Dr. Chase Decides to Remain at University

Campus Officers To Be Nominated In Memorial Hall Friday Morning

Classes Will Meet Tonight to Nominate Men; Election Will Be Held on April 4; Much Interest Being Shown by Student Body.

The annual political battle of the year will be staged during the period of the week beginning today and ending April 4. Tonight zealous friends of "likely" and "brilliant" campus leaders will extol the individual merits of the respective candidates. The class that is rising senior will meet in Gerrard Hall at 7:30; the rising junior class will meet at the same time in the assembly hall in Murphey Building; and the rising sophomore class will gather in the assembly hall in the Law building.

The Campus Elections Committee chose upon tonight for the nomination of the class officers because of the fact that Friday is Good Friday, and a considerable number of students will be leaving the Hill on that date.

In addition to the nominating of candidates who will compete for the class offices, there will be some sixteen other campus positions to be filled, which will be nominated at Chapel period tomorrow morning. Men will be nominated for the presidency of the student body, the four offices of the Y. M. C. A., the presidency and vice-presidency of the Athletic Association, the editorships of the publications, the memberships of the Publications Union Board, and chief cheer leader.

The election of officers will fall on Thursday, April 4. There will be two polls to speed up the voting. All persons whose last names commence with letters from A through L will cast their ballots in Memorial Hall while all those persons whose last names commence with letters from M through the rest of the alphabet will vote at a polling place outside the Y. M. C. A. Building. Voting will begin at nine o'clock the morning of April 4 and will continue at both places until six o'clock that evening.

The Australian Secret ballot will be employed in the election, the provisions of which will be strictly enforced by members of the Campus Elections Committee under the leadership of Ed Hudgins, chairman of the group.

The staff of the Tar Heel will meet tonight to nominate a candidate to run for the editorship of that publication. The Publications Union Board will nominate candidates to run for positions on the Board next year, as usual.

ENGINEERS GO ON OBSERVATION TRIP

Visit Seats of Many Large Industries in State; Will Become Annual Affair.

Seniors in the course in Industrial Management at the University of North Carolina have just completed an interesting series of visits to selected industries of the state. Under the direction of Prof. G. T. Schwenning, who offers the course in Industrial Management, the class made inspection trips to the following industrial plants: Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company at Durham, Irwin Cotton Mills at West Durham, Riverside Cotton Mills at Danville, Va., Vick Chemical Company at Greensboro, and the Tomlinson Chair Manufacturing Company at High Point. In every case the class was given a most cordial reception by the management.

The observation tours were a regular part of the class instruction. They were taken during the latter part of the course after the students had considered the theoretical aspects of industrial management problems. Students were assigned topics, such as structure and layout of the plant, mechanical conveyor systems, lighting, air conditioning, service centers, etc., upon which they wrote reports after each visit. Thus it was possible to compare theory with actual conditions and practices.

BINGHAM HALL IS OPENED FOR USE

University School of Commerce Moves Into Its Handsome New Quarters.

Bingham Hall, named for the Bingham family of North Carolina, prominent educators, was informally opened yesterday when the school of Commerce of the State university occupied its new home for the first time. The building has just been completed.

Dean Dudley D. Carroll and members of the staff of instruction of the school of Commerce occupied their offices and began class work in the new building, and all were highly pleased with this realization of a long-felt need for a home of their own. Since its organization in 1919 the school of Commerce has occupied rooms in Saunders Hall.

The new building, said to be one of the best constructed on the campus, houses the administrative offices of the school of Commerce and the class rooms and laboratories of the departments of economics and commerce.

It is three stories in height, and besides has 13 class rooms, four laboratory rooms, 20 conference and seminar rooms, one auditorium seating 250, and a mimeographing room. It is situated on the Southern end of the campus just below Murphy Hall and next to the University's new library. Work was begun last June. Cost of construction was $160,000.

The school of Commerce now has 560 students, and, besides these, many students from other schools of the University take courses offered in economics and commerce.

Student Notice

The Business Manager of the University announced yesterday afternoon that all fees for the spring quarter must positively be paid within five days after registration. This date is April 1.

Extension of time will be given only to those persons who can prove that it is absolutely necessary. Unless all persons registered in the University either pay these fees or arrange for their payment by April 1, they will be immediately dropped from their classes.

Civil Engineers To Hold Meeting

The William Cain chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers will meet tonight at 7:30 in 206 Phillips hall. Mr. Frank Adams will explain the construction over the Green River Gorge, and a moving picture which illustrates the methods of arc welding in steel structures will be shown.

Dean Bradshaw announced yesterday that chapel exercises will be resumed next Monday, April 1.

Plan to Levy Fee on Students Who Take Over Three Courses

At the next regular meeting of the University faculty the question of charging students a fixed price for all subjects taken during a quarter above the minimum three will be taken up. According to reports of the plan to be considered, $4 will be charged for half courses and $8 for whole courses. It is understood, however, that in those curricula which require courses in excess of three a quarter for the degree no special fee beyond that now assessed will be charged.

If this plan is passed by the faculty it will be passed on to the University trustees for consideration. The schools which will be affected by this proposal, if passed, will be The College of Liberal Arts, the School of Commerce, the School of Education and the School of Applied Science.

It was this club that established the lunch system at the high school enabling the students from an inconvenient distance to procure a hot lunch in the school building.

CONNOR HISTORY VALUABLE WORK

Besides Historical Portion Five-Volume Set Has Much Biographical Material.

In writing of Prof. R. D. W. Connor's new five-volume History of North Carolina, A. B. Moore, professor of history at the University of Alabama, says that Professor Connor has done the people of his state an inestimable service, and, incidentally, has made a very valuable contribution to the history of the United States.

Parts of Prof. Moore's review of the new history are as follows:

"I have examined with much interest Prof. R. D. W. Connor's History of North Carolina. Professor Connor has a wonderful theme, and he has developed it in a way that will satisfy the critical requirements of the historical craft and at the same time the public demand for a readable and entertaining narrative.

"Professor Connor has written a charming account of the people of the great commonwealth of North Carolina. The story is rich and it is richly told. The style is lucid and lively, and the color and vivacity are supplied by frequent and apt quotations from a great variety of contemporary source material. As one peruses Connor's interesting pages one sees the life processes of the people of North Carolina, and what more should one expect?

"Political history has been given due attention—new facts being introduced and old ones presented in new lights—but the most striking features are the discussions of the social and economic life of the people. Nowhere, as far as I know, have these subjects received ample treatment. No class of people and no aspect of the life of the people has been slighted. Here one finds truly a history of the people and of their every concern and activity. And the all-pervading and complicated story is told with refreshing candor and commendable impartiality."

Prof. Moore declares that "when the history of each of our states has been written as Prof. Connor has written the history of North Carolina, then we may know the history of our states and then some scholar gifted with historical and literary imagination may write a true and stirring story of our nation."

The books are in modern library style, handsomely bound, well illustrated, and a comprehensive index makes them valuable for reference libraries throughout the country.

UNIVERSITY GLAD CHASE WILL STAY

Chapel Hill Folks and Students Are Joyful Over His Declination of Tempting Proposition; Third Offer in Past Few Years.

In a recent statement issued by Dr. H. W. Chase, president of the University, he has definitely decided to remain at the University by declining the offer recently tendered him some time ago by the Social Science Research Council, which carries with it a salary of $20,000, which is nearly twice the amount that he receives at present, as well as traveling expenses and a liberal retiring allowance.

Close observers in Chapel Hill view the situation as one in which the president turned down a high salaried and comparatively easy position for one that will continue to require his best efforts along lines of management, tact, and policy. Persons attending the University and resident in Chapel Hill realize the importance that the legislatures and the influence of changing governors have upon the institution. They know that the University being mostly supported by the state, its welfare is very apt to be at the mercy of whatever political theories regarding economy or its management as are current in the political world of the state.

Dr. Chase has always striven to prove the distinct advantages of higher education as the creation of an asset rather than an expense. University and college leaders throughout the entire state have been very greatly encouraged by Dr. Chase's decision to stay. He is still a young man with liberal ideas, and the University is congratulating itself upon being able to hold the interest and the service of such a leader.

This offer is the third of such positions of larger trust and salary that have been offered President Chase during the past few years, the other two being the presidencies of the Universities of Oregon, and the City of Cincinnati.
