Engineering School Will Hold Annual Open House

Experiments will be Run to Demonstrate Various Types of Work

WILL CONVENE ON MAY 11

Object of Open House is to Acquaint People Throughout the State With the Work Being Done by the Engineering School

The School of Engineering of the University is busy with preparations for an open house which is to be held on Friday, May 11, from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 at night. The chief purpose is to display through a number of interesting exhibits, the work being done in the different departments of the school.

In the laboratories a number of experiments will be run to demonstrate the various types of work done by the students in the course of their work.

The Departments of Mathematics and Physics, which are allied with the School of Engineering, will also have exhibits. One of the most interesting of the exhibits will be by the English Department of the School of Engineering which will put on display samples of the work done by their students, such as laboratory and inspection trip reports, technical papers, and business writing of the type required of the engineer.

The first open house was held last year. It drew visitors from all parts of the state and proved such a success that it was decided to hold another this spring. It is being put on by the students, with the sponsorship of the faculty. Visitors are promised a view of much new equipment that has been installed in the laboratories since last spring.

The object of the open house, says the announcement, "is to acquaint the people of the state with the Engineering School at the University. Very few people know that there is an exceedingly well-equipped and highly rated engineering school at the University, offering courses in civil, electrical, mechanical, sanitary, hydraulic, and chemical engineering."

The open house will start immediately after the Carolina-Virginia baseball game here on Friday, May 11. Special exhibits and contests have been arranged for the ladies.

Plans to Restore Battle Park Beauty

Scheme Is Under Way to Remove Sewage Disposal from the Gimghoul Section.

Plans are being made to move the University's sewage disposal plant from the Gimghoul section, and to institute a modern sewer system for the present tank. It is hoped that these efforts will restore the beauty of former days to Battle Park.

The present plan is to abandon both the disposal plant and the tank and to run an adequate pipe line down to the municipal plant to the east in the creek valley. It is estimated that the cost of the line will approximate $10,000. The University authorities have agreed to recommend to the trustees an appropriation of $2,000, which would represent the advantage which the University would gain from the abandonment of the plant. The village estimates that it would be justified in expending $6,000, while it has been proposed that the Gimghouls offer the remaining amount.

The tank was built formerly to serve about half a dozen houses, while at present there are seventeen houses in this colony. The present underground drainage system fails to meet the demands of the situation.

The Gimghouls made a gift of a large tract, forming part of Battle Park, to remain permanently as a wild woodland, and they are averse to having this marred.

If the scheme matures the loveliness of Battle Park, which occupies an important place in the history and traditions of the University, will be restored again.

President Chase, who is in Chicago this week on business, will leave Monday for Charleston, S. C., where he will deliver the commencement address at the College of Charleston on the following day, May 8.

Miss Mela Royal spent the week-end with her family in Goldsboro.

Bill Neal

After having taken over the business end of the Tar Heel at the beginning of this scholastic year, Bill Neal has maneuvered its finances exceedingly well. He does not relinquish his hold on this paper until the end of this year when he expects to graduate. The Tar Heel under the guidance of Mr. Neal has suffered much prosperity and when he leaves the entire staff will probably sing avid praises. He has been an excellent business manager says Jud Ashby.

Kilpatrick To Speak At Chapel Exercises

Professor William H. Kilpatrick, who is a teacher of Philosophy in Education at Columbia University, will speak in Memorial Hall at chapel period Friday morning, May 4.

In addition to his chapel talk, the only statement that will be addressed primarily to undergraduates here, he will deliver the Weil lectures scheduled for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Professor Kilpatrick is a graduate of Mercer College in Georgia, and at present is one of the most interesting lecturers at Columbia, where he has a class so large that he has to meet it in two sections in a theatre. In spite of the large size of this class, he conducts it according to the discussion method.

All undergraduates are cordially invited to attend chapel Friday morning—freshmen are required to attend—as Professor Kilpatrick will raise questions concerning the nature and values of college education as it is organized today.

Two Prizes Given Chapel Hill Folks

Two artists who sent pictures from Chapel Hill to the Kenilworth Exhibition in Asheville have received awards. William Steene and Mary de B. Graves get cups for oil portraits, and Mr. Steene gets a blue ribbon for a figure in oil. The Graves picture is entitled "Portrait of the Artist's Mother."

The Kenilworth Exhibition includes 600 pictures from 100 artists representing 12 states and three foreign countries. It was formally opened last Monday afternoon by Mrs. John Francis Amherst Cecil. Mrs. Peter Arrington, president of the North Carolina Art Society, was present. The assembling of the paintings was under the charge of Mrs. J. M. Chiles.

Freshman Friendship Council Issues Paper

The first edition of the X-Hi-Y was published this week by the freshman Y cabinet. The paper is only a small sheet but it carries Carolina news to the high schools throughout the state.

This issue carries articles on many phases of Carolina life. There are articles on the work of the Y cabinets, the University building program, athletics, elections, and many other happenings on the Hill.

The paper is a wonderful advertisement of the University, since it awakens interest in Carolina among the high school boys of the state. The freshman council intends to publish at least two more issues before the end of the quarter.

WEIL LECTURES START TONIGHT

Will be Given by Professor W. H. Kilpatrick of Columbia University

The annual Weil lectures will begin in Gerrard Hall tonight at 8:30 and will continue through Saturday night. Professor W. H. Kilpatrick of Columbia University is to deliver the addresses. The general theme is to be "Education and Citizenship in the Changing South." The topics for the three nights are: (1) "How the South Is Changing"; (2) "The Consequent Demands of Citizenship"; and (3) "The Education to Meet These Demands."

The Weil lectures were first delivered in 1914-15 by Hon. William Howard Taft, former president of the United States, and now Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. These lectures on American Citizenship were permanently established by the families of Solomon Weil and Henry Weil of Goldsboro, and have been given each spring since that time.

Professor Kilpatrick is in the department of education at Columbia University, New York. He has written several volumes on the science of teaching. The speaker is a Southerner by birth and a former member of the faculty of Mercer University.

Brockmann Spoke In Chapel Monday On Topic 'Surgery'

"Go slowly in deciding to become a surgeon" was the keynote in Mr. H. L. Brockmann's talk on "The Opportunities in Surgery" which was made in chapel Monday. Mr. Brockmann is a surgeon in the High Point Hospital and was making the sixteenth of a group of vocational lectures which are being given at the University. "There are many problems facing a young surgeon today," Mr. Brockmann stated, "and one of them is the oversupply of specialists. Locations are difficult to find. The fact that a town has good hospital facilities does not mean that it would be a good town for a young surgeon. Private hospitals usually serve the public well but they work a hardship on a young surgeon." Mr. Brockmann says that there is a growing demand for medical doctors, and he advises medical students to wait until their hospital internship before considering surgery as a profession.

"A doctor must give his life up to his work," said Mr. Brockmann. His family has to also adjust itself to his mode of living. "For this reason a doctor is very happy when he can get an afternoon or a day off with his family, and he usually takes more interest in his home life than the average man."

Philological Club Holds Last Meeting

The final meeting of the Philological Club for this year was held Tuesday evening at 7:30 p. m. in the Parish House of the Episcopal Church at which Mr. Leon Radoff presented a paper on the "Renaissance Attitude toward the Middle Ages."

Art Exhibit Closes

The circuit exhibit of the Southern States Art League in Person Hall proved a success. The exhibit was recently closed. Many students visited the hall, while a number of out-of-town people came to Chapel Hill to view the paintings and drawings.

The exhibit consisted of groups of paintings in oil, water colors, prints, and drawings. A sufficient amount was raised to defray the expenses of bringing it here, and the committee of arrangement extends its appreciation to those who contributed to the funds.

DIALECTIC MEN DEDICATE HALL

Solicitor W. B. Umstead, of Durham is Speaker of the Occasion

The Dialectic Senate, one of the two literary societies at the University, dedicated its new hall in the recently remodeled New West building here Tuesday night with Solicitor W. B. Umstead of Durham as the chief speaker. The ceremony was presided over by L. A. Crowell of Lincolnton, acting president. Taylor Bledsoe of Asheville introduced Mr. Umstead, who is a University alumnus and who was prominent in literary society work and other undergraduate activities during his undergraduate days.

"I would like to hold up before you three men who have had such a philosophy that they believed that to fail to serve was to waste life," the speaker said. "These men are the late Edward Kidder Graham, who was president of the University; Dr. Harry W. Chase, who is now president; and Prof. Frank Porter Graham, a member of the faculty. I wish to commend these men to you as worthy examples to be followed."

"President Graham had one of the finest analytical minds I have ever known, he was an idealist who could make his ideals materialize, and a man loved by all those who came in contact with him. Dr. Chase came into the presidency of this University at a time that would have been trying to any man. A man with less courage than his would not have tackled the job, and a man with less ability would have failed. Professor Graham is perhaps known by more University men today than any man in the state. By his personality and character he has enthused himself into the hearts of thousands who have been students here."

"There is something that these men have in common. That something is the fact that they have lived to serve others. Students have left here to forget everything they learned in the classroom but to remember a contact with one of these men."

Mr. Umstead also pointed out the part that a literary society may have in making a man a well rounded college product. "Whether talking to one man or to a multitude, the ability to think aloud means as much to day as it ever did," he said. "The time will never come when men will not be moved by a speaker who believes in a principle and who backs that belief with zeal, intellect, and the ability to speak."
