

Last Minute Passing Attack Staves Off Carolina Defeat At Hands of State Wolfpack

State Touchdown Comes as Result of Punt Blocked Behind Carolina Goal; Farris' Punting Big Feature of Rather Mediocre Game Played by Both Teams.

A whirlwind finish pulled by the Tar Heels staved off what seemed to be certain defeat over at State Saturday and enabled Carolina to tie the score and stay in the race for state honors. Beginning their final drive from their own fifteen yard line with only three minutes to play, the Tar Heels opened a passing attack which could not be denied and with the ball on the thirty yard line and only seventeen more seconds of play left Jimmy Maus shot a long pass to Mac Gray who had been put in the game in a desperate attempt to complete a long pass. This time Carolina was very fortunate or lucky or what ever you want to call it, for the heave cleared the heads of the Tech secondary defense and fell into the arms of Gray who stepped across the line for the tying touchdown. Maus then attempted to dropkick for the extra point but the State forward wall crashed through and smothered the kick before it even reached the line of scrimmage.

State's score came on a blocked punt by Jordan who rushed Farris and after blocking the kick fell on the ball behind the line. The score came immediately after one of the most spectacular plays of the game. A few minutes before the end of the first half Carolina attempted to complete a pass within their own forty yard line but Crum leaped into the air and turned the ball from its course into the arms of George Silver. With an open field before him and three men running interference, Silver stumbled twice and lost enough time to allow Erickson to down him from behind on the fifteen yard mark. Here the Tar Heels repulsed all of State's efforts and held for downs. After running one play Erickson decided to let Farris punt and it was on this play that the Wolfpack scored. The play came only a few seconds before the half ended.

The game was a seesaw affair with each team being in a hole part of the time and being in a scoring position part of the time only to see their touchdown hopes go flying. In the first quarter State got the jump on the Heels and kept them with their backs to the wall most of the time. After the kickoff had bounded over Ward's head and across the goal line, he ran it out to the nine yard mark. Farris kicked to his forty three yard line and State after being held by the Heels punted back to the four yard mark. Farris then booted the ball back to midfield. Here the Wolfpack began a drive towards the Tar Heel goal which was stopped only after a series of plays had put the ball on the seven yard line where a plunge for first down was short by a foot. A punting duel then began and Carolina forced State back to its own eleven yard line. Warren punted to midfield where Wyrick was downed. Ward gained three yards on an off tackle play and then lost eight on an attempted pass play which Jordan and Silver broke through to smear.

As the second quarter opened the Heels made their second first down of the day on a sixteen yard pass, Ward to Wyrick. State's defense stiffened and Farris punted over the goal line. After an exchange of punts Holt made a beautiful play in eluding Captain Warren and downing a punt on State's two yard line. Warren punted and Carolina failed by inches of making first down on the twenty yard mark. State opened up a strong attack and Adams broke away for a sixteen yard run. State ran off another first down but Outen fumbled and Presson recovered on Carolina's forty yard line. After another exchange of punts Magner made a twenty-two yard run, and Nash followed with a six yard drive. Here the pass was attempted which Silver intercepted and which later was the cause of the State touchdown.

Soon after the beginning of the second half the Heels opened up their passing attack and Nash and Magner worked the ball to State's three yard line where an off tackle drive by Nash failed by less than a foot of making first down. At this point the State line showed up better than at any other time during the fray. Warren punted and the Tar Heels began another drive from their thirty yard line. However Melton leaped high in the air to intercept a pass after Carolina had worked the ball to the eighteen yard mark. After Captain Warren had gained six yards on two line plunges he fumbled on the third try and Spaulding recovered for Carolina. The Heels lost seven yards on two line plays and then punted. State punted back and Magner made five yards off tackle as the period ended.

At the beginning of the final quarter State held for downs on their own twenty-five yard mark and then began a drive which carried them past the center of the field to the fifteen yard line where Fenner intercepted a pass. Sparky Adams did most of the gaining in this march. Jackson was put into the game at this point and he immediately made a run which gained the Heels thirty-six yards. A series of passes put the ball on the nineteen yard line where State again got possession of it after holding for downs. After an exchange of punts the Tar Heels began their final drive. Jackson, Maus and Fenner worked the ball down the field to the point from which Mac Gray received the pass from Maus and staved off what seemed to be a certain defeat.

Carolina had the edge in first downs, making thirteen to seven for State. Carolina also outgained the Wolfpack on the ground making 190 yards to State's 120. The Heels attempted twenty-eight passes of which thirteen were completed, three intercepted, and twelve incomplete. Out of seven attempts State completed three, had two intercepted, and two were incomplete. Farris' punting was outstanding and he averaged forty yards on each kick. Warren got a thirty-two yard average on his twelve punts. State had only one penalty, a five yard setback for being offside. The Heels were penalized a total of forty yards part of which came from being offside and the remainder of which came as the result of having a second incomplete pass within four downs. As these figures show, the game was exceptionally clean.

'BATTLE OF THE CAROLINAS' HERE NEXT SATURDAY

South Carolina Slated to Have Slight Edge on Tar Heels.

The annual "Battle of the Carolinas" is carded for Kenan Memorial Stadium here next Saturday afternoon with the Tar Heels renewing a quarter of a century of gridiron rivalry with the Gamecocks of the University of South Carolina.

The two teams first met on the gridiron back in 1903, and since that first engagement have battled it out sixteen times at almost annual intervals. Of the sixteen games on the books, the Tar Heels have won just an even dozen while losing two and tying a pair of tough contests.

History gives the Old North State the edge; for, in addition to the overwhelming margin of games won and lost, the Tar Heels have scored 236 points against 46 counted by their Palmetto State rivals. However, most of the South Carolina scoring has been done in recent years, and the game now ranks among the tough tilts on the North Carolina schedule each year.

It took the Gamecocks twenty-one years to win a game, and there were just two tie scraps in the meantime. The Tar Heels won the first five games by margins of from three to five touchdowns, with South Carolina registering her first score in the 27 to 6 game of 1810.

The first of two tied battles came in 1912 when each team pushed over one touchdown, but the Tar Heels won in 1813 and 1914, with the latter victory counting a 48 to 0 margin. It was the last meeting until after the World War.

Since the War North Carolina has won five, lost two and tied one game. Those figures show the series waxing warmer. The games themselves show the same tendency, and most of them have been close and hard-fought. Even the famous Tar Heels of 1922, undefeated winners of the South Atlantic title, barely nosed out the Gamecocks 10 to 7 in a game featured by Snipes' 67 yard run for South Carolina.

Last year the Gamecocks won 14 to 6 in Columbia, but the year before that Tom Young sprinted 70 yards with a fumble punt to give North Carolina an upset victory. Three years ago "Wild Bill" Dodderer recovered a blocked kick and ran 20 yards for a North Carolina touchdown and a 6 to 0 win.

BOXERS TO STAGE EXHIBITION FIGHT

Proceeds Will Go Toward Purchasing New Uniforms for Band.

It was announced by Charlie Brown, captain of the University boxing team, that there will be a boxing exhibition in the Tin Can Friday night for the benefit of the University band. A number of interesting events are on the evening's program, including a Battle Royal between two local negroes. The most promising members of this year's student team will also stage bouts to interest the spectators. The University band will play between acts, and an evening of real entertainment is promised all those who attend. The admission price will be 25 cents.

The purpose of the performance will be to raise money for the purchasing of uniforms for the band. So far, the student body has co-operated admirably in the way of contributing toward this worthy cause and several merchants have done their bit also. It is expected that enough money will be raised in time so that the uniforms may be secured for the band's use at the Thanksgiving game. This is the initial appearance of the University boxing team, and a large number of students are expected for the affair. A pep meeting will be held immediately after the program is over.

Miss Strobach Gives Program over WPTF

A special dramatic program was broadcasted by the University Extension Division over Station WPTF, Raleigh, the regular University Hour yesterday afternoon from 5 until 6 o'clock.

Miss Mettina L. Strobach, newly appointed State Representative of the Bureau of Community Drama of the Extension Division, and a talented actress and interpreter of dramatic literature, read Winifred Hawkrigge's one-act play, "The Florist Shop." Miss Strobach introduced the reading with a few remarks regarding the work of the drama bureau in the State.

Miss Strobach came to the University from Intermountain Union College at Helena, Montana, where she was in charge of dramatics, and organized the Intermountain Players, touring the State of Montana with them with notable success.

She is a graduate with a Master's Degree of the University of Washington, where she wrote "Pompos," a fantasy in verse, which was successfully produced and published in the volume of University of Washington plays. Miss Strobach has also had a good deal of experience on the lyceum platform as an interpreter of modern plays.

Now is the time to subscribe to the TAR HEEL.

Grid Dust from the Grid Pan

Eddie Zobel, star halfback of the University of South Carolina, will be closely watched when the Gamecocks tangle with the North Carolina eleven in Kenan Memorial Stadium at Chapel Hill next Saturday. Zobel was poison to Chicago, Virginia, and Maryland, but the Clemson Tigers stopped him. The Tar Heels may do the same.

Billy Laval, former coach of Furman's Purple Hurricanes, made quite a splash in the Southern Conference with his fast-moving South Carolina Gamecocks. Clemson jumped in and took the 'Cocks for a ride, and Coach Chuck Collins is grooming his Tar Heel eleven to do the same stunt when the two Carolinas hook up in Kenan Memorial Stadium next Saturday.

Billy Laval will take one of the season's most colorful teams to the Kenan Memorial Stadium at the University of North Carolina next Saturday when his South Carolina Gamecocks lock horns with the Tar Heels in the annual "Battle of the Carolinas." The Gamecocks attained national fame early in the season with a 6 to 0 upset win over the University of Chicago on the Maroon's home field.

Statistics of past games show that the University of North Carolina elevens have won an even dozen games from the Gamecocks of South Carolina since 1903. During the same time the Tar Heels have only lost only two games and tied a pair. In actual scoring the Tar Heels lead with 236 points against a scant 46 counted by the Palmetto State teams. They meet again next Saturday at Chapel Hill.

The annual gridiron "Battle of the Carolinas" has produced thrill after thrill in recent years as the Tar Heels and Gamecocks scrap for the football supremacy of the sister states. There have been several upsets, often caused by long runs for one team or the other. Snipes, star 'Cock halfback, broke away for 87 yards to score on North Carolina's undefeated South Atlantic Champions of 1922, and Tom Young added a 70 yard touchdown sprint two years ago to give North Carolina a 7 to 0 upset win.
