PARAGRAPHS

Among other things we want: CAROLINA BEAT STATE!

Seeing as how our favorite leading southern college tri-weekly sets down a University professor as being "one of the leading socialists in the state," we suppose sociologists are entitled to rate if they want to.

"Tar Heel Point for State Game," headlines our favorite tri-weekly, which makes us hope that they don't set for the game.

After a careful search of sorority pledge lists, we fail to find any names other than those of the fairer sex.

"The messages of Dr. Henry Crane, Dr. George Stewart and other prominent speakers were replete with interest and freighted with sagacity." Make your own comment.

Woman elopes with man whom her daughter refused to marry, states a press dispatch. Another case of where friendly interest of the parent ruined a good romance.

It is reported that Carolina will have a motorcycle club that will help the cyclist solve many "perplexing" problems. Yeh, but are they going to solve the motorcycle problem?

When the Duke professor discovers the accurate amount of wealth taken from the mines of Mexico and Peru in the great era of exploration (he's trying to do it), we wish he'd come over here and tell us just when Graham Memorial will be completed.

WILL TAKE MORE THAN TEAM TO WIN GAME

When Carolina faces State on Riddick field this afternoon in Raleigh, there will probably be two thousand Tar Heel students on hand to witness the game. Arrangements for a special train, busses and other means of conveyances indicate that this annual game with the West Raleigh institution will be attended in larger numbers than any of the preceding ones.

The game is anybody's. By that we mean that Carolina has as much chance to win as State. With the Georgia Tech game still fresh in the memory of the team and the student body there is a feeling of cockiness among some of the Carolina supporters. We have a football team; we know we have one. But it is going to take fighting and more fighting on the part of the team. And the student body? Carolina students will have their part in this game just as much as the eleven men on the field.

With the Cheerios on hand to display their usual excellent cheering, organized cheering by this small group will not be lacking. But is this group enough? Hardly. What Carolina needs this afternoon is, not 250 cheerers, but 2,500! From the time the game starts until it ends there should be two thousand and five hundred students cheering the Tar Heels to victory.

Give the team the backing it deserves today, and it will do its part.

CLIPPED THE ALUMNI NUISANCE

Last Saturday the University of Michigan beat Ohio State by a score of 21 to 0. And now, according to the despatches from Columbus, Ohio State alumni are in an ugly temper and want to know the reason why. There have been charges and countercharges. The President of the Varsity "O" Alumni Association has resigned. At a meeting of alumni held in Cleveland the suggestion was made that "two-thirds of the players who participated in the Michigan game turn in their suits and that Ohio State get a new head coach or that a decided stake-up of the team be instituted."

Thus we get a glimpse of what so many experts have told us is really the matter with football. It is the alumni, they say, who put the pressure on a university authorities for bigger and better football teams. It would be possible, of course, for the authorities to say them nay, to turn a cold shoulder to such goings-on as we now behold at Ohio State. But while it would be possible, it would also be most difficult, and costly in a way that many outsiders do not suspect. For it is the alumni who furnish most of the contributions to the endowment fund, and if they are not kept in good humor the goal of $1,000,000 may not be reached in time for an announcement at the next commencement. The best way to keep them in good humor is to have a winning football team. Thus we have a vicious circle. The university, to get funds, must have bigger and better football teams; and the alumni, in return for the funds, demand still bigger and better football teams.

The thing that seems to have been overlooked in all this is that no matter how good the football team, no matter how big the stadium, somebody must lose. If alumni could get this simple proposition through their heads and cease to throw the whole university into a turmoil every time a game is dropped, things might ease off a bit. And if they could get through their heads that football is a very small part of the real work of their schools, university life might take on a pleasanter tone.—New York World.

IRON OUT THE CONFLICTS

Saturday, sport lovers in this section of the State are going to be torn between conflicting desires. Some are going to stake their chances on seeing the game between the University of North Carolina and State College in Raleigh. Others are going to pick the game between Wake Forest and Duke University at Wake Forest. The alumni of these four institutions will hardly be troubled. They will go out to see their favorite colors led into gridiron battle, and yet they will feel a sense of loss in that they will be deprived of a thrill in the game they necessarily must miss.

But there are casual followers of the sport who are sorely distressed. It is not seemly that here in Wake county two first class clashes should be staged on the same day. There isn't anything to be done about it now; no use to engage in criticisms or recommendations. The schedules have been prepared. The advertising has been done. The whistles are ready to signal the kick off.

At least, it may be determined by all the major institutions that next year in the preparation of schedules such conflicts are avoided. There is after all one feature of this present situation out of which those who love football for football's sake may draw a certain compensatory satisfaction. College athletic authorities did not have their whole concern centered in the gate receipts when the schedules were adopted.—News and Observer.

Prospects Bright For Wrestling Say Coach and Captain

Prospects for the Varsity and Freshman wrestling squads are assuming a more rosy tint than they have exhibited at the University heretofore, according to J. F. Mott, captain of last year's grappling squad, who is assisting Coach Quinlan in the pre-season workouts.

Between sixty and seventy-five men have reported to Mott, and about forty of them are working out every afternoon at the Tin Can. The practices begin at 3:45 and last until 5:45 in order to give men who take gym a forty-five minute workout every afternoon.

Coach Quinlan stated yesterday that the squad was showing up very well, and that the outlook for a good team this year was bright. He urged that all men who have been going out or who are interested in wrestling be out Monday afternoon not later than four o'clock, when all "holds" that have been given this year are to be explained.

Educational Film Largely Attended

Interesting Moving Pictures Being Shown at Venable Hall.

Five reels of educational motion pictures were shown free of charge to Carolina students and to the town-folk in the main auditorium of Venable Hall, Wednesday night. "The Story of Fireclay Refractories," in 4 reels, and "Pillows of Salt," a one-reeler, were shown to a good sized audience.

"The Story of Fireclay Refractories," a United States Bureau of Mines production, dealt with the process of manufacturing bricks, pottery, terracotta, and other necessities made from clay. The complete process, digging, mining, assorting, crushing, molding, pressing, and the relationship of clay to the manufacture of iron and steel was explained.

In "Pillows of Salt," a General Electric Company production, the methods used in mining, drilling, and blasting salt was shown. The crude salt was then raised to the top of the mine where it was crushed, put in storage, and then bagged ready for market. The process of making fine salt from coarse salt by evaporation was also presented.

Dr. Vanderbilt, professor of chemistry, states that an Acme Portable projecting machine was purchased recently at a cost of $350, and that the films which are being shown each week are secured at a very small charge through the courtesy of the General Electric Company, the United States Bureau of Mines, the Y. M. C. A., and various industrial corporations.

In spite of the handicaps faced in attempting to grope in utter darkness from the Administration building to Venable Hall, and the danger of injuries by stumbling over old machinery, junk and various other objects there was a crowd of about 150 present Wednesday.

These weekly educational pictures, shown under the auspices of the Chemistry department, are for the public in general, but especially for commerce, engineering, sociology, and chemistry students.

Russell Addresses Religious Council

Duke Professor Presents Outstanding Problems to Students.

Dr. Elbert Russell of the Duke School of Religion was the principal speaker at the initial meeting of the Religious Worker's council held Thursday night at the local Methodist church.

Dr. Russell spoke of the problems of the student attitude towards religion. There are three outstanding aggravations to the problems which confront the students in his attitude towards religion, according to the speaker. Means must be found of dealing with the student who tries to revise his code of morals. Every one has his separate code, and allowances must be made for them. The problem has also been aggravated by the scientific temper which has recently developed. The system of theology has been brought into contact with the scientific trend and a struggle has inevitably ensued.

The third aggravation of the problem, declared Dr. Russell, is the aftermath of war. The Civil War tore men out of the ruts and out of the old associations, and set them in a new atmosphere, confronting new propositions and affairs. The speaker closed his talk by declaring that a large portion of the students of religion are interested in and are seeking the truth. To them truth is more important than the history and the theory.

Grady Leonard, temporary chairman of the meeting, took charge of the election of officers for the coming term. W. E. Crissman, secretary of Freshman work of the Y.M.C.A., was elected President, and J. G. Phillips was chosen secretary. A nominating committee was appointed to have charge of the remaining elections. There were also reports of the Sunday School Committee and the Minister's Committee.

The group, composed of local ministers, Sunday School leaders, Y. M. C. A. officers, and religious workers, decided to accept the invitation of Dr. Moss to hold the next meeting of the assembly at the Presbyterian church. The time of this meeting will be announced later.

W. R. Earle, M. S. 1924, has been appointed to a National Research Fellowship in the medical sciences. The publication in Science of his appointment followed close upon the announcement of his marriage.

ENGINEERS HEAR WADDELL SPEAK

Asheville Engineer Warns Seniors to Stay in South America if They Go.

Charles E. Waddell, consulting engineer from Asheville on visit to the School of Engineering here, warned the Senior Civil Engineers in a talk Thursday that if any of them expected to go to South America to make a fortune, they should resolve to make a life time proposition of it and not just a sight-seeing vacation for two or three years.

Mr. Waddell, who is the father of Charles Waddell, captain of the varsity tennis team, gave the engineers a very realistic picture of this southern continent. Mr. Waddell in his talk told of his recent trip to South America and especially to the republic of Colombia. Landing at the port of Buenaventura, he traveled some six hundred miles by aeroplane, thence proceeded on boat, and finally crossed the Andes Mountains by pack train, going into Chilli. Mr. Waddell, who was there in connection with the hydro-electric development described the people, their manner of living, the wonderful undeveloped natural resources, and the present progress there.

If you are planning to go to South America, go by all means; she holds a wonderful future for you. But go with the expectations of severing all relations with this country he warned. To spend just two or three years there would be a mere waste of time, for civil engineers here would be getting ahead of the men there. "If you go to South America, go to stay," the speaker counseled.

Baptist Students in Raleigh for Meeting

Approximately 10 students from the University are attending the North Carolina State Baptist Student Conference which began session yesterday at State College, Raleigh. The convention held its initial meeting in Pullen Hall at 7:00 p. m.

The purpose of this assembly is fourfold. Its aims are as follows: to make the southwide keynote, "Christ Adequate," individual and personal; to make the conference the great spiritual event of the year; to have some of the South's ablest speakers, both students and adults, on these programs; to stir the hearts of the Baptist students to a greater zeal for soul-winning, Bible study, and Church Loyalty.

All of the meetings, with the exception of one or two, are being held in Pullen Hall, on the State campus. Immediately after the dismissal of the last session, a Hallowe'en Party will be given at Meredith College for the group.

NEW EATING JOINT TO BE OPENED HERE

A new cafe called "The Little Gem" will be opened soon in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Sorrell's jewelry store.

D. R. Jenkins, the proprietor, has had long experience in the restaurant business, and has installed a complete new equipment for his opening in Chapel Hill.

This includes the latest designs in electric waffle irons, toasters, hot-plates, and Kelvinator refrigeration, and in addition, cushion seats at the luncheon counter. This gives the place a coffee shop appearance and should add considerably to the "joy of eating."

The cook stove in the kitchen has an extra large oven to permit the baking of fine pastries.

DISCUSSION GROUPS TO START MONDAY

The discussion groups which have been conducted during the past few years by the Y. M. C. A. will be revived Monday night at 9 o'clock, it was announced late yesterday.

A new plan in the selection of questions for the discussion will be followed this year. The students in the dormitories will do their own selecting, with suggestions from the leader, it is stated.

Following the usual custom, a banquet will be given by the Y. M. C. A. to the group having the best average attendance. Each group will meet once each week for the coming five weeks.

The "Y" cabinet men in charge of this work are J. O. Allison, J. E. Marshall, J. A. Lang, J. B. Cohnell, J. W. Williams, Guy Hill, Calvin Graves and G. J. Anderson.
