meeting of the University Athletic Council, which is scheduled for next Monday. This council has jurisdiction over everything pertaining to athletics here, except for the eligibility of players, but the part with which the students are most concerned is the making of the schedules. It is this part for which this exhortation is written to the council.

Any one familiar with leading college and university schedules knows that the University of North Carolina schedule for this year is not in keeping pace with the standing of the University throughout the country. Take, for instance, some of the southern colleges and universities and the opponents they will meet this season. Duke will meet Columbia; Georgia will meet Yale; William and Mary will meet Harvard; Washington and Lee will meet Princeton; Tulane will meet New York University, and Florida will journey west for an encounter with the University of Chicago. Then turn to our schedule and see the distance the Tar Heels have to travel from home and the size and rating of the colleges and universities met.

There is not a single game on the University schedule that the team has to cross a state to play except the setto at College Park, Md. When the Tar Heels cross the border line and go into a neighboring state, the schedule committee apparently thinks that it has given the players a good trip and added glory to Carolina's name. What the University needs is more athletic prestige among the largest northern and southern institutions, but it can never get it with its present schedule.

The Tar Heel schedule calls for only nine games this season whereas State College, Wake Forest, Davidson, and other colleges in the state play ten games. With this smaller number, there is no reason why Carolina should not have one or possibly two games with the best institutions in the country. One game with a large northern institution and one with such a southern institution as Georgia Tech, Tulane, or Alabama would improve the schedule considerably.

R. H. "Jack" Cain, an alumnus of the University, writing from Montgomery, Alabama, says "no one down this way seems to recognize Carolina except Tulane." He says further that by talking with some alumni in Montgomery recently, he believes that if someone at Carolina made the necessary move, Montgomery would make a bid for a game between Carolina and Auburn or Alabama to be played in Cromton Bowl.

That is what we are calling for. Will the Athletic Council make some such important moves when it meets Monday?

Open Forum

To the Editor:

We, the student body, and especially we, the "Frosh", have been hearing a great deal about not showing as much school spirit as we should.

Such is hard to observe, we agree. Because we didn't all go about fifty or more miles the past Saturday to see the most pleasing spectacle of that day, we are not a credit to the school.

However, if by chance, we should wish to watch the team which we are told is ours, which represents us, which needs and deserves our support, and if we should wander towards the stadium, we are met at the gate by one of the abundant managers, or others in authority, and told to stay out. If ever we are so fortunate as to gain entrance, we are quickly run out.

If it is wrong that we do not journey over the country side to follow our team, why is it so wrong to attempt to see them in daily practice on their field, at home, on Carolina ground?

Is it that some of their secrets might be divulged? It is interesting to loiter about the gate some day. All the students are kept out. But men, strangers, come and go, nothing being said to them. Is it so probable that Carolina students should be spies for other schools, and that all other visitors be beyond suspicion?

To us it seems that such tactics are not quite conducive to increasing the good feeling and loyalty so much in demand. If the team is not ours at home, why should we feel it ours away from home.

I, for one, have long heard much of the wonderful Carolina spirit, but since being here, have seen little of the wonderful spirit.

I do not wish to appear a knocker, but it does seem to me a little unfair.

RANSON SPOKE IN CHAPEL THURSDAY

Warns First Year Men to Carry Through in Their Athletics

Dale Ranson, track coach, speaking in chapel Thursday morning, urged every man in the Freshman class interested in athletics to select the sport or sports for which he is most fitted and to stick to it all through college.

According to Ranson, over two hundred men signed up for Freshman football while only about one hundred and twenty-five have reported for practice. A list of those who have not been reporting at the field for practice regularly is being prepared, and these men will be compelled to report to gym along with those who did not sign up for football. This is by far the largest number of Freshmen that have ever gone out for football here.

"Any sport is a process of elimination and development", Ranson said. "Men who do not even make a scrub on the Freshman team have been known to make a regular position on the varsity because they develop faster than the others."

"To succeed in athletics a man has to sacrifice. Training is the biggest essential of success in sports."

LAW SCHOOL HOLDS OFFICE ELECTIONS

Henry Johnson, of Tarboro, Is New President

The first year law class met at chapel period yesterday and elected officers for the coming year. The usual intrigue and strategy that accompanies elections on the campus was called into the play on the occasion. According to precedent, the president of the third year class, Hill Yarborough, member of the North Carolina bar, presided over the election. On the first ballot for president, Henry Johnston, of Tarboro, secured a majority over J. F. Cooper and H. G. Goodwin. In the election of vice-president, Tom Rowland defeated Herman Strickland. The election of secretary-Treasurer brought forth a clash between the sexes. Miss Susie Sharp, of Reidsville gave Charlie McNally a stiff fight but was finally defeated in the third ballot by a scant two votes.

2nd Play of Green for New York

"The Field God", by Paul Green, will be produced in New York. Edwin Wolfe, with whom Mr. Green has contracted for the production, was here several days recently. He and the author visited Harnett County, where the scene of the play is laid. "The Field God" is the second play of Mr. Green's for which a New York production has been arranged.

Miss Gocher of the Library staff is living with Mrs. Julia C. Graves on Battle lane.

Dean Braun Has Gone to a Meeting at Philadelphia

G. H. Braun, Dean of the School of Engineering, left Wednesday for Philadelphia to attend the meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Professor Hickerson and Major Cain will go Sunday.

Since Dean Braun is a director of the Institute, it was necessary for him to leave several days before the meeting in order that preparations might be made for the convention. He will be gone about six days. Professor Hickerson and Major Cain will be there three or four days.
