PARAGRAPHS

The sixth major row of the campus during the current year is due to be settled tonight.

We hear that the Yackety Yack staff is going to petition Beta Chi Alpha, national organization. The B. C. A. boys put out Better College Annuals.

We also hear that "Al" Moore and "Ken" Smith want it understood that the two personalities in this paper stating that said Editor and Business Manager spent the Christmas holidays in New York and Canada, respectively, has nothing to do with the proposal to put four senior pictures on one page in the annual.

"Dula writes still another." R. L. D. says there is nothing most unanimously for allowing to run for the editorship of the TAR HEEL. Dula says it is a malicious concoction.

"K. O." Warren lived up to his name Saturday night in the frigidaire. Three men went out by the k. o. route.

Speaking of the word frigidaire makes us think of the cognomens that have been applied to the building on the south side of the athletic field. The Tin Can seemed appropriate, but the Tin Ice Box is better. An athlete tells us that it is even colder to the basketeers than to the spectators.

Carolina athletes are generally called Tar Heels, but last year a sport writer dubbed the members of the basketball team White Phantoms. This year another sport writer is calling them the Flying Phantoms. Page Bill Shakspeare!

THE YACKETY YACK ROW

The meeting of the senior class tonight to try to come to some agreeable terms with the editorial and business staffs of the year book is calculated to cause no little enmity between different factions. At a meeting of the class before Christmas the editor of the annual, with the best of intentions, made known the fact that he had planned to inaugurate a new policy for the Yackety Yack this year. The most radical change was the plan to leave the write-ups out of the book, and the editor wished to know the opinion of the class regarding this proposed change. The seniors voted almost unanimously for following the beaten path of carrying flattery mementos.

Since the holidays members of the class have got wind of the news that the editor was still planning to carry out his original plans. Then the bubble burst. Tonight the questions will be: Can the editor reconcile himself to the write-ups, or will the seniors submit to the policy of the editor.

Since the last meeting of the class, it is said that many of the fourth year men have changed their attitudes toward the write-ups. Practically all of the men admitted that the write-ups are inaccurate bits of quibbling, prevarication and equivocation, but they showed that they wanted them in the annual. Editor Moore has said that the proposed change is in keeping step with his desire to produce a better year book, and that he will not be benefited financially by it. Some members of the class think the issue has shifted from the matter of write-ups to the principle of accepting money with the implied idea that as much space will be given to each senior this year as formerly, id est, one-half page. The contract for the book was made last spring before any policy had been determined by the editor and business manager. With or without the write-ups the basic price will be paid for the book this year. It isn't a matter of dollars.

If the editor can sacrifice his desire to make the Yackety Yack a better book without the write-ups in order to pacify the senior class, we would advise him to do it. Perhaps a compromise can be effected.

PITT COUNTY MEN TO MEET TONIGHT

Will Elect Officer for Booster Edition of Newspaper.

The regular meeting of the Pitt County Club will be held tonight instead of Thursday night, because of the conflict with the basketball game with Wake Forest Thursday night. The managing editor and business manager of the paper which the club will issue this spring will be elected at the meeting tonight. The paper will carry stories of interest to Carolina alumni and will attempt to put before the county seniors the advantages of the University for college education.

All men from the county are urged to be present for the Yackety Yack picture which will be made Wednesday at chapel period at a place to be decided tonight, the club president states.

The following officers were elected at the last meeting of the club to serve during this quarter: president, John Lewis; vice-president, Clifton Stokes; secretary-treasurer, Durward Hart.

OPEN FORUM

Setting Mr. Shohan Aright

Editor of TAR HEEL:

The article in the Saturday issue of the TAR HEEL concerning the Yackety Yack write-ups, had for one of the cross lines, "Al Moore is denounced." After quoting an interview at some length with one of the members of the class, Mr. Shohan, to use his own words, "have ear to a well-known campus cynic, and old political war horse." Such was not the case. The politician was present at the interview with the barrister, and in walking up the campus with Mr. Shohan reviewed a past bit of political history, not exactly as Mr. Shohan alleges, but merely by way of conversation, having no idea that it would be used to put in the TAR HEEL, Mr. Shohan not giving the slightest hint that such would be done.

The article is written as if it were an interview, directly quoted, in the speaker's words. The words and part of the sentiment are the reporter's. The politician is neither a member of the class of '27, nor on the Yackety Yack staff, and has no interest in the controversy at all. Mr. Moore is a personal friend of his, of long standing, and he does not think that any past election should influence the present state of affairs. Furthermore, he is heartily in favor of the wisdom of eliminating the write-ups, a fact which Mr. Shohan passed over as lightly as possible.

In the opinion of the politician the affair should be considered solely from the standpoint of the Senior Class and the officials of the Yackety Yack. His opinion on politics should not intrude, and he sincerely hopes that the campus will forget that which should never have been published.

Williams Discusses "Miracles" In Talk To The Epworth League

In a talk on "Miracles," given Sunday night before the largest crowd attending the Epworth League this year, Dr. H. H. Williams said that because of its inexplicable quality, the phrase "Do you believe in miracles" was one which he would abolish if he had the power.

Dr. Williams said that during 1000 years of religious history the word "miracle" was not mentioned, and for 1000 years after it appeared in the history of Jesus, even in the acts of the 12 apostles was the power of performing with individual power carried on. He explained that the inconsistency to him was based on the interpretation of life in the light of constant change in ideas and the interpretation of mathematical laws as constant and unchanging. In relation to this explanation he said that he wanted to know the truth for "I mean to play the man. I would like to be popular but I must know that I am right."

The physical miracles he considered as insignificant to man and that the big issue and the real miracle of Christ was his phrase, "I am the truth." "When you make that understanding, that will be the miracle."

Wheeler Entertains at Informal Dinner Party

A. S. Wheeler entertained the members of the chemistry staff and the graduates in that department at an informal dinner party on last Thursday night at his home on E. Franklin street. There were about 30 present at the party and they enjoyed many games after the dinner.

JANUARY ISSUE ALUMNI REVIEW JUST OFF PRESS

Contains Articles of Interest To Student Readers—Supplement Also Appears.

INTERVIEW WITH KENAN

The January issue of the Alumni Review, accompanied by a thirty-two page supplement, is one of more than average interest to the student reader.

Probably the article holding the greatest interest for the student, "Getting Next to a Great Man Easy Proposition," an interview by Florence W. Stephens, of the Raleigh News and Observer with William Rand Kenan. As no doubt everyone knows, Mr. Kenan is the donor of the new memorial stadium on which work is being pushed to completion day and night. The subject is full of interest for every Carolina man, and is handled in a capable manner. However, the male reader cannot but be offended by the manner in which Miss Stephens waxes femininely ecstatic.

The rest of the issue is full of its usual meaty articles of particular interest to Carolina men. It is cloaked in its new format, which has been used since the October issue. The present cover is one of extreme dignity and simplicity. It is much more restful on the eye than the old cover, and adds tremendously to the impression of the entire issue.

It is in the supplement that one finds the striking features of the issue. The following foreword at the beginning of the supplement amply explains its purposes: "The Alumni Review is engaged in interpreting and discussing the University and its alumni, but its treatment is necessarily simple and abbreviated. Its content consists of fragments of information suggesting the events and ideas important to alumni work. Its method is to reduce the corporeity to such of its elements as to enable a busy man 'to read as he runs.' "But an alumni association worthy the name cannot develop around such scattered bits. It must have a controlling theme, a purpose, and a definite idea as to organization and method, all of which must be understood by our alumni leaders everywhere. Completer statement, fuller definition and interpretation are required to meet this need. Moreover, the purposes and ideas of today must be left extant as an intelligible background for growth,—for the building of the association is a growth. Each step through which we advance must be systematically interpreted and defined. All this work, in turn, is parallel to, and influenced by, similar treatments of the University, and this hour in our life.

"Hitherto, these mature, connected analyses and interpretations have been left unpublished, and consequently lost from our distant and absent alumni. To carry such material to all those for whom it was intended, and to whom it is important, this supplement of the Alumni Review is issued. The frequency with which it will appear, and the constancy of this format, must depend alike on the success of this effort and the requirements of tomorrow.—Editor."

The first three articles are reprints of the speeches made by President Chase, Alfred M. Scales, president of the General Alumni Association, and Daniel L. Grant, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, before the Alumni Convention held here in November. It was originally planned to include Mr. Penniman's speech, but unforeseen circumstances prevented its inclusion. Then comes a sort of "Alumni Catechism" by Tyre C. Taylor, Field Secretary of the Alumni Association. This is a series of questions and answers on subjects of alumni which had been asked the writer during meetings throughout the state. The last article is a reprint of a speech by R. D. Douglas, vice-president of the Greensboro Bank and Trust Company before the Greensboro Alumni Association, treating of the necessity of continued work for the University at this time.
