

Carolina Intelligentsia Wear Black Ties and Carry Huge Keys

Freshmen Seem to Be Disturbed By Sight of Absent-Minded Literati.

(By Tom Thumb)

A number of new students have been noticed staring wide-eyed and mouth agape at a group of Carolina students who stroll the campus in absent-minded fashion, cross streets unintelligently, wear black ties and carry huge glinting keys on their watch chains. Recently a youthful-looking, curly haired lad was heard to ask the question (pointing to one of the afore-described students) "what the hell is that?"

All new students entering the University are bound sooner or later to run across one of these odd looking chaps. And some are still wondering why a car or so doesn't run across them. These, freshmen, in the vernacular of the dean of the School of Liberal Arts, are Carolina's Self-Appointed Intelligentsia, or what you will. The absent-minded look on their faces has been acquired, so I am told, through years of strenuous practice; their manner of crossing streets comes quite natural; the black ties are a mark of distinction to their sect; and the huge keys were secured in various manners.

Most of the group write poetry or deep bits of philosophy, which, they are certain, will sooner or later be inculcated into the literature of the nation. They select, as the usual rule, the most strenuous courses offered at the University, then toil day and night over their work. Most of them, too smoke a distinctive brand of cigarette. Their humped shoulders have been acquired through months of staring at either the ground or their fingernails.

Few, almost none, of them go out for athletics; although a number engage in outside literary activities. Again, few of them wear yellow slickers (even though it is raining) but most of them wear various kinds of coats, and a few even carry umbrellas.

Another name often given to these aesthetically-inclined youths is that of "the Literati." Either name, however, seems to please them much, and, often, when they are addressed as such, a faint glimmer of a smile may be seen to sneak warily across their faces. Harmless, unsuspecting freshmen are frequently taken into the ranks of the brotherhood, adopt black tie, and spend the rest of their college careers endeavoring to acquire a huge key and the expressions of the group.

rushed or not. To a layman things may look calm on the Hill, but to the participants it is a time of war, rivalry, tension, and even treason and throat-cutting.

After sunset the battle rages hottest. From soda fountain to movies, and back to soda fountain runs the trail of the contenders and their meek bones of contention. In the genial sunshine of free drinks, shows, and fair words the ice of indecision and hesitation in any freshman's heart may be melted. Then, borne off to the respective frat house, he basks in the reflected glory of the noble Hellenic faces. The owners of these faces make careful attempts to put him at ease, then extol to him the virtues, traditions, might, and wondrous ties of good fellowship peculiar to their group. Finally, he is escorted to the door and turned loose in the gloomy night to give his harried brain a chance to function.

TOM YOUNG, LOCAL ATHLETE, MARRIES EDITH S. CUTTING

University Grid Star and Bride Will Study Here This Winter.

The marriage of Miss Edith Stanford Cutting and Thomas Bayard Young, Jr., of the University, which was solemnized last Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. K. E. Cutting, 1203 Spring street, Greensboro. Rev. Loy D. Thompson, pastor of the West Market Street Methodist church and a former pastor of the bride, officiated.

Only the immediate families of the contracting parties were in attendance. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion in nuptial colors of white and green. The living room, where the vows were taken, was lighted by the soft glow of cathedral candles on an improvised altar of palms, white dahlias and white gladioli. Tall pedestal baskets filled with a profusion of white flowers and tied with tulle marked the places for the bride and groom.

The bride and groom were unattended. Rev. Loy D. Thompson in uniting them in marriage used the impressive ring ceremony of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Attired in a modish fall creation of midnight blue the bride was very lovely. Her hat and shoes were blue with other accessories to harmonize. She wore a shoulder corsage of valley lilies showered with Butterfly roses.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Young left by motor for a brief bridal tour of western North Carolina. They will be at home at Chapel Hill, where both plan to study this winter at the University.

For the past year the bride has made her home with Mrs. K. E. Cutting and with an aunt, Mrs. C. D. Hunt of Lexington. She attended school at Catawba College, Salisbury; Lenoir Rhyne college, Hickory, and the University of North Carolina. For the last two years she has been a popular teacher in the schools of Rowan and Davidson counties. She is the third daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cutting, of Salisbury. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bayard Young, of Monroe, and a member of the senior class at the University. He is widely known for his prowess in athletics having been an outstanding member of the university's football and baseball teams for three years past, and having received all southern mention in both sports. He is a member of Delta Psi fraternity.

Student Directory To Be Published in Mimeographed Form

There will be no bound town edition of the directory this year as was published last year, according to a statement emanating from the Y. M. C. A. office yesterday. Mimeographed copies, however, will be placed in all dormitories, fraternity houses, and offices.

The mimeographed copies will be similar to the rush copies now posted in the Y. M. C. A., library, post office, and Western Union office. The directory this year is largely the work of Mrs. Hill, of the Y. M. C. A. office, and other members of the staff. It is expected that the directory will be ready for distribution by the latter part of next week.

OLD GOLD bats 1000% as Hornsby takes the Blindfold cigarette test

ROGERS HORNSBY... capable manager of the Boston Braves... captain of the 1927 New York Giants... manager of the 1926 St. Louis Cardinals, who won the World's Series.

"They say 'there's not a cough in a carload' of OLD GOLDS.

"But I can tell you there's a home-run hit in every cool mouthful.

"For no other cigarette, of the four leading brands in the blindfold test, could compare with OLD GOLDS for pure pleasure to taste, tongue and throat."

"VIRGIN LIPS"

Richard Alexander who portrays the rebel general in the Columbia production "Virgin Lips," at the Carolina Theatre today, found the path to success in motion pictures a rough road. Alexander, who is a native of Texas, commenced his historic career in the Dallas stock company. He had previously been employed as a bank clerk and life-guard.

When he decided to take up motion picture acting Alexander felt that his stock experience would pave the way to a rapid rise. Instead he experienced delay after delay. For weeks he went from studio to studio seeking work. Then followed tedious days as an extra player. It seemed as though directors would never discover his ability as an actor. But Alexander kept at it and the day came when he was given a small role. From this on his rise was steady. He has had important roles in "The Leopard Lady," "Annie Laurie," "The Trail of '98" and "The Godless Girl!"

Olive Borden has the stellar role in "Virgin Lips." John Boles in the character of an American Ace plays opposite her.

THURSDAY-FRIDAY—John Barrymore in "TEMPEST"

Mr. HORNSBY was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked... "Which one do you like best?"

What gives OLD GOLD this winning charm?

Here is the answer, in three words... heart-leaf tobacco. No coarse, heavy top-leaves of the tobacco plant... for they irritate the throat. No withered ground-leaves... for they are lacking in aroma. Only the cool and fragrant heart-leaves... golden ripe... can give Old Golds their honey-like smoothness. That's why you can tell them in the dark.
