Polish Ambassador Speaks Thursday On 'Poland's Future'

IRC Sponsors Polish Leader Second Time

Pan-Slavic Plan To Be Discussed

Jan Ciechanowski, ambassador to the United States from the Polish Government-in-Exile, will address the Carolina campus Thursday, November 23, at 8 p.m. in Hill Hall, immediately following his participation in the International Aeronautics conferences.

Mr. Ciechanowski will appear under the auspices of the International Relations club who also sponsored him in 1942.

A strong advocate of a postwar Pan-Slavic federation, Mr. Ciechanowski will discuss "Poland's Future."

The Ambassador, a member of the London-Polish government, has been in public life since 1918, at which time he was appointed Chief of the British Section in the Polish Foreign Office. During the Paris Peace Conference, he was chief secretary to President Ignace Paderewski, the renowned pianist, and occupied the position of Counselor to the Polish legation in London until 1924. In 1925 he became minister to the United States.

Following the German invasion in 1939, the Polish government fled to Paris, where Ciechanowski was Secretary-general in the foreign office. When the government-in-exile took up headquarters in London after the fall of France Ciechanowski was appointed ambassador to the United States. Since his government has the recognition of both Great Britain and the United States, he is considered the official representative of his country here, even though that government is being bitterly contested by the Russian recognized Polish Committee of Liberation.

Since he has been in the United States, Ciechanowski has spoken earnestly for a strong post war Pan-Slavic federation.

"I know," he said in January, 1943, "there are skeptical critics who contend that the establishment of a federation, or group of federations of nations situated between Germany and Russia will be difficult to establish. But all Americans know the difficulties attendant on the establishment of the United States, that most perfect example of federation, and yet all these difficulties have been successfully overcome."

The Ambassador will be entertained with a luncheon and banquet Thursday which will be attended by IRC members and invited guests, as well as with a reception following the speech, to which the public is invited.

Walter Judd Heads Speakers Of Religious Emphasis Week

"Christianity on the Morning After" will be the general theme of Religious Emphasis Week which is being sponsored by the YWCA and YMCA cabinets and starts tomorrow.

Dr. Walter Judd congressman from Minnesota and medical missionary, will be the principal speaker of the week. Other guest ministers have been invited to conduct the house forums which will be held after each forum talk.

The main addresses of the series will be given in the evenings in Hill Hall. The topics chosen for these talks are, "A World Headache," "The Veterans Return," "Personal Uncertainty," "Moral Confusion" and "Spiritual Blindness." After each of these meetings forums will be held in the following dormitories, at Alderman with Iredell and King; at Kenan with Vance and Battle; at McIver with Hewes and Pettigrew; at Spencer with Old East, Old West and Smith; at Archer House with Carr and Whitehead; at Graham Memorial with all freshmen; at DKE House with all fraternity men, Chi Omega, Tri-Delt, AD Pi and Pi Phi.

Beauty Contestants

Names of beauty contestants to appear in the Yackety Yack parade Saturday night, November 25, should be submitted as soon as possible to the Yackety Yack editor by the sponsoring fraternities.

Tickets for the ball, held after the Duke-Carolina game, will be on sale at the Y next week or in the Yack office in Graham Memorial.

Carolina Students Participate In Legislative Meet

Twenty-eight Carolina students journeyed to Raleigh yesterday to participate in the fifth annual North Carolina Students' Legislative Assembly which is convening in the state capitol for two days, going through the procedures of mock legislation and parliamentary law.

Carolina's delegation was formed Tuesday night by the Debate Council and various student organizations which are sponsoring delegates. The Debate Council is providing transportation for all students and free lodging for those students whose lodging is not furnished by State College or one of the campus organizations.

Carolina will sponsor six bills in the legislature. One of the bills concerns the recent controversy over the right of North Carolina women to sit on

Pep Rallies And Contests To Be Staged

University Club To Back Events

The University Club has announced its plans for the Duke-Carolina weekend, including a banner contest, torchlight parade, pep rally and bonfire on Friday and a house yard display contest on Saturday.

The banner contest entries must be made by 5 o'clock, Thursday afternoon, at Dean E. L. Mackie's office in South Building. The entries consist of the name of the fraternity, house, or organization which is entering the contest and a statement to the effect that the particular group will enter a banner in the BEAT DOOK parade. According to tradition a cup will be presented to the organization entering the best banner. Judging will take place in Memorial Hall, but the banners must be carried in the parade to be eligible for the contest.

Torches for the parade are to be made Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in fraternity court. Sticks and cloth are needed, and all students are urged to be on hand to assist in the making of the torches.

The pep rally is slated to get under way at 6:30 Friday night at the Y court. It has been announced that the parade, which will begin after the rally, will follow a new route this year. It will end at Memorial Hall, where another rally featuring the coaches, football team and cheerleaders will be held. The band will lead the way through the campus to one of the athletic fields for the bonfire.

Plans are in the making to have the bonfire visible in Durham. A collection of wood will be made by trucks Thursday. See PEP RALLY, page 4

Wallace Files To Run For Editor Of Tar Heel

By Fred Flagler

A bit of stirring around at the last minute Thursday afternoon on the part of individuals interested in the forthcoming elections made the ballot for the November 30 elections look a little different than it might have had it been the same as previously printed in the Tar Heel.

Jimmy Wallace who waited until the final day to make notice of his candidacy for the editor of the Tar Heel actually effected a run in that particular category because as it stood a week ago, Charles Wickenberg, nominee of the University Party, was the only candidate for the post.

Wallace is running independent of any party, not having affiliated with the Student Party who failed to file a candidate with the elections board for the editorship of the Tar Heel.

Wallace has been a staff member of the Tar Heel for four years, serving as columnist, news writer and editorialist, also in his present capacity as circulation manager of the Tar Heel. Wallace has been a contributor to the Carolina Magazine for several years, having written both fiction and non-fiction.

Bill Crisp for vice-president was announced by the elections board as the only candidate for the top offices who has not been previously announced. Crisp filed as an independent candidate. His candidacy marks the third student in the race for that particular post. Dal Davis and Archie Hood are the other candidates.

Conflicting rumor had it this week that a third party had been formed entitled the Independent Party. According to statements made by candidates running independently, that is without party affiliation, there is no such party. The two parties are the University Party and the Student Party which have already made notice of the slate of officers except for a few minor changes which will be published in the Tar Heel later.

As it stands at the present time, candidates for the key posts all have opposition in some form or fashion.

Open House Planned

The girls of McIver Dormitory cordially invite all NROTC, Marine, V-12 and Civilian men to an open house tomorrow Sunday November 19 between 4 and 6 o'clock.

Merchants Ready To Launch Drive For 6th War Loan

E. C. Smith, president of the Chapel Hill Merchants Association, along with the members of the Association and various organization officials are all set to start work Monday on the launching of the 6th War Loan Drive which is slated to run from November 20 to December 16.

At a recent meeting over which J. Maryon Saunders, chairman of the local drive presided, approximately 75 representatives of almost every organization in Chapel Hill laid the groundwork for the coming campaign. Mrs. Sturgis Leavitt is women's chairman of war finance.

Also figuring in on the campaign is Carboro which is being led by the National Munitions Corp. Mr. Wentworth, representing the firm, pledged his company's support in the drive.

The local theatres will again take an important role in the campaign. According to E. C. Smith, manager of both the Pick and the Carolina, a Free Movie Day will be set aside for those persons purchasing bonds on that day. Smith also plans for a special picture for a War Bond Premiere as the campaign progresses.

Paul Young To Render First Recital Here

What promises to be a thoroughly interesting and comprehensive recital will be presented by the baritone Paul Young on Wednesday evening, November 22, at 8:30 in Hill Auditorium. The program will consist of works by Handel, Schumann, Torelli, Masanet, Reger and Burleigh as well as traditional and folk music. The singer will be accompanied by Mary Louise Emery, a graduate assistant in piano technique at Chapel Hill.

Young, who is an assistant professor of music and also head of the voice department of the college, is a newcomer on the campus having started here this fall. He is a native of Ohio and while attending high school in Columbus, also studied at the Franklin Conservatory of Music in that city. He next studied under Dan Beddoe, the oratorical tenor and at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. In 1931 he graduated from the University of Ohio with a B. S. in Music Education.

He studied voice under Frieda Klink, one of the greatest Wagnerian contraltos of all time. In 1941-2 he was awarded a fellowship to Harvard University. He has been active in church singing and choir work. He has also studied with Harry Wilson in New York.

One of Young's greatest problems at present is awakening the general interest of the student body at Chapel Hill to the events of the music department. The coming winter should see many worthwhile offerings with this idea in view. At present Young is directing a production of Handel's

"Messiah" which will be given on the 19th of December; a later Gilbert and Sullivan presentation, "The Gondoliers" will be produced by the combined action of the Playmakers and the Music department. In addition, the regular student recitals at Hill Hall, which take place every Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 will soon be open to the general student body instead of only to the members of the music department.

Perhaps the most unusual offering on the Wednesday night program will be an English version of an ancient Hungarian folk song arranged by Korbay, entitled "Had a Horse". The object of this song is to show that no tragedy, however great, can equal the defeat of the Hungarian Army by the Turks in the battle of Mohal's Field, 400 years ago.
