PARAGRAPHS

Today's the day—for numerous things, but particularly for retrieving the football losses for the past few years.

With the present system of exchanging student passbooks for football tickets, it takes about as long to secure the ticket as it does to see the game.

This wild black bear out on the Durham highway might well be brought over to attend some of the season's games as a Carolina mascot. Today will tell whether such wildness and ferocity would be suitable.

Last night's reception and dance at the Woman's Building gave the new co-eds an excellent opportunity to be "the observed of all observers." Each new annual crop must bear inspection.

With the new degree of A. B. in music offered, maybe some of the boys who stay away from the campus so much with orchestras will be able to graduate.

Now that co-eds have been invited to join the debating squad, perhaps there will be an added rush of the male sex to that rather neglected phase of college activities.

THE LAST AND HIGHEST HURDLE

In the student's race along the college track for the prize of a diploma the three sets of exams each year might well be considered as hurdles which must necessarily be cleared before the end of the course is reached. And as each one is cleared, it lies in the past and rises not up again as another obstacle—such is the system of three courses per quarter to be taken, completed and then—forgot.

This new plan of comprehensive examinations which must be passed in the student's major field before a diploma is handed out represents one final hurdle, and at the same time one which is higher than all preceding ones and contains within itself the essence of them all.

It may indeed come as a sudden blow to the members of the present junior class, who no doubt have been thankfully thinking that "what's done is done." But it should be hailed as a progressive step along educational paths in that it sets up some comprehensive standards in addition to the choppy, piece-meal quarter system of work. Now the knowledge in any field studied in a single course cannot safely be relegated to the past but must be amalgamated with knowledge from other courses and stored up in preparation for a successful taking of the last and highest educational hurdle.

WELCOME—WARM OR SLIGHTLY COOLER

The day of the first big football game of the season is always a favorite occasion for the return of alumni to the campus whereupon they spent the four or more years of their college life. Likewise is it an occasion for which college editors inevitably prepare a warm editorial of welcome which may, perchance, come to the attention of some alumni who happen to pick up the college paper.

But why should the mere fact that a man has graduated from the University and comes back to see a football game entitle him to any hearty and wholesome greetings from the students through the columns of their newspaper? There is little virtue in that alone.

If the alumnus is one who has the interests of the University ever foremost in his mind and in his actions, if he is willing to fight for her out in the state, to defend her reputation against all maligners, and to help provide for her necessities at all times,—why then let him be welcomed by every student and with every possible token of respect and friendliness.

But if his sole thought of the University centers about a great spectacle of a football game, at which he may be entertained, if his interests in his Alma Mater goes no further than a desire to participate in the general celebration which surrounds a big athletic event, is he so worthy of a warm welcome?

CO-EDS RECEIVE AT SPENCER HALL

On Friday night from half past 8 to half past 9 o'clock, the Woman's Association of the University was at home to the new women students at a reception at Spencer Hall. The guests were received in the spacious living rooms, the charm of which was enhanced by lighted tapers blending in color with the profusion of autumn leaves. Those receiving were: Misses Myla Royall, Lida Ramsay, and Lois Warden and Mesdames Marvin Stacy and Irene Lee.

A clever arrangement of autumn leaves entwined with small vines made the punch bowl a much admired feature of the decorations. Mrs. Reece and Miss Mathilde Parlette were assisted by several of the girls in serving punch to the one hundred and fifty guests who called during the hour.

Most of the guests remained for dancing which began at half past nine and lasted until one o'clock, with the following serving as chaperones: Mesdames Collier Cobb, Charles Woolen, Fred Patterson, George Lawson, Robert Connor, Thomas Wilson, II, George Henry, A. W. Faulkner, A. S. Rose, W. S. Bernard, H. M. Wagstaff.

The Carolina Commodores played for the dancing.

HEEL HARRIERS BEGIN TRAINING

Cross Country Men to Attend Southern Meet.

The Tar Heel cross-country squad, Southern Conference Champions for the last two seasons, is back on the long training grind in preparation for one of the toughest schedules ever faced by the Carolina harriers. The schedule released today includes four dual meets, topped off by the State Intercollegiate and Southern Conference Meets.

The Tar Heel hill-and-dale outfit has not lost a dual meet in five years, and has a record of four consecutive state titles to add to the brace of Conference crowns won in 1926 and 1927. The squad that meets the coming season's opponents has a task ahead to uphold that brilliant record, and Coach Dale Ranson is getting away to an early start with his proteges.

Three men were lost from last year's Southern Champions, graduation taking Captain Elliott and Hoyt Pritchett, and Phil Gallagher failed to return to the University this fall. These men will be missed, but there are six lettermen back in togs as a nucleus for the new season. The veterans back include Captain Henderson, Fisher, Barkley, Brown, Cox and Wrenn. Henderson, Fisher and Barkley won second, third and sixth places in the Conference Meet last fall.

The varsity schedule announced today was as follows: V. P. I. at Chapel Hill October 20; N. C. State at Chapel Hill, October 27; Duke at Durham November 10; Southern Conference Meet at Atlanta November 24; Virginia at Charlottesville, Va. Thanksgiving Day; and the State Championship Meet place, undecided, December 8. The freshmen will meet the yearling teams of State, Duke and probably several high school clubs before the yearling state championship is decided.

KENAN HELPED BEAT W. F. 40-0

Donor of Stadium Played for Heels 35 Years Ago.

When the Tar Heels and Demon Deacons meet in Kenan Memorial Stadium here at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the memories of the older University alumni will harken back some 35 years to another Carolina-Wake Forest game in which William Rand Kenan, Jr., was a member of the victorious Carolina eleven.

The Tar Heels won that day of long ago by the overwhelming score of 40 to 0, using the wedge formations and close driving backfield maneuvers that were then the vogue, and young William Kenan was right in the thick of fight. It is a significant fact that tomorrow—more than a third of a century later—the two rival elevens should meet in a magnificent stadium given by one of the Tar Heel team of '93.

Kenan was not the only famous University alumnus who faced Wake Forest that year, for there were numerous others who have since made their mark in life. Perhaps Walter "Pete" Murphy, prominent Salisbury lawyer and law-maker, is the best known in this state.

Others on the first eleven in 1893 were Charles Baskerville, prominent chemist and teacher, now deceased; Harry W. Whedbee, Greenville lawyer; David A. Kirkpatrick, manufacturer of Greensboro; George R. Little, banker of Elizabeth City; William D. Merritt, lawyer of Roxboro; and Louis I. Guion, now a farmer near Lugoff, S. C.

Tomorrow another Tar Heel team—smarting under four successive defeats from Wake Forest—will inaugurate the first full season in the new Kenan Stadium. And the Tar Heels will be fighting for a victory as decisive, if not as overwhelming, as the one earned by Kenan and his mates of long ago.

ASHMORE SEEKS IVORY FOR TEAM

Baseball Practice to Begin Next Week; Pitchers Needed.

University baseball coaches have inaugurated a new plan in its scheme of pre-season training of aspirants for varsity positions. The purpose of Coach Ashmore in making this fall call for the baseball squad is to develop the pitching staff and some outfielders, and to improve the hitting ability of the team as a whole.

Heretofore, there has been indoor winter practice in baseball for the batteries. The rawness of winter weather on the Hill and a practice schedule which not infrequently conflicted with basketball, has warranted some change in preliminary training for the baseball squad. This necessity of a different practice season has been satisfied by the new plan for fall baseball.

The recently begun practice has its evident advantages over the former winter session. Besides providing excellent training for the pitchers, the fielders are given a chance to develop their judgment of fly balls and to improve their pegging ability. In addition to getting a "feel" for the ball, the players can also improve their usefulness with the bat. The pitchers and batters can now cooperate in developing the other opposition from the pitcher's plate and in the batter's box. With the advent of this profitable change in practice plan, the University should have developed an improved line-up when the season opens in the spring.

Among the lettermen who are out for the fall practice are: Satterfield, Lufty, Cox, Jessup, Burt, Ball, and Fulcher. Football is now claiming many of the outstanding prospects for next spring's baseball team, among whom are: Maus, Magner, Sapp, Farris, Shuler and Poard.

Epworth League To Discuss Issues

A free-for-all discussion on, "Essential Principles of Americanism", will take place in the Epworth League at the Methodist church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The object in view is to determine whether the American public in now faced with any moral and social issues of sufficient importance to demand drastic action by Christian people.

FORMER DIRECTOR ACTS IN PICTURE

He was born in Washington, D. C. where his parents were connected with diplomatic circles. He was educated in Georgetown University and, scoring a career in politics turned to the stage. His first part of importance on the stage was in George Broadhurst's "Rich Man, Poor Man." After seven years on the stage he joined Vitagraph and became definitely and for all time to come, identified with motion pictures.

Cameron directed Vitagraph pictures after ceasing to act in them, and presently went back to character acting in many Vitagraph, Lasky and Metro pictures. He has remained a free lance actor ever since. One of his most recent roles before that in "Three Ring Marriage" was in support of Ben Lyon in "For the Love of Mike."
