

Carolina Students May Get into Real Movies of Campus Life

College Humor Magazine May Send Producing Staff Here to Make Episode in Series of College Humor Pictures.

An announcement has been sent to Andy Anderson, editor of the Buccaneer to the effect that College Humor Magazine is making a series of motion pictures over the country with the scenes laid on various university campuses in which pictures the producers intend to use "familiar characters, effective and authentic, and the different college songs and traditions." Four schools were visited before Christmas and the producing unit will remain in the East for four months, visiting all the leading universities.

Evidently, this includes the University of North Carolina but as the local campus was omitted in the recent search for movie actors, there has been some doubt as to the possibility of this campus being used for any of the episodes that will make up the serial. Hence, the editor of the Buccaneer has written to J. M. Lansing, publisher of College Humor, to ask if the University of North Carolina is on the list of the colleges to be visited. It is Anderson's intention, if by chance the University has not been included, to exert every effort to bring the College Humor producing unit to the local campus.

This will, no doubt, interest the students on the campus who have seen the various movies, shown at local theatres, which purport to be true imitations of college life. Many students who have seen such pictures pronounce them "bosh," "tommyrot," and "adulterations."

The report sent out reads "a petition asking for true dramatization of the American colleges or no pictures at all was signed by two hundred and fifty sophomores at Princeton last month. The college student is tired of being represented as wearing gaudy sweaters and bell-bottomed trousers, decorating his room with pennants, entertaining chorus girls at proms and leading, in general, the life of a John Held, Jr., drawing."

H. N. Swanson, editor of College Humor, says: "The objection by students of Princeton and of other colleges is justified. Film companies have been fabricating tales supposedly made on the campuses of universities but actually made on their own sets, using extra men and women who do not resemble college boys and girls. We are making a sincere attempt to do the thing differently; our aim is to give an authentic picture of the American college as well as to present a film with high entertainment value."

Following this protest, or protests, about the pictures which appear to have become nationally unpopular with college students, College Humor has completed plans to release independently during this season twenty-six short reels entitled "College Humor" which will present true college types, actual campus scenes, the sports and pleasures and fun in which college people really participate."

The names of the four schools that have been visited before Christmas have not been learned and no information has been received as to what Eastern or Southern colleges are to be included in the itinerary of the College Humor production staff. Various opinions on the campus are passive or in favor of the idea.

quest, may contribute to the twentieth century toward the evaluation and the expression of its own, both individual and social ideals. The course dealing with Jesus will be directed toward a more intimate and adequate understanding of him as the founder of Christianity, considering him in the historically verifiable aspects of his life, in order to an appreciation of his influence in human experience and progress. The Tuesday evening course aims at an enhanced appreciation of Christianity as a social and religious force, through a freshened acquaintance with its leaders in the century after Jesus and their work, and especially through a new understanding of Paul the Apostle, and a higher regard for him as an interpreter of Jesus and as the most influential factor in the early advancement of the Christian movement. The course in the Prophets has as its objective a clearer apprehension of the meaning of religion in its relation to life, through a more vital acquaintance with ancient Israel's moral pioneers in the era of her greatest spiritual productivity.

The books in the library of the School of Religion were installed in the shelves during the holidays and are now in use. The following gifts were made to the library in the past three weeks: from Mr. D. S. Long of Chapel Hill, the print of Hofmann's "Christ at Twelve" which hangs over the book-shelves; from Miss Nora Carpenter, graduate student in the University, and from Mr. C. Excell Rozzelle, pastor of the Methodist Church in Chapel Hill, valuable books.

The office and the class-room of the School of Religion is on the second floor of the Methodist Church. Those desiring to reach Mr. Workman by phone may call 4806 for the Methodist Church or 3961 for his home.

Alumni of the University of Michigan have collected $1,000,000 for the erection of a new woman's building at the university, ground for which was broken recently by the first full-time woman professor on the faculty.

Scholarships for study abroad to the four students having the best records in secondary schools of Costa Rica will be given by the board of directors of secondary education. The scholarships provide $60 a month each and $100 for tuition fees. Beneficiaries are expected to return to Costa Rica to teach in secondary schools.

Publications presenting the work of parent-teacher associations are issued regularly in 39 states. Four of the publications are issued by State colleges or universities, one by a State vocational board, and in two States the State educational journal is used as the medium for publicity. The California bulletin carries news from Hawaii.
