In the beginning, teams were entered by invitation and, it seems to me, there is some slight moral obligation to the fulfillment of an accepted invitation. The Intramural officials accept all entrants in good faith and with no other thought than that the entrant is in earnest in entering, and means to put a team on the field for every scheduled game. Again, it is not fair for one aggregation to put in appearance, in good faith, for a game and then for the other squad not to come. This is certainly a black eye for the forfeiting units.
