

133rd University Day Is Celebrated Here Tuesday

and when graduates go out each year rededicating themselves to the common welfare of the state we need have no fear that sectionalism will rise up again and retard our progress. North Carolina never accomplished anything until she got away from sectionalism; nothing in the way of good roads, good schools, or anything of real value.

"The state is very well equipped with good roads, proper health regulations and many other things. Our schools are much better than they once were, but we need much improvement of an educational nature. We still have too many people that cannot see the urgent need for better education. As yet we do not even have an eight months school term for all children in the state, not to mention inadequate facilities for the state supported institutions of higher learning. The fight is on; it may not be won now, or even any time soon, but there will be no compromise on the part of those on the side of Education. We must not deny the grammar schools at the expense of the schools of higher learning, or vice-versa. The two must go hand in hand.

Materialistic Age

"In no case should we consider schools merely from a monetary viewpoint. That, of course, is important, but by no means the most important.

"Let us get away from materialism and devote more of our attention to the great spiritual forces striving upwards. This is what we must consider most in our educational program. Permit nothing to down that spirit. North Carolina is today approaching a critical position. We have passed poverty by our strength; we have overcome almost superhuman obstacles, and have established a great state.

"We are living in a materialistic age, but we do not want to develop our material resources alone. If we think too much in these terms we will forget the spirit of our forefathers. They were not seekers after material gain. They sought to keep alive the spirit of intelligence and learning.

"We are, by necessity, somewhat economical now. But we must not permit the budget to run us. We must not forget the soul. The University has a commanding influence in the life of the state, but we must have money to retain that influence. But don't let materialism and commercialism rule your soul nor the spirit of the University. Wealth reaches the stage where it is willing to contribute its part to the rest of the commonwealth. Because of reforms in taxation both rich and poor contribute their just share to the state. There are already signs of restlessness among the wealthier citizens of the state. We must not make a false step.

"It is unfortunate that education must always suffer at the expense of the youth of the state. But since education has been given the undesirable position it has we must make the best of the situation. We must keep alive the spirit of our fathers and that of the University.

The Future

"Don't take a backward step. "Don't become materialistic. "Do what we can with what we have.

"Be a bulwark against which the attacks of commercialism and materialism may be thwarted.

"Let the University be such as to always beckon forward. "In daily life think of the spirit of the past and deliver to the next generation the spirit of the University untarnished"

McKaye's Play Will Be Given This Week-End

ham plays the role of Altoum, Emperor of China, and father of Turandot. The effect of the play is greatly helped by the contrast of these two emperors, one, the serious emperor as played by Harden, and the gay and jesting emperor pro tem, as acted by Holmes.

Miss Mary Wray plays the part of Zelima, slave of Turandot; the part of Scaramouche is excellently played by Frank Haronian. In one of the scenes W. R. Atlee as Harlequin, one of the vagabond players, does a specialty dance. Others in the cast are John D. Bullock as servant of Calaf; Albert Lang as Chang, a eunuch; Frank Howell as a priest; W. A. Evans as a drummer; T. H. McNatt as Buddha; Dave Milne as Pantaloon and Ralph Miller as Punchinel-

Over two billion

—and for just one reason

All headed one way, for natural tobacco taste

NO doubt about it. Over two billion Chesterfields are smoked every month, and even today, after four years of record-breaking gains, Chesterfield is still America's fastest-growing cigarette.

To men who know tobacco, that means just one thing. American smokers have found what they wanted—natural tobacco taste and character. They've found it in Chesterfields only—and the shift to Chesterfield is on!
