

Tar Heels Play Great Football and Defeat Maryland by One Point

Veritable Cloudburst Slows Up Good Game on Emerson Field.

Whisnant and Ferrell Do Good Toe and Pass Work; Captain Morehead, Schwartz, and Ward Play Stellar Game.

One of the most heroic chapters in the University's athletic history was written last Saturday afternoon in a veritable sea of mud. While five thousand fans shook and shivered in a cold and driving rain, the Tar Heels booted the dope bucket sky-winding and defeated the Old Liners 7 to 6 in the biggest upset of the 1927 grid season.

Curley Byrd brought a powerful crew south with every odd pointing to a Maryland victory, but these odds mattered little to the heroic band of Tar Heels that took the field and battled through more than two hours in the quagmire that Emerson Field became.

Albert Whisnant and Billy Ferrell threw superstition and belief in prophecies to the winds and booted the way to the Carolina victory. Of course there were eleven men on the field fighting all the time, but the Tar Heels owe their victory to the teamwork of these two backfield stars. Whisnant drop-kicked the point that counted the win on the dry field that prevailed for the first quarter, but the punting of Ferrell during the final three quarters proved a savior for Carolina time and again.

The Floods Came

Each team scored in that first quarter, and 'twas well that they did. As the second period began the bottom fell out, and a literal cloudburst drenched spectators and players too. The field became a true ocean of mud, and the ball was nothing but a lump of mud to be handled like so much precious metal.

The majority of the fans stuck it out through the second quarter, but between halves there was a general exodus to the University dormitories in quest of raincoats and slickers. One pair of University students exhibited unusual originality and ability to orient themselves to the weather when they appeared garbed only in bathing suits.

The players themselves came back after intermission wearing mud-cleats and rubberized breeches, but even these failed to function perfectly on the slippery field. Both teams slipped, slid and fumbled with equal frequency.

Maryland Scores

Maryland drew first blood. Curley Byrd presented three fine ball carriers in "Knocky" Thomas, Gordon Kessler and Snyder. That is they could "tote" a ball on dry land, but unfortunately it was a day for Johnny Weismuller.

Thomas and Kessler drove over right tackle for gain after gain as the first quarter got under way. Taking the ball in mid-field they began a march goalward that was never headed. It was a deceptive play they used that involved double and even triple passes behind the line, but it always ended with either Thomas or Kessler headed toward the west goal with the ball.

They never failed to gain on this scoring march, and Thomas went over guard for three yards in the scoring play. Kessler spilled the victory when his dropkick for point went low into a mass of players.

Then came the Tar Heel touchdown. Kessler punted short to Carolina's 45 yard line, and two line plays by Ferrell and Ward went with a Maryland off-side to give a Tar Heel first down. Jimmy Ward hit left tackle for eight yards, and Whisnant made it first down on the twenty-eight yard line. Ward tried right end twice with no gains, and on the next play Whisnant ran back and passed to Ward for the touchdown.

A Beautiful Heave

The Maryland line was rushing Whisnant as he ran back to his left with the ball in his left hand. Everyone knew it was a pass, and all were set for it. Just as a giant Old Line tackle left his feet to hit Whisnant, the Tar Heel quarter heaved the ball ten yards to Ward in the open field. Ward whirled, dodged two tacklers and sprinted eighteen yards over the

COKER TO BRING UNKNOWN GRAPE VINE TO CAMPUS

New Genus of Scuppernong Found Near Elizabeth City, Pasquotank County.

A new type of scuppernong grape will be introduced on the campus about Christmas, W. C. Coker, well-known authority on botany, stated Monday.

Credit for the find, says Dr. Coker, goes to C. L. and J. W. Ball, students here, who live in Elizabeth City. When Dr. Coker and his companion, H. H. Braxton, were in that part of the state on their recent trip which resulted in the finding of the wolfia, the smallest flowering plant known, they got in touch with the Balls, who conducted them to the plant.

The grape has the characteristics of the scuppernong, as to color, and shape of the plant, but the fruit is not round, but long, oval shaped, being distinctly different from the familiar one, so well known. Cuttings from the vine will be brought here during the winter about the last of December, to see if it will flourish, and to investigate the commercial aspects of it.

In telling more of the scuppernong genus, the professor mentioned the fact that the huge arbor on Roanoke Island, which is generally considered the parent of all scuppernongs, is not it, although this one is probably the largest arbor in the country. The origin of all these grapes is a seedling of a muscadine, which is growing on the banks of the Scuppernong River, whence the name.

Mutation is name given the phenomenon by which one plant comes into existence from a much different one, Dr. Coker said.

Sanborn Gets $100 In Big Damage Suit

Former University Basketball Coach Wins Libel Suit.

Holland Sanborn, former basketball coach at the University, who brought suit against the Asheville Times for $100,000, last week was awarded $100 damages by Orange County Superior Court.

Coach Sanborn sued the paper on a charge of libel as the result of the appearance of his picture in the paper under the caption of Willie Cavalier, of Pennsylvania, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for slaying his grandmother.

"I am vindicated," were the first words Sanborn uttered after the court's decision was reached. He coached basketball here in 1926 and his proteges were the winners of the Southern Intercollegiate Championship.

DORMITORY CLUB HAS NEW RULING CONCERNING NOISE

Councils to Handle Cases of Infraction of Quiet Hour Regulations.

A motion, passed by the Dormitory Club at a meeting Friday night, that each dormitory elect a Dormitory Council to handle cases of excessive noise or any other infractions of the regulations of the University pertaining to conduct in the dormitories was approved by C. R. Jonas, President of the Student Body, yesterday afternoon, and goes into effect immediately.

The motion provides that "each dormitory shall have a Dormitory Council composed of seven men, in the case of three-floor buildings, and nine men in four-floor buildings, whose duty it is to maintain and improve living conditions and conditions for studying in the dormitory." It further states that "the Dormitory Council shall have the power to call before a meeting of the Council such residents of the dormitory as have made themselves undesirable because of excessive noise after 9:00 p. m. (except on Saturday and Sunday nights), or have otherwise infringed upon the rights of others in the dormitory; and to warn these members against further disturbances or infractions. It shall have the power to expell from the dormitory (in case the probation is violated) the member or members who further disturb. (Member or members forfeit right to possession of the room or rooms.) The member or members shall, within three days after notification of expulsion from the dormitory, vacate the room or rooms or shall file written appeal with the secretary of the Student Council."

Dean of Students, F. F. Bradshaw, who attended the meeting Friday night, asserted that the Dormitory Club has expanded in interest and initiative for the past five years. He declared that he would like to see the dormitories become more of a social unit, and to see the students become more friendly and better acquainted with one another.

James Williams, former president of the Dormitory Club and at present employed secretary of the Club, stated that cooperation is the watchword at present among the representatives of the dormitories.

Henry C. Lay of Beaufort, was elected president of the Club for this year. The organization will hold a supper-meeting once each month and will pay regular monthly dues of 50 cents per member.

Luther Byrd, director of Intra-Mural athletics, declared that he was well pleased with the first week of intramural work. He announced the tennis doubles tournament to be played this fall and the singles in the spring, and stressed the importance of the annual Cake Race, which is scheduled for October 25.

Representatives were present from every dormitory except "G" and "F". The Club is composed of the dormitory presidents and the dormitory athletic managers.

Schedules of the medical school have been shifted about somewhat this year. Beginners in the school start immediately into anatomy. At present, there are about thirty staffs being held in reserve, insuring a good time and plenty of meat for all those hopeful of being future medics.

Confusion Prevalent Among Fraternity Men as Pledge Day Nears; Situation Tense

Fraternities. This word seems to be the root of the air of confusion and nervous anticipation now prevalent on the Carolina campus. Conscientious freshmen, who are attempting to pursue their studies, are being shown their folly and are being informed of the more important matters of college life. Upperclassmen of the Greek lodges are justifying their neglect of their academic duties by dwelling upon the weighty problem of obtaining neophytes for their orders.

This tense situation will be augmented as the days drag on, as frosh become more perplexing, as pledge day approaches ominously. Baird's

BOB FETZER TO ADDRESS TRACK MEN ON FRIDAY

Tar Heel Team Faces Hard Schedule; Virginia Has Strong Team.

There will be an official meeting of all candidates for the varsity track squad in Gerrard Hall Friday morning at chapel period. At that meeting Coach Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson will meet the prospective cinder stars and explain the plans for the year.

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson both urge every man to be present who has any intention of trying for track berths next spring. The Tar Heel schedule includes some of the stiffest opposition ever met on the track, and it is absolutely necessary that fall practice be held to put the men into condition for hard work soon after Christmas.

The Carolina dual record that shows no one defeat in dual meets in five years is one that calls for all opponents to point for the meet with the Heels. Virginia, long supreme in Dixie cinder circles, is particularly anxious to win next year's meet. The Tar Heels won the Cavalier meet by closest possible margins last year and the year before, and "Pop" Lannigan has a wonderful squad gathered for next spring.

A recent issue of "College Topics," the University of Virginia news sheet, carried the following write-up:

"Varsity track practice has been going on in earnest during the past week. A large squad of candidates for the dashes, hurdles, and field events, as well as the cross country men, are getting into form for the fall workouts. Prospects are bright for the spring season, as many of last year's Varsity regulars will return for 1928. Among these are Captain Cumming, who tied the Olympic record for the 100 metre; Flippin, National Pentathlon champion; M. LeMauer, A. A. U. shotput champion; White, for the high hurdles; and William, a member of the team that broke the record at the Atlanta relays last year. Robinson and Andrews will be out for the 880, with the former stepping the 440 also. In the distances Virginia will have McIlhenny, Watson, Cannady, Gilbert, Hutcheson, and Gilmer. The discus, javelin, and shotput will find the LeBauer brothers, Flippin, Groselose, and Deane competing, while Green, Weeden, Goldsmith, and Morris will go out for the jumps."

Tar Heel trackmen should take a look at that write-up and begin training. Look over the list of stars and consider what each has done. Henry Cumming defeated Jackson Scholz, Olympic champion sprinter, at both 100 and 200 meters this summer. Cumming's time equalled the Olympic record. Flippin does the high hurdles in 15 seconds flat and the low barriers in under 25 seconds. He also broad jumps 22 feet 6 inches and tosses the javelin over 170 feet.

The LeBauer brothers are weight men to be reckoned with, for Maurice has thrown the shot over 45 feet, and his brother does almost as well. To reinforce these veterans there is a host of sophomore material. Robinson, sophomore middle distance star, ran the quarter last season in 50 seconds flat and the half in less than two minutes.

These are only a few of the stars who will be met by the Tar Heels next spring, for Duke, Washington

LAW CLUBS BEGIN WORK UNDER NEW PLAN; LESS WORK

Students Will Conduct "Court Week;" First Year Men Begin Work on Briefs.

One of the major activities of the Law School Association for this year has been successfully launched in the opening of the work of the Law Clubs under a strikingly different plan than heretofore. In the past the Clubs have held regular meetings while this year these meetings have been consolidated into six days of work, familiarly known as Court Week. During this time the argument of the cases will be held before members of the third year class, one member presiding as Chief Justice, assisted by two Justices. The December Court Week will be presided over by faculty members.

The Cases as assigned were formulated by the faculty of the Law School in such a manner as to coordinate with and to key into the work of the various courses. Assignment of cases has been made with this in view, thus rather than adding work to students, it has relieved them of much outside work and has become an assistance to them in the solving of problems that arise in regular work. One of the notable features of this year's Law Club work is that every member of the first year class has joined one or the other of the Clubs.

The first Court Week is set for the first of November, the second to come early in December, with others to follow in the spring. The final arguments, or winners of cases, during these Court Weeks, will terminate in the spring before Federal Court Justices.

Cases for the first Court have been assigned to the members of the First Year Class and the young attorneys are at work on their briefs. These are prepared on the "Appellate Court" plan, since all Law Club Cases are "on appeal." Herein the student is taught the practical side of brief making and how the problems that arise are solved in a workable way. By this Law Club Work, it is the Association's hope to teach the student the art of thinking on his feet, and of clearly expressing this thought in an effective way. This work promises to be the spice of the year's study.

The Law Clubs are an activity sponsored by the Law School Association of which C. W. Hall is president. The Clubs have elected presidents as follows: Battle, G. M. Hood; Manning, M. P. Meyers; McRea, F. P. Parker, Jr.; McGee, John Wigg. These men, together with the presidents of the three classes, Frazier Glenn, First Year Class; J. N. Smith, Second Year Class; and C. W. Hall, president of the Third Year Class, constitute the directors of the Association and take their place automatically as they are chosen for their respective offices.

Prominent Winston-Salem Physician and University Alumnus to Deliver Address.

Procession Composed of Faculty Members in Academic Costumes, Trustees, Speakers, Alumni, Town Officials and Cheerios to March.

Tomorrow class work will be suspended from 10:30 to 2:00 while the 134th anniversary of the founding of the University is celebrated, according to the program issued yesterday by R. B. House, Executive Secretary of the University.

Dr. Frederick M. Hanes, prominent Winston-Salem physician, will deliver the University Day address in Memorial Hall, following a memorial service to the University's dead. Dr. Hanes is well known throughout the state, and occupies a position of eminence in his profession. He is a graduate of the University, receiving an A. B. degree here prior to taking graduate work at Johns Hopkins and Harvard.

The program will occupy an hour and a half, beginning at 10:30 a. m. There will be a general gathering of the students around the Old Well as soon as the bell rings. All Cheerios will be excused from class at 10:00 o'clock in order that they may change to their uniforms and form lines on each side of Cameron Avenue between South Building and Memorial Hall. A procession composed of faculty members in academic costumes, trustees, speakers, alumni, and town officials will form between the Playmaker Theatre and South Building, marching between the Cheerios to Memorial Hall at 10:30. Dr. C. S. Mangum is the faculty marshal.

The University Day celebration is always one of the most significant and impressive of the various events in which the student body and faculty take part during the scholastic year. R. B. House, who is in charge of arrangements for the celebration, stated yesterday that every effort is being made to bring out a full University convocation. Since this is the first opportunity that new men have of seeing the full and formal manifestation of University life, Secretary House urged that the freshmen, as well as upperclassmen, take part in the celebration by attending the exercises in Memorial Hall.

Students will not march into Memorial Hall in procession, as in former University Day celebrations.

Freshman Harriers Training for Meet

Annual Cake Race October 25 Will Determine Team; Keen Rivalry.

Freshman cross country practice will get under way in earnest this week. All men who have been excused from gymnasium class must report to Coach Dale Ranson at the stadium this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

All men not present or not selected to continue practice will be re-assigned to gymnasium classes. So far, 50 men have been excused from gymnasium to train for the freshman cross country team.

The first meet and final tryout for the cross country team will be the Cake Race, October 25. The team for the dual meet with N. C. State October 29 will be selected then. Other meets scheduled are the dual meet with Duke, November 19 and the State championship meet, December 3. There is a possibility of additional ones to be arranged later.

Coach Ranson thinks that the following men show some promise as harriers: Arnold, Baucom, Caton, Coleman, Deroset, Ferrell, Fisher, May, Morgan, Neely, Newman, Sachs, Stokes, Tilley, and Worth.

Neophytes Will Be Initiated Tonight

All old members of the Di Senate are urged by officials to attend the meeting tonight for the initiation of new members.
