MOSTLY ABOUT WOMEN

Women may now become members of the University faculty. The announcement of the recent action of the executive committee of the board of trustees in admitting females to the list of instructors may serve to perturb those who are "agin 'em."

Paraphrasing a statement made by President Chase in Winston-Salem last week, we agree everlastingly with him that the board's move will not make the University more like North Carolina College for Women or any other female institution. There has long been a need for women instructors in the school of education. As the newspaper report of the committee's meeting states, the "action will not be revolutionary. It was observed that 99.44 of all the work in elementary grades in North Carolina is done by women. To get the proper training these teachers have had to go heretofore to Peabody, Chicago, or Columbia."

Now, it is assumed, they may get the "proper training" at the University of North Carolina.

Contrary to the first impression gained by the announcement, the TAR HEEL does not think the faculty will be "stocked" with women next year or the years to come. At the same time it may be added here that if we can get a female professor that has the "goods" and can deliver them better than a man applicant for the position, we say take the woman! It is childish to remind herein that this is a University.

OPEN FORUM

Hibbard Gets It Straight Editor of TAR HEEL:

A news story in your last issue carries a statement which is so full of humor as to determine me to break my eight years of silence and ask space in the Open Forum column.

The account to which I refer explains the working of the absence rule for juniors and seniors. The young man who wrote it, a freshman I believe just starting off on a promising TAR HEEL career, stated that "Mr. Hibbard wanted the students to report professors who attempted to make their own class rules concerning absence and promised to take the matter up with such professors." (I quote from a harrowed memory). "Take the matter up" how? Are they to be spanked? Reported to the trustees? What? It is this statement which makes me consider the story one of humor. Your young reporter seems actually to think that a dean is a man of some power.

But in order that I may not appear again in such an ambitious, Bill Hart, fate-tempting role, let me say that I did say something like that to the reporter. I do feel that any professor who fails a student purely because of the student's neglect to attend class regularly is violating the spirit of that rule, and students failed in a course for that reason should make complaint to their respective deans. This is a safe invitation to extend—no students will be failed on this basis alone.

ENGINEERS WILL GIVE OPEN SHOW

Civil, Electrical, and Mechanical Engineering Students to Exhibit May 4.

Students of civil, electric, and mechanical engineering will give an "open show" on the night of May 4.

This interesting feature of student activity, heretofore unknown to the student body, will consist of demonstrations with engineering material, laboratory experiments, and illustrations of machine power. The students in these three departments of engineering will adopt this procedure in order to introduce all students, Chapel Hill residents, and people out in the state to the engineering schools and their work. Student guides will be provided so that a complete tour may be made of the work done in Phillips Hall, the filter plant, and the power plant. The entire schedule of entertainment will be prepared and executed by students. Programs will be printed and issued to those interested.

Besides an excursion which will point out the sources from which the University's power, heat, water, etc., come, and the work of the various engineering schools here, the students will offer prize contests and refreshments at the end of the program, which will begin at eight and end at ten o'clock.

Large engineering schools have undertaken these entertainments with signal success. At Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a similar program was presented to 7,000 people. High school students throughout the state will be given an opportunity to see the work of all three types of engineering as it is taught here.

Miss Annette Osborne attended the junior-senior banquet at the North Carolina College for Women during the Easter holidays.

Random Thrusts

By

Off With the Old

Yea, verily, the old order changeth and the new taketh its place. The bright, clear flame of the Driftwood Fire has been shifted to heavier duties in the editorial columns. There may it burn brightly and continue to blaze up—as honest, as frank, and as purging as was its wont in this column!

And On With the New

This year's TAR HEEL is quite fortunate in possessing two editors instead of the customary one. Such good fortune, however, will inevitably result in a nice, heavy supply of lengthy and serious editorials which must be offset somehow. So—EUREKA! the Spearman finds a purpose and a policy for his column, which all good columns (a subtle compliment, perhaps, for this fledgling!) must surely have. Therefore, having started forlornly and at random with neither purpose nor policy, the Spearman now announces as his high and lofty purpose: (1) to turn out a column light and frivolous enough to balance the editorial page and (2) to beg, borrow, steal, or invent enough nonsense to fill one column one time per week.

Policy—If Any

And as for policy—that will simply be to print anything interesting, amusing, and funny that may come to the ears, eyes or pen of the columnist. Campus contributions are welcomed and will be printed if possible. The only qualifications are these: all contributions must be (1) funnier than the Buccaneer but (2) not necessarily as amusing as TAR HEEL news stories or as laughable as the Yackety Yack.

Warning or Promise

Any column, to be interesting, must occasionally be personal. So let this be a warning—or a promise if you like! However, any thrusts that may be made will absolutely be random thrusts made to amuse everyone rather than to wound anyone.

As for Crusading

However much the charger at the head of this column may resemble the fiery steed of some ancient knight, let it be distinctly understood that the Spearman upon his back is no ardent crusader. For crusading is too serious a project to be undertaken lightly or at random; and the avowed purpose of this column is amusement rather than salvation.

A Fond Farewell

Now that Bumps Madry has departed from the editorial page of the TAR HEEL we suppose that his paragraphic favorites, Co-ed Cora and Freshman Fritz, have also set out for other lands. As a fond farewell to two such faithful friends we should like to make this announcement:

Our Naughty School

One of the feminine visitors to the Easter dances declared that she had never seen such an unmoral school. "Why," she exclaimed, "you even have deans instead of principles!" (Dear me, can that be an insinuation that our deans do not have principles? We wonder.)

FRESHMEN LOSE TO TWIN CITY HI

Winston-Salem Lads Win Hectic Game from Tar Baby Nine.

The Carolina freshmen dropped their initial baseball game yesterday afternoon on Emerson field when they bowed to the Winston-Salem high school nine 11 to 10. Williams' circuit clout in the eighth accounted for two markers bringing the Twin city lads the lead which they maintained throughout the remaining innings.

Erratic fielding and numerous hits tended to make the game rather long drawn out and uninteresting. The Tar Baby batters gathered 14 hits to the visitors 13 but the latter seemed to have the gift of producing theirs at the critical time. Payne, Winston catcher had a big day at the bat collecting five hits out of as many trips to the plate, one of which was good for four bases. Wright to Jackson to Bunch completed a pretty double play for the freshmen while Plaster and Payne did the same for the visitors.

Up to the eighth it was either team's game with one team leading one inning and the other forging ahead in the next. Stewart on the mound for the Tar Babies during his four innings of work managed to hold the visitors to 2 runs while his teammates were marking up five to their credit. In the fifth Hamlet relieved Stewart. Winston took advantage of the change and with the aid of Wright's error and Payne's homer, secured five tallies. The frosh managed to get two markers in their turn at the bat but the Twin City tribe accounted for these two and one more in the sixth while they held the Tar Babies scoreless. Edwards meanwhile had taken Hamlet's place on the mound. The new arrangement appeared to encourage the yearlings for they managed to push 3 runs across and at the same time blank the visitors. Then in the eighth came Williams blow which practically sewed up the game for Winston-Salem.

INTRA-MURALS TO HAVE FULL CARD

Baseball, Tennis, and Horseshoes on Campus Schedule for Spring.

The spring intramural tournaments in baseball, tennis, and horseshoes will get under way during the next two weeks. All teams interested in entering any of these events should turn in their entries within the next week at the intramural office at 205 South.

There will be two baseball leagues, consisting of the fraternities and the dormitories. Two five inning games a week will be played by each team on the intramural field at four and five o'clock in the afternoon. The campus championship team will get a silver loving cup which will be presented by the Grail. The teams will start the season on next Monday.

The all-university tennis tournament will then begin on Wednesday, May 4. The teams will consist of two men each, and will play two singles and one double match against the pair they draw, the winner advancing to the next round.

Following tennis, the horseshoe championship will commence on Monday, May 9. Unlike tennis, however, there may be only one entry from each unit of the University, and there will be four men on each team. There will be two separate tournaments, one for fraternities and one for dormitories, the winners to oppose each other to determine the campus championship. The matches will consist of three singles and two doubles events and will be played on courts to be constructed right back of the Law Building.

The name of R. L. Zealy was omitted from the Honor Roll as published in the TAR HEEL. Zealy has made nothing but A's since entering the University.
