RIVALRY

25-0 before the series' biggest crowd, 47,000. The great Eric Tipton scored twice for Duke in '36, but his teammate Parker stole the show with a 105 yard kickoff return. The final score was Duke 27, Carolina 7. Carolina Pulls Upset

The Tar Heels pulled the year's biggest upset with their 14-6 victory in 1937, but the Blue Devils came back next year in Durham for a 14-0 win. They added another to their victory column in '39, taking the game 13-3. The Tar Heels won a hard-fought battle 6-3 the following season.

Duke's 1941 Rose Bowl team trimmed Carolina, as was expected, 20-0. Last year, the Tar Heels came from behind twice to tie the Blue Devils 13-13 and tie them also for the Big Five championship.

Duke Holds Modern Lead

Duke holds the lead in the modern series with six wins and three losses in ten years, but neither team has won over two straight. This year, both schools have an unprecedented array of talent. Eddie Cameron and Tom Young are head coaches for their first time, but both are shaping fine teams. Cameron's more smoothly functioning eleven will enter slightly favored, but anything can and does happen when Duke and Carolina meet.

Two V-12 Entrants Win Contest Money

The Penn State-Colgate fracas, ending in a tie score, prevented the TAR HEEL football prediction contest from awarding first prize to a contestant with all ten games picked correctly. Arthur W. Thomas of Hewes Hall, winner of the $5.00 in cash, although missing out on the tie, was the only entrant to choose correctly nine out of the ten games selected.

the correct choices in eight of the ten games. However, W. H. Kerr, of Old East, came the closest in guessing the final scores and therefore is awarded the second prize of $2.50 in merchandise.

The contest will be held again this week, with entry blanks available at the VARSITY, Graham Memorial, and the TAR HEEL office.
