Campus Sleuths Ponder Whereabouts Of Body

Seniors Get Last Minute Instruction As Time Flies

Graduation Plans Near Completion

A last minute flurry of instructions descended upon prospective graduates this week, as the number of days before the big event narrowed down to nine.

By Wednesday night invitations for the senior banquet on June 2 at 6 o'clock must be picked up in the Graham Memorial office, class president Bob Burleigh announced. The office will be open from 2 until 5 every afternoon until then.

Exam Grades

To let students who expect to get degrees June 5 learn their grades as soon as the instructors report them to the Central Records Office, an alphabetical list of names has been prepared and will be available in 302 South Building, for all degree candidates to refer to at any time beginning May 29, between the hours 8:30 a. m. to 1:00 p. m. and 2:00 p. m. to 4:30 p. m.

An application card for the degree must be secured at the office of the Dean of your school and filled out to show your name just as you wish it to be shown on your diploma. On the back of this card, be sure you give the two addresses asked for. This card is to be left with your Dean. The diploma and graduation fee of $5.00 must be paid to the Cashier of the University.

Graduation invitations are being handed out in the Y daily from 9 until 4:30. Seniors who ordered invitations are asked to get them by Monday afternoon.

Caps and gowns will be for rent in the Y on Friday, Saturday and Sunday mornings. Seniors will don the academic garb three times throughout the commencement period: at the baccalaureate sermon, the last class meeting and final exercises.

Tickets for the parents and seniors luncheon, to be held Saturday at 1:00 in the Carolina Inn, and tickets for the alumni luncheon, set for 1:00 in the Lenoir hall pine room, on Monday, are now on sale at the Alumni office, Graham Memorial and the Y. The price of each ticket is $1.

Coed 'Hour Bill' Passed By Senate

A "Coed Hour" bill, providing for more than one assembly a month for coeds, was passed unanimously by the Coed Senate at its last meeting of the year. Meetings will not be held before or during final examinations, the bill specified.

Accepted by a Senate vote was the newly revised coed constitution, rewritten with necessary details placed in the by-laws. This revision will cut down on the number of amendments to be placed before all coeds for vote.

Carolina students line the banks of Eastwood lake, watching Diver R. H. Butler comb the tangled lake bottom. Draining was begun slowly Thursday night and will continue until the water level is lowered 5 feet. This process is complicated by the fact that the valve controlling the dam is 14 feet beneath the water's surface.

UNC Grants Credit to All Pre-Flight Cadets

13,000 Trainees Will Receive Benefit Of University's Retroactive Ruling

College credit totaling 20 quarter hours in electives will be granted to Pre-Flight cadets for the academic courses they complete during their 11-week program here, President Frank P. Graham announced this week. Additional credit for physical education will be granted, in accordance with the University's requirement for that subject.

The Carolina and Pre-Flight officials who worked up the credit plan are Lt. Comdr. Howard L. Hamilton, former academic coordinator and now executive officer, Dean F. F. Bradshaw and Guy B. Phillips. The University is the first school to grant credit for pre-flight training.

13,000 Cadets

More than 13,000 naval aviation cadets who have completed training here since May, 1942, may receive credit from Carolina on request, since the recent University ruling is retroactive.

A thorough analysis of the entire pre-flight program was conducted before UNC officials granted credits for courses taught. It was found that the staff of the pre-flight school ranked high in teaching experience. Over 40 per cent of the instructors have advanced degrees, while as many as 25 per cent have their Ph.D. degrees.

Just Recognition

"The University's action is a just recognition of the content and standards of the Pre-flight course and of the painstaking work done by a competent staff of teachers," Dr. Graham said. "We are glad to shake with the Navy the approval of the hard study and training completed by the cadets."

24 Below Club

The 24 Below Club will not be open this Saturday night, it was announced yesterday. Programs will be resumed in the fall.

Law Officers Here To Learn Fingerprinting

FBI Agent Directs Two Week Course

North Carolina criminals will undoubtedly cringe in their tracks when they learn of a two week fingerprint course being sponsored by the Institute of Government for law enforcement officers in North and South Carolina.

The course, which started Monday is under the instruction of Mr. M. G. O'Melia, a Special Investigator for the F. B. I. At the termination of the course, each man will be awarded a fingerprinting certificate by the Institute of Government. The course is planned so that men who have had no fingerprinting experience can return to their respective towns and villages and set up fingerprinting divisions.

Albert Coates, director of the Institute of Government commented, "The attendance for the course has far exceeded all expectations."

Representing the Chapel Hill police force is Officer Blake. He and the rest of the officers will spend an intensive two weeks investigating the marvels of the loops and whorls on the inside of their fingers.

UNC Students Win Writing Contest

In an airmail special delivery letter from Boston it was revealed that two University students have won recognition in the annual Atlantic Monthly writing contest.

The two gifted ones are Rose Cottrell Fleming of Jackson, Miss., whose short story, "Sap in the Spring," won first honorable mention in the story division of the contest, and Jane Cavanaugh of Wilmington who turned in a merit award winner essay, "Counsel for the Defense."

Both Mrs. Fleming and Miss Cavanaugh wrote their contributions as members of Professor Phillips Russell's advanced composition class.

Mrs. Fleming was a special student here during the fall and winter quarters. Miss Cavanaugh is finishing her senior year here.

Total of 328 New V-12 Men Expected Here

Recruits Will Be Seamen, No Marines

A total of approximately 328 new Navy trainees are expected to report to the University of North Carolina for the term beginning July 1.

Of this number there will be 50 V-12 1st term freshmen, 50 V-12 students with advanced standing, 148 V-5 freshmen, 30 advanced pre-medical students, and 50 NROTC. It is not expected that any new Marines will report.

At present there are 1285 men in the V-12 training program at Carolina, not including the 52 medical students. This number will be increased to 1330 in July, the maximum quota. November will see a 25% reduction in this quota. About 250 men are expected to leave at the end of the present trimester, due to graduation, academic failures and transfers.

Noted Tar Heel Reviews Navy

Carolina's highest ranking alumnus in the Navy, Rear Admiral Osborn B. Hardison, attended the review of the Pre-Flight School's Second Anniversary ceremony and watched his alma mater play the Cloudbuster nine.

Admiral Hardison, the Chief of Naval Air Primary Training, stated that he was "happy to be in Chapel Hill even if only on business and he expressed a desire to come again soon."

Before the transfer to his present position, Admiral Hardison commanded the aircraft carrier Enterprise, which was honored by the presentation of the Presidential Unit Citation. Admiral Hardison was decorated with the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism and conspicuous courage" in saving the carrier that he commanded from destruction by Japanese planes in the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands. Despite terrific dive bombing and torpedo attack, the planes of the Enterprise inflicted heavy damage on Japanese surface craft and planes. It was in this battle that the carrier Hornet was sunk.

Graduating from Carolina in 1911 at the tender age of eighteen, Hardison was a consistent honor roll student. A member of the German Club, he also belonged to the Athletic Association and Phi Delta Theta.

Diver Hunts for 'Granny' In Depths of Eastwood

UNC Student Finds Maggots In Boat That Suspect Martin May Have Used

Crime took the spotlight in Chapel Hill's back yard this week, as Carolina's favorite swimming hole became the scene of fruitless search for the body of the "missing grandmother."

Pushing the war news clean off the front pages of the state papers and creating the topic of conversation in all "bull sessions" on the campus is the recent mystery of Eastwood Lake, or where is the body of Granny.

Lake Being Drained

Draining of the lake loomed as a possible solution to the problem of finding the body of Mrs. Edward M. Jewett, who was supposedly thrown in the lake by Edward J. Martin, after several unsuccessful attempts were made by a professional diver. It is known that law enforcement authorities have conferred with attorneys representing owners of the lake, and it is reported that the owners have given their consent to the lowering of the water level by five feet. Draining began Thursday night.

Mike Beam, student of UNC and lifeguard at the Eastwood park lake, went swimming with him a Sunday morning. Martin questioned him as to the depth of the water. When the car left the scene, Beam was walking along the road. He noticed a vile odor, but it failed to impress him. On the morning after the body was supposedly cast in the lake, Beam discerned maggots in the boat which may have been used by Martin. The odor was also present around the boat.

Edward Wiles

Edward Wiles, local student, also loomed in the headlines of the Durham Sun. The Sun staff, not knowing who he was, speculated as to the part the student played in the murder. Wiles signed the register above Martin's name and the signatures are reported strikingly alike.

Thursday afternoon the Durham police said that they thought they had some clue as to who Ed Wiles was. Police said that he probably was a Duke student who was better known as Peter Wiles.

Not with Martin

When questioned Thursday night, Wiles said that he was not with Martin at any time. He did sign his own name in the register, as was the custom, Tuesday afternoon. Wiles also said that he does not remember seeing Martin and that he did not sign Martin's name or have it signed in the guest book.

Students over the campus, who were swimming at the time, felt sick suddenly when they heard that a dead body was supposedly thrown in the swimming hole. The reason of course is obvious. Most swimmers swim under the water and take in certain amounts of it. The thought of maggots in the water is not a pleasant one.

Popular Resort

The Eastwood lake was a popular resort for Carolina students who, desiring a place to take a swim and get a little sun, visited the location frequently. The recent case of murder connected with Eastwood has curbed its activities immensely.

If the lake is drained completely students will have to wait a long while before they will be able to return to their popular bathing hangout. A five-foot limit to lowering the level of the lake has been set by the owners.

Half Million Estate

The victim of the murder, Mrs. Jewett, was reported to have an estate worth approximately one half a million dollars. Martin refused to comment on the matter, but deposit slips of banks were found on his person plus a key to a Durham safe deposit box, which indicated that the crime was committed in order to gain the inheritance which Martin would have received.

Last seen on May 10 in Boonville, Mo., she was inspecting property with Martin. They left from Charlotte. Today will mark the 17th day the 67 year old wealthy Missouri resident has been missing.

The maggot infested woman's apparel accompanied with strands of gray hair found in the boat and in the trunk of the car, led officers to believe that the body might not be intact . . . with the quantity of blood and flesh which has been found, officers believe it likely that the body was cut up. This causes campus sleuths to think that the body of the missing grandmother will not be found in Eastwood.

Don Redman Slated To Play For German Club Functions

Russell's Class Is Host To Duke

Duke's only Icelandic student, together with 15 other members of the Creative Writing class there, broke age-old tradition to attend a picnic at Battle Park here Thursday night at which Phillips Russell's Creative writing class played host.

An added incentive for Duke's Icelandic was the fact that Carolina's Asthorrssen is from Iceland, too, and that they had never met. Anne Bridges and Harold Gould, V-12, entertained the group.
