Student Legislature Tables Dance Budget Bill

Sesquicentennial Committee Makes Plans For Anniversary Celebration

Scheduled For January, 1945

Past Is Prologue To Future, Says Billy Carmichael

By John Kerr

Proposing tentative plans for the 150th Anniversary celebration of the University, a group of Trustees, faculty members and student representatives met for two hours in the Governor's office at Raleigh and forwarded suggestions for the events and proposals next year.

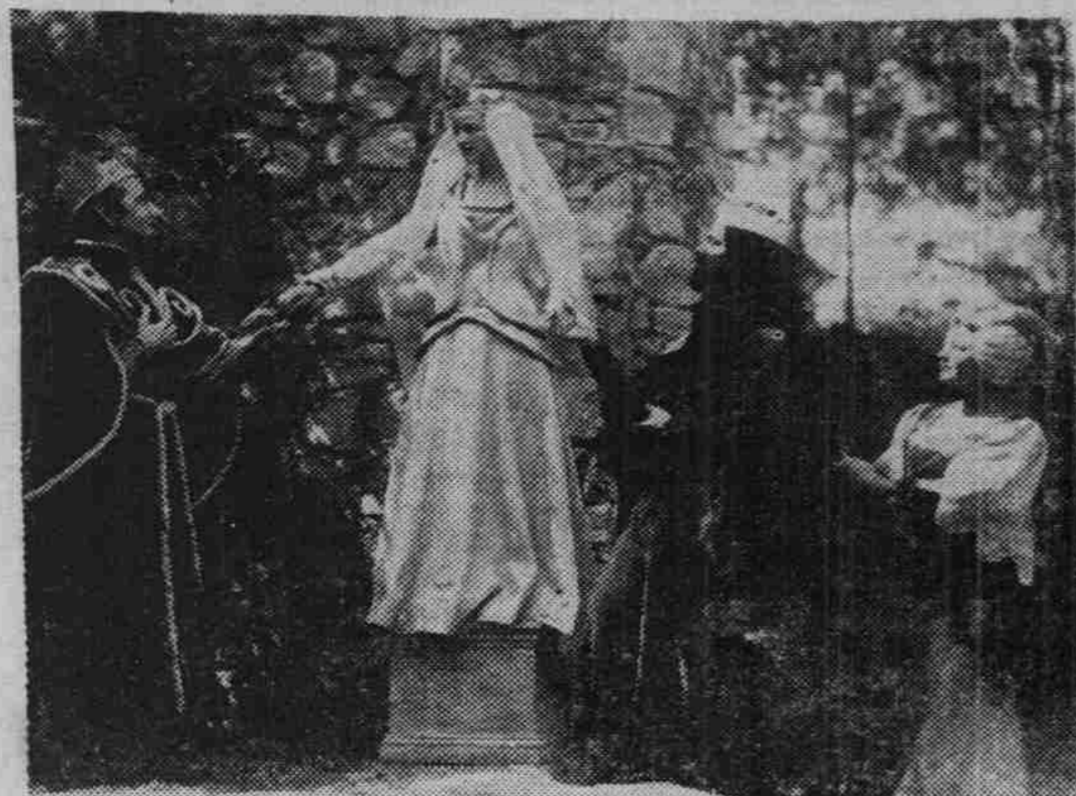

The Governor's Commission, formed to direct the celebration and composed of the Board of Trustees, a faculty committee, and three University students, discussed plans for the program and reached some definite decisions.

January, 1945

Exercises celebrating the formal opening of the University are scheduled for anniversary day, January 15, with appropriate addresses and ceremonies marking the day. The suggestion was advanced by Kemp P. Battle to combine this day with the celebration of Hinton James Day, commemorated by students and alumni in honor of the first student to enter the University. This proposal will be discussed at length at the next meeting of the Commission.

On an undetermined date during the winter or spring quarter, a symposium of three to six prominent speakers will highlight the season with a discussion on the importance of research. Influence on commencement exercises will be the address on a celebration topic by an authority from a representative Southern institution. An additional feature will be a pageant portraying the history of UNC. Written by Paul Green, the performance will be staged by students and music will be furnished by Roy Harris.

'The Winter's Tale' Opens In Forest Theatre Friday

"The Winter's Tale," a romantic play by Shakespeare, which has been adapted for outdoor presentation by Douglas Hume and Joseph Salek, faculty members of the Dramatic Art Department, will be presented May 19, 20, and 21 at 8:45 p.m. in the Forest Theatre. This beautiful pastoral romance is being given the elaborate production for which the Forest Theatre was designed by the Carolina Playmakers.

"The Winter's Tale" is one of the last three plays. Shakespeare wrote. The date recorded for its first production is May 15, 1611, at the Globe

Coeds Urged To Join WAC's

Girls May Choose Own Locations

Battle-scarred Capt. Carl Heinmiller, Pacific combat veteran, today in a straight from the shoulder talk told eight Carolina co-eds of the very urgent need for women in the armed services.

He told the eight co-eds of the real service women can do in the army. "I've seen too many young men killed because they didn't know how to handle a gun. They didn't have the necessary training to save themselves. Women in the armed services can free the men needed to train these boys to fight and live," he said.

Qualifications
Cpl. Beth Long told the co-eds of the training they would get in the Women's army. She explained the qualifications necessary to become a member of the WAC's. She told them of the new opportunities now offered. WAC's have their choice of army

Fordham Elected Frosh President

The Freshman class, newly reorganized by the Student Legislature several weeks ago, went to the polls last Tuesday and elected Chris Fordham, Albert Jones, and Bill Slack as President, Vice President and Secretary-Treasurer.

Fordham received 87 votes. Jones, with the next highest total, 38, automatically became Vice President. Other totals in the Presidential race were: Garland Scruggs, 16; William Schollemyer, 13; Mance Bogey, 10.

In the race for Secretary-Treasurer Slack received 80 votes, Buster Ward 52, and Stanley Colbert 31. Colbert was the only one of the three whose

Archie, One Man Art Show, Paints To Voice Emotions

By W. A. Schollmeyer

Immured within the old yellow shingles of 309 West Franklin street, is a "one man" art show. The artist being in the person of Archie Daniels, and the show consisting of some 60 or 70 of his paintings.

Mr. Daniels, or Archie as he is commonly called at the gallery, has been, as he himself terms it, "a rolling stone." Beginning his career as a school teacher, he soon tired of that sedentary life, and took to joining in holy matrimony, the future parents of dear little boys and girls, he was glad he wouldn't have to teach. In short—became a justice of the peace. The next step was the logical one: Judge Daniels, but because of the questionable nature of several of the cases, he thought it best to leave the judging end of the business to others. He would report the results, which task he performed ably for a year. At the end of which period he had not only become a top-flight newshawk, but he was the editor of a fairly large newspaper. It was not long before he edited his own paper successfully.

During this farrago of experiences, Archie has always had one recourse for periods of depressions; one outlet for his emotions—his painting. This emotional feeling is well expressed in the works now on exhibition. His original and brilliant style has produced numerous prize-winning works. Many of his works are decorating the walls of the homes of famed personages, including Archibald Henderson. In light of these last statements, his ability is all the more remarkable when it is learned Archie has never taken a lesson in art in his life. Entirely self-taught, his brilliant, natural technique makes up for his lack, if any, of technical knowledge.

Working here for the last four years, Archie has endeared himself to all those who know him. Chapel Hill is proud to have him call her his home.

Co-op Cooks Vow They are Best Fed Group In Town

16 Students Pool Ration Points

When food rationing came along and the eating places in Chapel Hill became overloaded with the hungry people, sixteen students put their brains and meat points together to meet the situation. The idea was merely to have one meal, well cooked and served and at the same time an enjoyable atmosphere. The group was not selected or chosen according to any particular qualifications or merit; they just got together because they liked to eat.

They found a place to prepare the meals in the basement of the Presbyterian Church. Then they made out a budget, fixed a work schedule in which each person had an equal share of work and paid an equal amount of money into the pool. From there on out the sixteen students in the group have assured themselves of one good meal each day at minimum cost and maximum enjoyment.

When the group first started the women took over the age old custom of cooking and the boys had to go reluctantly to the kitchen after the meal to clean up the dishes and dirty pans. And then one day there was a rebellion. Charles Freeman, sociology graduate student, made the statement that he could cook as good as any girl or any girl's mother. The group was willing to take the chance. The result was amazingly good. From then on a cou-

Staff Meeting

The regular weekly meeting of the TAR HEEL staff will take place this Tuesday in the Horace Williams Lounge, Graham Memorial, at 4 o'clock. This is a compulsory meeting, and all members of the staff who will not be able to attend should contact one of the editors.

Summer School Expects Large Civilian Class

June 12-July 20, July 21-August 29 Are Session Dates

A large enrollment of civilian students for the Summer Session of the University is indicated by the fact that already the number of requests for information exceeds the number last year by 200, it was announced today by Administrative Dean Robert B. House and Director Guy B. Phillips.

According to the new Summer Session catalogue, which has just come from the press, the dates for the two summer terms are June 12 to July 20 and July 21 to August 29.

Civilian Program

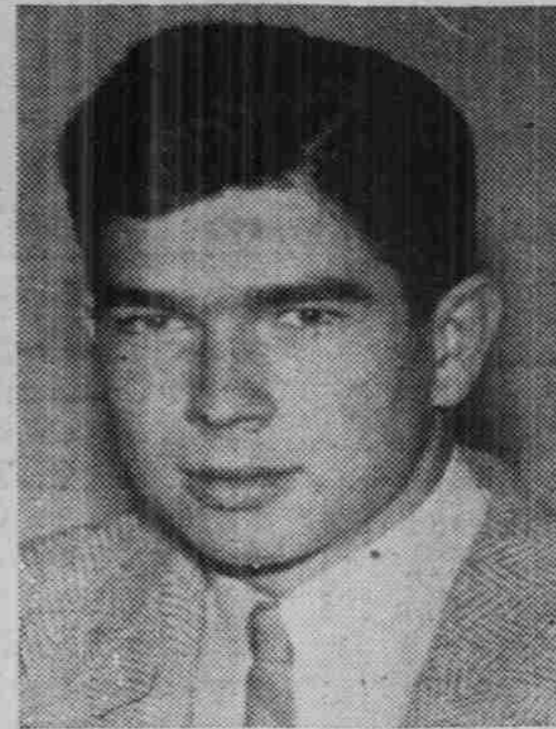

Director Phillips pointed out that, despite the elimination of many summer sessions throughout the country, the University will maintain a civilian program for graduates and undergraduates again this year with adjustments being made to dovetail with the University's wartime speed-up program.

"Work will be available in approximately 300 courses representing practically all of the regular University departments," he said. "One hundred and fifty faculty members will direct the work of the Summer Session, about 20 of whom will be visiting instructors.

High School Entrants

"The Summer Session is being offered as a service to undergraduate and graduate students," he said. "Transfer students may make up deficiencies while high school seniors, after passing special examinations, may enter and complete one quarter of college work before the fall, thereby accelerating their college careers and getting that much further ahead before entering the armed service."

Among a number of special features to be offered are short courses in music and dramatics for high school students

Elections Bill Turned Back To Committee

Rules Committee Sets Three Miss Limit on Legislators

By Stanley Colbert

The dance expenditures question was silenced for the third time in three years Thursday night, when the Legislature voted to table a bill providing for increased dance budgets.

"I feel that this just isn't the time to present such a bill," stated Charlie Frank Benbow, who spoke against its passage. "We cannot consider battles as U. S. victories where American lives are being lost. The war condition has not improved, and will not, until every enemy is annihilated."

Elections Bill

The Major Campus Elections Bill was referred back to the Ways and Means Committee, after a very thorough discussion indicated various flaws still present in the bill.

Suggestions were made by various legislators and visitors concerning the limiting of responsibilities of candidates' finances to a committee of three people. These three would take the complete responsibility of all financial violations.

Amendment

Also discussed was an amendment to lengthen the period of time between the deadline of financial reports and the actual elections. This would give the Elections Committee sufficient time to investigate and disqualify the candidates proven guilty of violations. Actually passed was an amendment made by legislator Madison Wright, stating in part that if a person is proven guilty of violating the Elections bill, provisions be made for re-election processes, with the added nomination of any candidates.

Discussion was also carried on concerning any statements released by a

Dance Slated For United Nations Week

Campaign To Aid Chinese, British Russian Relief

The War Coordination Board of the University is sponsoring Carolina United Nations Week, beginning on Monday, May 15 with a United Nations Bazaar and ending with an informal dance on Friday, May 19 in Graham Memorial.

The campaign, which will aid the relief organizations of China, Russia and Britain, is the first on the campus promoted by local initiative and not part of a nation-wide drive.

The WCB will launch the campaign on Monday morning in the browsing room of the YMCA with a United Nations Bazaar, which will offer for sale such articles as compacts, matches, pencils, make-up bags, post cards and books received from the United China Relief, Russian War Relief and the British War Relief societies. ple of boys in the group began to take on their share of the cooking, until now it is almost equally divided among girls and boys.

Members of the group include students in varied fields of study: chemistry, sociology, medicine, architecture, religion, physics, dramatics, mathematics, romance languages.

The meals have been well planned and the students who make up the group would be willing to bet a steak or a porkchop, cooked by male or female, that they are among the best fed students on the Carolina campus.

The group includes:

Popham Attends V-12 Conference

Captain W. S. Popham, USN, Commanding Officer of the V-12 unit, NROTC, and pre-medical students here, left Chapel Hill for New York Thursday afternoon, for a conference to be attended by the Commanding Officers of all other V-12 College units, and representatives of the schools.

With him went Dr. Guy B. Phillips, University of North Carolina Executive Officer of the College For War Training, and Claude E. Teague, Assistant Controller and Business Manager of this University. Dr. Phillips will represent the school as an adviser on the curriculum and Mr. Teague in a financial capacity.
