

FIVE UNBEATEN TEAMS IN S. I. C. FOOTBALL RACE

Carolina Has One More Conference Tilt; Davidson Game Did Not Alter Heel Standing.

Five unbeaten conference football teams remain at the head of the list with Georgia Tech, Tennessee, and Florida as the most likely contenders for the S. I. C. title. These teams have each won five games and lost none. Va. Poly and L. S. U. are undefeated but have won only four and three games respectively.

The remaining three weeks promise to give some important tilts toward deciding the winner. Tennessee meets Kentucky this Saturday for the only game having direct bearing. Thanksgiving will see Tech playing Auburn and Florida clashing with Washington and Lee. Tech's other tilt is with Georgia on December 8. On that day out in Nashville the Vols and Gators will meet in a game that will probably decide either the title winner or the runner up.

Carolina's standing was not altered last Saturday since Davidson is out of the conference. The Tar Heels' only conference game is with Virginia up at Charlottesville.

Below are the standings of the twenty-two conference teams.

Team	Won	Lost	Tied

Deacons Continue Games With Duke

Rumor About Big Five Relations Being Severed Is False.

WAKE FOREST, Nov. 20.—Any one who has been laboring under doubts or fears as to whether Duke university and Wake Forest college would continue to meet on the grid-irons was completed yesterday, it was year contract for continuation of relations was completed yesterday, it was learned last night from reliable sources.

The new contract will mark a continuation of the home arrangement except that next season's meeting, due to come to Wake Forest under the present system of alternating, will be run off in Duke, and Wake Forest will get the 1930 clash for Gore Field. The Deacon folks will make that 1930 event with Duke the home-coming feature. Both games are carded for the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Wake Forest's decline in football strength in recent times set some folks to suggesting that Duke and Carolina drop the Deacons. These suggestions also included Davidson as a party of the second or being dropped part. However, these suggestions have been few, and those who took into consideration all angles of the business had no doubt but that the grid relations would continue among the present members of the Big Five, despite the fact that this year there's quite a "Big Three," while last year the same trio prevailed save for Wake Forest's upsetting Carolina.

Lay Cornerstone Of College in Wilson

WILSON, Nov. 18.—With appropriate exercises the corner stone of the new girl's dormitory of Atlantic Christian College was laid November 18. Several hundred guests from throughout Eastern North Carolina were present at the ceremony which was conducted by Dr. Howard S. Hiley, president of the institution.

Mr. H. Galt Braxton, of Kinston, chairman of the building committee, assisted by Doane Herring and W. M. Jones, sealed within the stone a college annual catalog, a copy of the Wilson Daily Times, building plans and programs of the exercises.

Proceeding the laying of the corner stone, services were held in the college chapel, where portraits of the late J. W. Hines, of Rocky Mount, benefactor of the college and formerly a trustee of the institution, and George Hackney, Chairman of the

Grid Dust from the Grid Pan

Looking over the outstanding football players in North Carolina this year, especially among the "Big Five" teams, we notice that there is an unusual lack of real linemen playing. Last fall it would have been somewhat difficult to pick the best of several linemen, but this season it will be hard to find which one is good enough to rate an all-state selection. This rather unusual predicament is confined more or less to the tackles, for while no end in North Carolina, outside of Brock of Davidson, has shown the same ability to play the wing position as some of the flankmen did last year, there are still several who are fairly good players. No one doubts that there are some good guards in North Carolina. Without a doubt North Carolina boasts two of the best centers in the South despite what Dan McGugin and the Atlanta sports writers have to say about Peter Pund. But those tackles. We would not say they are poor, but we would not hesitate to say that they aren't anything to write home about. Here at the Hill, the tackles have caused Coach Collins more worry than all the rest of the team together. Of course it is problematical if that is so, for if it were some of our nice howlers would take that as an excuse for kicking. But we venture to say that the tackles, or rather the lack of them, has caused Coach Collins plenty of worry. It is the same at the rest of the "Big Five" institutions, Wake Forest had Weir last year, but he has failed to show anything of his former ability this fall, and more than once Coach Cofall has had him on the bench. We haven't noticed where any of the other tackles have been doing anything unusual in the games thus far. Over at Duke, where they seem to have plenty of everything, Coach Dehart had to shift some of his linemen around a little to see exactly who could play tackle. It's the same everywhere. They just aren't playing this year like they used to.

Back of any forward wall that might be picked in North Carolina, any number of backfield combinations could be used with ease. With the line the problem is to pick the men who can play the position, while in the backfield the problem is to pick the best men from a large number of really good backs. Taking the Tar Heel backs, we have over here quite a few that any coach would be glad to have. Up to the present several of these have been handicapped by injuries. But among those who have been playing regularly, we have Nash and Jackson at the halves, Spaulding and Harden at full back, and Wyrick at quarter. Maus, Magner, Gresham, and Erickson haven't seen enough action to-date to justify their being picked, but there still remains two games on the Carolina schedule.

At the other institutions, there are Warren at State, Buie and Murray at Duke, and Flynn at Davidson. This leaves out many who probably justify being mentioned. Perhaps over in Durham, if anyone there reads this, they will "what about Jankoski?" Well, what about him? We haven't seen where he has done anything to justify his being mentioned as the best fullback in the state, furthermore, it seems that a boy from Rocky Mount called Murray has fulfilled the big westerner's place very well. In fact in the games he has played Murray has far outshone his superior. With two games left Jankoski will have his chance to prove that he rates All-State. Otherwise we can't say that he rates it.

Board of Trustees, were presented to the school. Dr. Hiley presided over these exercises, and Dr. George F. Cuthrell of Raleigh, delivered an address concerning the work that both of these men have accomplished for the college.

Capt. Henderson

Captain Johnny Henderson, who will lead the Tar Heel harriers in their defense of their Southern cross-country championship in the annual Conference cross-country meet in Atlanta Saturday, is one of the outstanding two milers in the south.

HEEL HARRIERS IN CONFERENCE MEET SATURDAY

Cinder Artists Will Go In Quest Of A Third Successive Southern Cross Country Title.

The University harriers will defend their Southern Conference cross-country championship in the annual Conference Cross-Country Meet, carded to be run over a five-mile course in Atlanta on Saturday of this week. Georgia Tech will be host to the meet, which is expected to draw the largest entry ever recorded for the long distance event.

The Tar Heel runners have romped home as easy winners during the past two seasons, but Captain Johnnie Henderson and his cohorts enter the meet this week facing the toughest field ever gathered in the Conference. Handicapped since early season by in-and-fourth places for the Tar Heels must show more stuff than they have had all season if they retain the crown for a third year.

Last November Captain Galen Elliott led the runners home in the meet held over Carolina's own course here, and Henderson, Fisher and Pritchett brought home second, third and fourth places for the Tar Heels. Barkley and Gallegher finished sixth and eighth to give Carolina six of the first eight positions in the race. There seems no chance of such a showing this year.

The field this week end will include strong teams from Auburn, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Clemson, V. P. I., Virginia and Maryland, and the Tar Heels must scrap to win. Coach Dale Ranson will take his Tar Heel squad to Atlanta Thursday for a final light workout over the titular course on Friday.

The final line-up of seven men to enter the meet has not been decided, and Captain Johnnie Henderson is the only man absolutely certain of his position. The other six will be chosen from a squad that includes Barkley, Brown, Baucom, Cohen, Fisher, Lowry, Medford and Wrenn.

BLUE DEVILS FACE WEEK OF DRILLING

DUKE UNIVERSITY, Nov. 19.—Psychological bugaboos having been kicked out of the Blue Devil football camp the Duke squad will begin this week a light but steady period of workout preparatory to their game with Davidson here on Thanksgiving. While Davidson is their next foe, and one not to be trifled with, the Dukesters and their followers are peering a little further down on the schedule and counting off the days until the heralded Carolina-Duke game at Chapel Hill on December 8.

It is a particular turn against the thousands of football fans in the state that the state title will be held in doubt until the very last game and a post-season one at that—if Thanksgiving is considered the season's end. This, however, depends upon Duke's disposition of the Wildcat invasion. If Duke loses to Davidson and then defeats Carolina, it will be somebody's business to start serious figuring.

COTTON PURDUE IS LEADING IN STATE SCORING

Close Race Is Taking Place Among the State's "Big Five" Players.

While Ken Strong, New York University star backfield performer, seems to have run off with the individual scoring honors of the nation, the race for scoring leadership among the players in this state is still tight. At present a member of one of the Little Five teams holds the lead. Purdue, High Point College back, has run up a total of fifty points to lead Buie of Duke and Warren of State by twenty points. Warren held the second rung until Buie made his two dropkicks which won the Duke-State game last Saturday. Warren has scored all of his points by touchdowns and in this department leads Buie. However six extra points gave Sam a tie with him. Seven players are tied with each other for the next position with twenty-four points. Jackson is the only Tar Heel in this group. State has three, and Davidson, Duke, and High Point have one each. Eight backs are tied with three touchdowns each. Three of these are Carolina players.

In kicking extra points, High Point's Panthers also have the leader: Thompson, who has nine to his credit. Sam Buie of Duke and Sparky Adams, State College quarterback, are tied for second place with six each. Only one field goal has been scored in the state this season. The credit for this goes to Munn, Atlantic Christian captain.

It seems that Tommy Gresham would have shown them something in the way of scoring if he had not been kept out by a broken hand. Playing in only the first few games of the season, he ran up a total of nineteen points. The scoring which has been done by the Heels this fall has not been limited to one man but ten or more players have crossed the last line for touchdowns. The fact that the passing game has figured so greatly in the scoring has had quite a bit of influence in keeping individual high scorers down to a rather low number of points.

So far this season the Tar Heels have scored a few more points than their opponents. Getting off to a fine start by scoring sixty-five points against Wake Forest, the Heels have more than held their own and now boast of a record which shows that Carolina has scored one hundred and forty points to eighty-eight for their opponents.

High scorers of the state are:

Annual Intramural Boxing Tournament

Twenty-Six Dempseys and Tunneys to Battle for Six Campus Titles.

The campus pugilists start fingering leather this afternoon in the opening rounds of the annual Intramural Boxing Tournament, with twenty-six ambitious young Dempseys and Tunneys scheduled to battle for six individual campus titles in every weight except the unlimited heavyweight division. The bouts will be held in the varsity boxing ring in the Tin Can, beginning at 4:00 o'clock this afternoon.

The system of running the boxing tourney has been changed this year. In past seasons the dormitory teams have fought it out for team championships, but this year finds the battles put on an individual basis, with all entrants required to have a certain amount of training under the supervision of the varsity boxing coaches. This has cut the number of individual entries, but will likely raise the standard of the fights.

The entries in the six weights to be contested were so divided that the competition starts in the quarter-finals in the featherweight, the welterweight and middleweight divisions, in the semi-finals of the bantamweight and lightweight classes, and the light-heavyweights do not swing into action until the finals on Monday night.

The entire tournament will last three days. Where quarter-finals are necessary, the fights will be held in the Tin Can this afternoon, with the semi-finals in five divisions carded for Friday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. The finals in all six divisions will be held in the Tin Can on Monday night at 8:00 o'clock. All bouts will be run off by varsity boxers and coaches. Coach Ed Butler is to referee the scraps, with Evan Vaughan and Charlie Brown to act as judges.

The schedules show the following bouts on deck this afternoon: J. M. Gatling vs. Hartshorn; Kidder Graham vs. Redwine; S. L. Clarke vs. J. C. Wessells; Obie Davis vs. Carlisle; Cecil Bullard vs. Branch Paxton; R. H. Avery vs. W. B. Harris; and C. L. Blythe vs. Yancey.

The Friday bouts will be announced and posted at the ring-side in the Tin Can this afternoon, winners in these bouts going into the semi-finals with opponents who drew "byes" in this round. Others in the bantamweight and lightweight classes will not see action at all until tomorrow. E. B. Hewitt and "Bull" Shakoney, heavyweights, are the only men in their weight and will break the sport-light on Monday night in the final rounds.
