

WORKMAN GIVES ATTRIBUTES OF RELIGIOUS MAN

Who Is Leader in Campus at Speech to Y Cabinets—Bank Balances Big This Year.

The Rev. W. T. Workman, Professor of the School of Religion, delivered the address of the second joint-meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Monday night, on "The Personal Equipment of a Campus Religious Leader," in which he urged the Cabinet members to get Christ's viewpoint, to find the real meaning of discipleship by being "with Him," as their first prerequisite for Christian leadership.

"A man's first duty to society is to be in himself what he wants the race to be. What you are will determine what you will do," said Professor Workman.

"The first prerequisite of a religious leader is not mechanics. The only man who can solve the problems is the man who really cares about the questions involved. We could do without half the Christian activity in this country and on this campus, if in doing away with it would make us use this time in honest session with ourselves," he continued. Prof. Workman pointed out the passage in St. Mark, "He appointed twelve that they might be with Him, and that he might send them forth." He stated that this was a two-fold call, first to discipleship, and second to apostleship; but to be with Him must come first in our lives. Prof. Workman called the Cabinet's attention to the fact that the second call is often placed first, and that we are acting today as if Jesus says, "I am selecting you that I might send you forth, and then, if there is any time left, you might be with Me." He urged the members to come closer to Christ, and then go forth, but "never allow activity to crowd out the inner life."

"Being a 'good mixer' may be a splendid characteristic, but what do the 'good mixers' mix into society," asked Prof. Workman. "Does the mixing help any. It would be better for the campus if some were not such good mixers. You cannot give what you do not possess. You cannot teach what you do not know. That's why a lot of us are called to discipleship before apostleship. Christ cared more about twelve men who had his viewpoint, than about a thousand who went about working without it. We need not to take Jesus to the campus, but to discover Him here. Jesus is in every man's best moments," said Prof. Workman.

Reports

The meeting was well attended by members of the Junior-Senior, Sophomore and Freshman Cabinets, and met for the first time this year with the Y. M. C. A. Board of Directors. Frazier Glenn, president, presided, and received reports of the work done by the cabinets during the past month. The Junior-Senior Cabinet report dealt chiefly with finances, the Boys Work Department, the Religious Department, and the 1926 Red Cross Roll Call. The Y has a larger bank balance at the present time than ever before, which may be attributed to the improved system installed this year; but there are still many pledges outstanding which it hopes to collect before Christmas, the report stated. Reports of the Sophomore and Freshman Cabinets indicated much activity in these organizations during the month.

It was explained by the president that the monthly joint-meetings of the Cabinets were to be of an inspirational nature, with brief reports of the work. At each meeting, an address will be made by some prominent speaker on the campus.

Thanksgiving Game Decides Season's Success or Failure of the Notre Dame System

ed over Notre Dame. The next year Collins became a regular at end on the varsity and Cerney alternated at fullback with Layden, one of the famous quartette of equestrians. For three years the two were fixtures on the team when it was at the height of its fame. Sport writers termed Cerney the Fifth Horseman.

Rumor, vouchsafed by the close companions of the equestrians themselves, has it that Coach Knute Rockne characterized Collins as "one of the best ends ever produced at Notre Dame," and Cerney as "one of the best defensive backs I have ever seen." In addition the near-horsemen cavorted on the baseball team, Collins as an outfielder and Cerney as a catcher. After graduating, Cerney capitulated to the professionals for a year, playing with the team that won the Mid-Western League championship.

Collins Never Scored

In his entire football career of about sixty games, Collins admits the unique record of never scoring a point. Evidently passing to the ends was not in vogue on the teams of which he was a member.

Last fall Collins assisted Coach Thomas, also a former Notre Dame player, at Chattanooga University as line coach. He was line coach at Purdue last spring. Cerney began his coaching career at Loyola. The two former team mates were reunited when they took over the coaching duties under a two year contract at U. N. C. this fall.

While they were students at Notre Dame, Collins and Cerney contributed to their education by traveling more than 40,000 miles with the football and baseball teams. Evidently athletics took up a large percentage of their time.

Several times the companion almost-equestrians appeared in the role of fish-mongers at Notre-Dame. Buying as many as ten carloads at a time from the Great Lakes fishermen, they sold them from the cars at prices below those the retailers could offer. Some very neat additions to their material wealth and higher education became theirs in this manner.

Bill Cerney kept in condition several summers by toiling as baggage-smasher on a Great Lakes steamer plying from Chicago to Duluth. He fraternized with the gobs and probably picked up part of his supply of picturesque adjectives from them.

Under the regime of Collins and Cerney and the Notre Dame system, the Carolina players admittedly lead a hard life. They are goaded to a colossal forgetfulness of self by the insults and ridicule heaped upon them by the fluent coaches. The team has earned the sobriquet of "fighting fools." Whatever may be said of the Notre Dame offsprings they turn out battling football players.

Players Quit

The system was too severe for the Southern temperaments of several of the players, including Block, Ellison, and Sides, first string backs, and they said adieu and other things to the squad and the coaches. Ellison quit several times, but loyalty to the school overcame the natures of Block and himself, and they returned to the squad.

Admiration that becomes almost love at times, fear dislike, even hatred—these are the reactions to the coaches on the part of the members of the team. Under these two men the players cease to be individuals. They become savage tacklers, dynamic runners—units of a machine of steel. Muscle bound automatons of the Notre Dame system!

Gentle Ashmore

Mild Jim Ashmore, usually a mere satellite of the two battling Irish-Americans on the football field, is the third member of the trio of Carolina varsity coaches. He is not primarily a football coach, but is an assistant to the pigskin men between the periods when he is engaged in his trade of headmentor of basketball and baseball. Attending high school at Bethany, he went to the University of Illinois upon his graduation. He was a regular on the football, baseball, and basketball teams there. His wide coaching experience includes periods at Washington State University of Iowa, University of Colorado, and DePauw University. This is his first year in the South. He has two daughters, the younger of whom is attending high school here; the elder is a sophomore in the University.

Recapitulation of Season

Prospects for a Carolina team worthy of the coaches at the beginning of the season were dimly bleak. Only four letter men were out, and most of the material, according to the new coaches, was raw and atrociously trained. However, a scrappy squad of footballers has been ground out of the Notre Dame system mill by Collins and Cerney. As the season has progressed the team has vastly improved, and it is a far cry from the squad that met disaster at Wake Forest September 25 to the aggregation that will face the Cavaliers Thanksgiving Day.

The less said to Carolina men about the Wake Forest game the better. The Baptists triumphed 13-0. After a long journey to the Tennessee stronghold the Tar Heels were annihilated, 34-0. Victory furlled its wings over Emerson Field October 9 and the student body went wild as the Collinsmen trotted off the field to the tune of a 7-0 win over the South Carolina Gamecocks, conquerors of Maryland. Again the following Saturday the Tar Heels fought their way to a favorable decision. This time Duke was the victim, on rain-soaked Emerson Field, 6-0.

Again a long trip proved disastrous, and the team suffered a 14-6 defeat at the hands of Maryland, College Park, October 23. They redeemed themselves in the next two games, which were played at home. October 30 the State Wolfpack snarled helplessly as the Tar Heels marched over them to a two-touchdown and a 12-0 win. The next Saturday the Tar Heels scattered the contents of the dope bucket to the tune of a 28-0 win over V. M. I.

Last Saturday came the biggest upset of all as the Davidson Wildcats dedicated their new stadium with a 10-0 triumph over the Tar Heels. Coach Cerney says of this game: "It may have been the making of a great team."

It is a significant fact that every game played on Emerson field this season has gone into the Carolina won column. It is of equal significance that all the defeats administered to them have been on foreign fields. Winning four and losing the same number, the team has neither won a game abroad nor lost one at home.

The dope favors a Virginia victory Thursday. The Cavaliers tied Maryland, while the Old Liners defeated Carolina 14-6. Coach Collins is anything but cheerful over prospects for a win. "After the Davidson game we can hardly expect a victory," he said yesterday.

On a parallel with the record of the varsity this year is that of the Frosh. The Tar Babies lost to the South Carolina Biddies in the last minute of play at Columbia, 20-16, defeated the Fort Bragg soldiers, 7-0, lost to the State Frosh, and last Saturday tied the Maryland first-year men in a weird exhibition of slugging and wrangling on Emerson Field, 6-6. Their biggest game comes this Saturday when they meet the Virginia Frosh on Emerson Field.

Belding

Lester C. Belding, Frosh coach, prototype of Collins and Cerney, completes the list of this year's new coaches. Equally fiery, a hard driver, he is on the same ilk as the two scions of Erin and the Pope. A native Iowan, he was end and half on the Mason City high school team of that state. For four years he was a regular end on the University of Iowa varsity. During this period of time it won both the Big-ten and the Western Conference Championships. After graduating, he coached the Boulder, Colorado, high school eleven for one year, and later guided the fortunes of the Clinton, Iowa, team for three years. This fall he began his college coaching career with the U. N. C. freshman team.
