

CELLAR

SEEPINGS

BY ANDY ANDERSON

Seeing as how everybody has made varied and unsensational remarks about Thanksgiving, all we can say is that we're thankful that it's over.

All we have as a souvenir of the holidays is a few memories and a headache.

At present it seems as if the headache is going to stay longer than the memories.

And coupled with all this, there were so many pretty and tropical girls up for the dances.

And thereby hangs the tale.

We noticed quite a few of the Playmakers roving over the campus during the week-end. Evidently they gathering material for their forthcoming production.

One gentleman seemed to have gathered about all the local color that he needed.

But the dramatic organization certainly did themselves brown on their Northern trip. This will probably eliminate any one from browning them on the campus.

Garter snakes and cradle snatchers should have a big time Saturday. We hear that Greensboro and Wilmington high schools have some pretty hot sports in attendance.

Addresses and names are for sale by the columnist at one buck apiece.

Additional information will be given for cash.

No more than one University organization gets in from a trip than another goes out. The Playmakers are back and the glee club has hiked off. This ought to be called the Floating University.

The editor of this sheet says "speak up or forever hold your peace." Well, now, that's asking too much of some people.

And speaking of clubs on the campus, there ought to be an organization of some kind for columnists. But we hope this does not come to pass for if it did, the Spearman would certainly get himself some kind of a managing editor's job.

And now that real football and tag football is over, the professors will probably start their little games of matching themselves to see who they are going to pass.

From the news in this paper, it looks as if there might be another civil war.

We suspect that someone has gratuitously insulted someone.

But there's been so long since any carols of peace, we suggest that some co-ed sing out lustily. And then if she did, Keith would probably book her for about 50 weeks giving lectures about "There Ain't Gonna Be any War Anymore, Just Let Us Sing About Peace."

And we were astonished the other day when someone told us that Greensboro was to play Wilmington High a game of football. We thought that athletes had stopped drinking. J. M.

The Kalif has exonerated himself. The only thing left now is for the reviewer to apologize to somebody.

Since it's nearing exams, we notice that a few of the boys are not using the abbreviation for Christmas. They don't like that X in the word.

And for a lot of students exams are Xams.

At mid-terms an X means no check but a check certain meant an "X."

Old Boys' Pranks Queerer Than Those Pulled Now

(Continued from first page) at night at a very late hour and take bee-hives from the inhabitants of the village and the country around. They have found safety in the caution they practice.

"H. B. was expelled for insolence to the President while suppressing a disturbance, firing pistols in the buildings and breaking a window glass over the head of Tutor Clopton while holding a recitation. R. S. was expelled for firing pistols and for throwing stones at the faculty. J. R. received a forced vacation of six months for firing a pistol in college and helping block up the Chapel door.

"Other entries are: A calf was placed in the Chapel and the benches pushed up against the pulpit. A fence was built around the door of one Nutting and across the road. Major Henderson was stoned, one of his buildings overturned, his gate taken from its hinges and placed upon the pulpit.

"One Sunday night a bee-hive was stolen from John Taylor, carried to the Preparatory School-house, the honey taken out and daubed on the floor. The hive was left in the woods.

"A Monsieur Mollie awoke one morning to find a great number of toad-frogs and terrapins in his room and on going to bed the following night, there was a bee-hive in his room and a great quantity of hair in his bed."

"One boy was called up for handing in seven written excuses for only four absences. On being informed of the fact, he said, 'All right, sir, just let the other three go on the absences for next week.'

"At one time there was a doctor on the campus by the name of Diabolus. He was called Bolus, for short, by the students. The doctor got wind of a project to steal his turkeys which he was fattening for some festival. Hiding near the coop, he heard one fowl searcher stealthily creep therein and seizing the gobble remark to his confederates. 'Here, boys,' is old Bolus.' Then grabbing a hen, 'And here is Mrs. Bolus.' The Doctor then rushed forward so rapidly that in order to escape, the turkeys were dropped. He had them killed next day and invited the marauders and others to the dining at which they were served. After carving he looked significantly at the ringleader and asked, 'Mr. _____, will you have a slice of old Bolus, or do you prefer a slice of Mrs. Bolus.' He then gave the same option to the other delinquents successively."

And speaking of clubs on the campus, there ought to be an organization of some kind for columnists. But we hope this does not come to pass for if it did, the Spearman would certainly get himself some kind of a managing editor's job.

CAROLINA ON SCREEN

Pictures of the Carolina-Virginia game and the dedication of Kenan Memorial Stadium on Thanksgiving day were taken by both Pathe and Paramount News. These pictures will be sent all over the United States in this week's releases of these two news reels.

They were both shown in Chapel Hill at the Carolina Theatre Monday and Tuesday, and at the same time they were shown all over North Carolina at the various theatres. They will later reach other theatres which receive these services.

The views taken show good scenes of the entire stadium and the teams in action. Mr. Kenan, donor of the stadium, and Governors McLean and Byrd of North Carolina and Virginia are also given prominent places.

"MOON OF ISRAEL"

"Moon of Israel," one of the mightiest pictures in motion picture history, will be shown at the Carolina Theatre Monday.

The film has some of the most tremendous scenes that have ever been screened and the sets alone cost more than half a million dollars. All the tricks of camera and lighting, together with more than thirty thousand extras, a thousand metal chariots, and almost three thousand horsemen, make the film a thrilling spectacle, and one that will linger in the minds of audiences for a long while.

The film is taken from the famous novel by Sir H. Rider Haggard and was directed by Michael Curtiz under the supervision of the author. The novel is one of the best known of Sir Rider Haggard's works and the picture more than does justice to the story. The theme of the picture is the romance between an Israelite slave girl and the Prince of Egypt. A romance that begins beneath the burning suns of the Egyptian desert and carries the little slave girl to the throne of the greatest kingdom in the world.

The cast includes Maria Corda, Arlette Marchal, Adelqui Millar, Ferdinand Onna and Henry Mar. The story was adapted for the screen by Ladislaus Vajda, the great Hungarian playwright, and the titles are by the author himself.

AT THE PICKWICK

For the first time in his screen career, Ramon Novarro, through whose veins runs the blood of the Spanish conquistadores, is seen in a role which might have been enacted in real life by any one of a hundred of his ancestors.

In "The Road to Romance," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor picture now being shown at the Pickwick Theatre, Novarro has the role of the young Spanish hero of Joseph Conrad's celebrated novel, who comes to the New World in search of adventure.

The featured feminine role is played by Marceline Day and the supporting cast includes Roy D'Arcy, Marc McDermott, Otto Matieson, Cesare Gravina, Bobby Mack, Jules Cowles and others. The picture was directed by John S. Robertson.

Field Day Will Be Held Friday

(Continued from page one) Fort, and Smith, they should enjoy a fairly successful season. But the team will be notably under par in several events, and it is with the purpose in view of uncovering latent talent in these divisions that the field day tomorrow is planned.

Furthermore, this year will mark the passing of several stars that have been instrumental in keeping Carolina track teams on their present high plane. Captain Hoyt Pritchett, holder of the southern two mile record, and Galen Elliott, cross-country captain, southern record holder in the mile, and All-American miler in 1926, will both carry U. N. C. colors to the post for the last time this spring. Distance men can not be developed over-night, and the coaches are on the watch now for talent with which to replace these stars and others who will be lost after this year.

Work on the New West

The reconstruction of the interior of the New West building proceeds steadily. Completion is scheduled for March. The outer walls remain as they are. The psychology department is to be quartered in the New West.

Religion School Is Varied Group

(Continued from page one) 8 graduate students, and 5 townspeople. Of this number 21 are men and 10 are women. A denominational examination shows that 6 students are Baptist, 3 Presbyterian, 3 Christian, 13 Methodist, and 4 Episcopalian.

Inquiry into the parental vocations of these students indicates that the fathers of the men and women are farmers, ministers, business men, realtors, engineers, textile workers, contractors, lawyers, janitors, bookkeepers, and physicians. The students themselves in noting their preferences for vocations gave the following choices: law, ministry, medicine, business, teaching, social service, and journalism.

The 7 Wonders of the World

THE Seven Wonders of the Ancient World were single monuments, glorifying one individual or at most a small group of people. Masterpieces of their kind, they yet had no influence on the life of the race which created them, and they benefited nobody.

There lies the difference between the old and the new civilization. The Seven Wonders of the Modern World are the inventions which have been of the greatest benefit to the greatest number of people. What are they? Although lists would differ radically, one item would be common to all. The Otis Elevator would surely be included as one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World on all lists whether emanating from Greece, Egypt or Turkey; Lima in Peru, Shanghai in China or Hollywood, California. It is an international convenience, dedicated not to one person or even to one race, but to the comfort of any people whose buildings aspire towards the sky.
