First Coed Boss of Tar Heel Writes Final Editorial Page

Miss Hill Active In Campus Life

Today's issue closes the first feminine dynasty of the TAR HEEL, as Kat Hill turns the paper over to V-12er Horace Carter.

Miss Hill took over the paper last October when Walter Damtoft left for midshipman school. Since that time the TAR HEEL has changed from a weekly news sheet to a semi-weekly, and has had four different managing editors.

Busy Life

"Katrinka" Hill has been dashing after news and going to meetings and rehearsals since she came to Carolina in the fall of 1942, a transfer from Greensboro College. Following the example of other New Bern journalists she began her college extra-curricular life by signing up with the TAR HEEL. From news stories, to features, columns and editorials, she worked her way up.

This year, in addition to her newspaper work, Miss Hill has been active in dramatics. In the Sound and Fury show she played the part of a gum-chewing secretary. Recently the Playmakers produced her experimental play

United Nations Week Slated

The War Coordination Board of the University is sponsoring a United Nations Week from May 15 to 19, which will be the first war drive promoted by local initiative on the campus.

The campaign will be launched with the opening of a United Nations Bazaar in the browsing room of the YMCA and will be topped-off by an informal dance, honoring the United Nations, in Graham Memorial lounge on Friday, May 19.

Proceeds

All proceeds from Carolina's United Nations week will be turned over to the individual relief agencies of Britain, China, Russia and other nations, to aid war victims.

The United Nations relief organizations have been contacted, by the bazaar chairman, Betty Hurwitz, representative to the WGA from Hillel, and colorful articles for bazaar sale have been ordered. Samples from the British, Chinese and Russian agencies have already arrived, including such things as foreign make-up bags, artistic lapel pins, match books, pencils and Chinese post cards.

The dance will probably take the form of a Chinese New Year party.

Plan to Stop Violations Of Expenses

Speaker Announces New Committeemen

Increasing the momentum started at their last meeting, the Student Legislature has brought forth a bill to simplify the major student election.

According to the bill, any violation of election expenses will automatically eliminate the candidate from the election, if he could have prevented the violation. If he is proven guilty after being elected, the candidate with the next highest number of votes will be considered elected.

Provisions

Nominations are to be made in a mass meeting a minimum of two weeks before election day. Itemized and signed account of all expenses, including all receipts and bills of purchases and samples of all printing must be turned in. Every candidate, whether having expenses or not, will turn in a report to the elections committee or at a place designated by the committee, before six o'clock, P.M. two days before election. Any late reports shall be fined $5.00. Any candidate failing to hand in a late report before six o'clock P.M. the day before elections will be automatically disqualified. Every candidate not handing in a report is under the same regulations that govern expense violators.

The Elections Committee and three Student Honor Council members, including the President of the Student Body, shall review all violations to election procedure. After this review, providing that the evidence brought forth warrants a trial for violation of the honor code, the individual Men's or Women's Honor Council will deal with the case.

V-5 Students Get 3 Terms

By R. W. May

Chapel Hill's Navy trainees in the V-12 program preparatory to becoming Navy flight officers, learned last week that they will receive three terms of college training in V-12 instead of the two that was previously required.

The group which reported at the Chapel Hill V-12 unit last November will therefore remain here until next November, instead of leaving July 1, as was originally scheduled.

A Navy bulletin said that this was due to a reduction in the future output of the pilot training program, which has also caused the closing of the Navy CAA—War Training Service and the Naval Flight Preparatory Programs. Students leaving the V-12 program for flight training on and after next November 1, will immediately enter the flight training program at Pre-Flight schools, thus eliminating the three months which previously was spent at Naval Flight Preparatory schools. It is expected that the extra semester of college work will raise the standards of performance and improve the quality of our Naval pilots. The educational standards have thus been brought back to substantially the same minimum level as was required prior to April, 1942, when two years of accredited college work was required for acceptance for flight training as aviation cadets.

Geography Test

The place geography test for commerce students will be held Monday, May 22, at 2 o'clock in 217 New West.

Outcome of Ration Tilt May Decide Loop Leaders

Arch Rivals Boast Strong Outfit Of Potent Hurlers; Hard Hitters

By Fred Flagler, Jr., Tar Heel Sports Editor

There will be a lot at stake here this afternoon when the Duke Blue Devil baseballers invade Emerson field at 3 o'clock to clash with the Carolina nine for the first time this season in the Ration Loop contest that may decide the leader of the four team circuit.

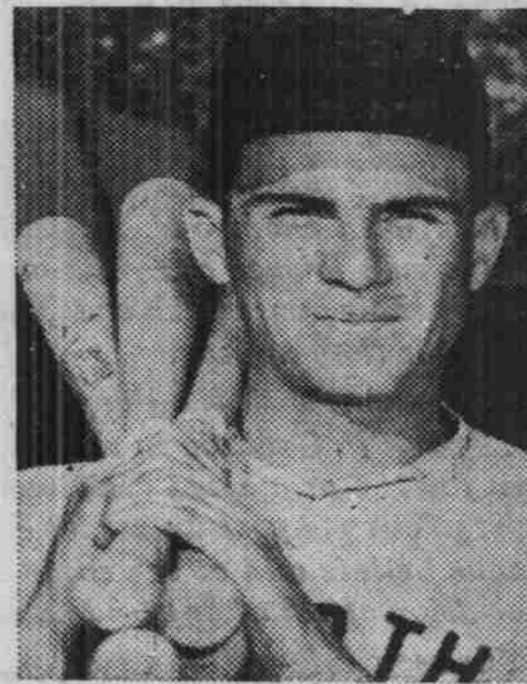

All three of the top teams in the league have suffered one defeat while State is trailing with five losses though making improvement in the last two weeks. Duke lost to Pre-Flight this week by a 4-3 score and Carolina lost to Pre-Flight, but Pre-Flight was beaten earlier in the season by the potent Blue Devils.

Carolina Weak

The Carolina nine looked a little weak in the game with State Monday, managing to eke-out a win by a 6-5 count. If the Wolfpack crew continues to play ball like they did against the Tar Heels they might upset the loop.

It will be a decided toss-up affair today because both the Devils and the Tar Heels have their weak points and their strong points in almost equal amounts. The Dukes probably have the hurling advantage over Carolina and their hitting has been good, but if Carolina can steer clear of fielding errors along with the consistent pitching of Crock, who will probably start, they ought to have a fairly even chance with their arch-rival invaders.

Carolina had to push the game with State this week into 11 frames before they could manage their win. It is either the fact that the Tar Heels have slipped since their opening 24-1 win over the Wolfpack or the fact that State has really done some work in the last week in the way of improvement.

The Dukes suffered their first loss this season when the Pre-Flights came from behind to win by a 4-3 score. Coach Jack Coombs used two pitchers against the Navy Cadets, who were determined to retaliate for the defeat handed them by Duke in their first meet.

Leading Hurlers

Talcott and Felton are the leading hurlers for Duke, in fact they are on top of the Ration League as far as pitching the ole apple goes. Felton was without loss up until the Pre-Flight tilt at which time he was on the mound for the Duke crew. This was his first loss.

Coach Hearn hopes that his team is in ready shape for the big scrap today. Frank Wideman, first sacker, and Ray

Champion Woman Golfer Has Phi Beta Key Among Trophies

Mrs. Page Won 1937 National Tournament

By Georgia Helen Webb

Armed with a collection of streamlined compacts, cigarette trays plus unusual attachments, metal match boxes, gigantic cups and vases, salt shakers, tumblers, flower vases, and pitchers, Estelle Lawson Page turns the average onlooker green at the golf links which she commands.

Grinning as she trips over her pet cat, "Pepper," whom she assures us wants nothing more than the fish in the fish bowl, Mrs. Page explains she was forced to put all her trophies in one room when it became embarrassing to herd all her curious friends and acquaintances into the attic where she kept her cups and scrapbooks.

Phi Beta

Born in East Orange, New York, in 1908, Mrs. Page came to Chapel Hill when her family moved here, and graduated from the University in three years, absconding with a Phi Beta Kappa key in the process. Incidentally, she is the only national women's golf champ to have a Phi Beta key.

When Mrs. Page's father unexpectedly became chairman of the greens committee, the golfer swears neither of them knew which end of the stick to grab for. Practice makes perfect, though, and our subject is one woman who proved the point, chalking up a record of seven wins in the Carolinas tournaments, six victories in the North-South tournament, (including one a couple of weeks ago), three triumphs as runner-up in the Southern games, and a rating as medalist in 1936, '37, and '38, and co-medalist in 1939. All the top-notchers succumbed to the vivacious Chapel Hillite in 1937, when she stalked off the course the women's national golfing champion. She was a semi-finalist in 1941 in the national tournament, which has been discontinued because of the war.
