The Intercollegiate council for Religion in Life announces a public forum to be held on the subject of "Peacetime Conscription" at the Presbyterian church Sunday, January 21, at 8 p. m. The speakers will be Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University, Durham; Sylvester Green, editor of the Durham Herald; and Dean James A. Taylor of NCCN. Public is invited to attend.

MARINE NOMINATIONS for Marine Honor Council representative must be in to any member of the Elections Committee, Ed Gaither, A. B. Smith, Allen Pannill, Kitty Kelly and Tommy Slayton, by Wednesday, 9 p. m.

MONDAY

There will be a Social Service Club meeting at 7 p. m. in McIver Hall.

TUESDAY

There will be a town girls luncheon at 1 p. m. in the Blue Room. Emily Tufts is in charge with Barbara Young and Anne Judson on the committee.

There will be a mass meeting of the Senior Class Tuesday at 5 p. m. in Gerrard Hall for the purpose of electing class officers.

SOUND AND FURY

There will be a meeting of all members of Sound and Fury next Wednesday night at 8:00 o'clock in the Horace Williams Lounge at Graham Memorial. The meeting is being held for the purpose of discussing plans for the next show, a "Gay Nineties Review," which is to be presented sometime during the latter part of March.

PKS Drop UP

The Phi Kappa Sigma has withdrawn its affiliation with the University Party, announced Ben Ward, president. It has not been officially announced, but in all probability the Phi Kapps will affiliate with the student party in the next campus election.

Foreign Films Society Seeks Members; Presents Programs

Starting its membership drive today, the newly-organized Foreign Films Society offers seven foreign film hits as its first series of programs which will be presented to members only beginning Sunday, February 4.

Anyone may become a member of the society upon payment of a one dollar fee for the first series of seven films. Membership cards are obtainable at the YMCA office on the campus and at Ledbetter-Pickard's in town.

All programs, which include selected short subjects as well as the main film, will be presented on Sunday afternoons at 3 in the Playmaker theatre. Admission is by membership cards only as no single admissions may be sold.

The first series consists of the following films: the French version of "Mayerling" with Charles Boyer and Danielle Darieux, February 4; "Doctor Knock," a French film starring Louis Jouvet, February 18; "The Lower Depth," the French version of Gorki's Russian play, starring Jean Gabin, March 11; "The Eternal Mask," a German psychological drama (not a Nazi film), March 18; "The Cantor's Son," a Jewish musical film, April 1; "Alexander Nevsky," a Russian spectacle of the Middle Ages, April 8; and "The

Military Men May Buy Copy Of YY

Margaret Woodhouse, business manager of the Yackety-Yack, has announced that servicemen on the campus may obtain a yearbook for $3.50. Men who are leaving at the end of this semester should bring their addresses to the Yack office in order that the annuals may be forwarded to them in June. Likewise, civilian students who will not return to college next semester are advised to pay the remainder due on their publications fee and leave their addresses before departing.

Navy men who wish to purchase a Yack may see one of the following circulation managers: NROTC, Johnny Bacchus, Old East; Marine, Buck Tauscher, Pettigrew; Navy V-12, Boots Walker, Whitehead; Blair Gammon and Frank Walker, Navy V-12, Iredell.

UP Newsmen To Address Press Group Annual Meeting Here Thursday

Harrison Salisbury, foreign editor of the United Press, now home on leave, will address the opening session of the annual North Carolina Newspaper Institute on Thursday evening, January 25, in Gerrard hall.

Group meetings and panel discussions on daily and weekly newspapers will occupy the morning and afternoon sessions on Friday, January 26, and a luncheon, sponsored by the University, will be held at 1 p. m. in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn.

Mrs. Mark Ethridge, wife of the editor and publisher of the Louisville Courier-Times, Louisville, Ky., will be luncheon speaker. Dr. Phillips Russell, member of the faculty of the journalism department of the University, will serve as toastmaster.

Friday evening the institute will be the guest of Duke University at a dinner which will mark the close of the session. Dr. Julian S. Miller, president of the North Carolina press association and editor of the Charlotte Observer, will preside. Gov. R. Gregg Cherry will present prizes of war bonds to winners in the weekly newspaper contest.

Music Contest Deadline

January 30 is the deadline for all entries in the annual contest for North Carolina composers, both professional and amateur, which is sponsored by the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs.

Type of entries open for contestants in both professional and amateur divisions include hymn, chorus, song, piano solo, piano duo, solo instrument and instrumental ensemble.

Prominent Rabbi To Deliver Talk On First CRIL Program

Group Pacifist On Conscription

By Marianne Brown

Rabbi Stephen Wise will be the first speaker on a planned series of programs on the topic "Religion in the World," the Council for Religion in Life (CRIL), announced.

Scheduled to speak in Hill Hall, February 4, at 8 p. m., Rabbi Wise brings with him an enviable record of achievements.

Wise is chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council, founder and trustee of Near East Relief; founder of the Eastern Council of Liberal Rabbis; trustee of the National Child Labor Committee; and founder and president of the Jewish Institute of Religion.

The CRIL, a campus organization composed of representatives from every Carolina organization, is sponsoring this speaker series in an attempt to orientate the students with the topic, "Religion in the World."

The CRIL, speaking as individuals, rather than as representatives of the member groups concerned, took a pacifist stand on compulsory peacetime conscription. This is the reaction that might well have been expected from a body of this type; probably the old Interfaith Council would have leaned even more that way than the CRIL.

The second night of discussion almost passed without a definite stand. Then, in a close vote, it was agreed,

Mural Debates Set To Start First Round

With the deadline for entries set at midnight tonight the third Carolina intramural debate tourney will get underway Monday with its first round of tournament play, Rene Bernard, chairman of the Debate Council, announced.

As the Tar Heel went to press there had been four entries in the tournament with six or seven more anticipated before Sunday. The teams, comprised of from two to four persons, may place more than twenty speakers in the four rounds of debating schedule.

The council for Religion in Life has taken an active interest in the debate topic Resolved: That the United States should adopt a post-war program of military training for all able-bodied men, such training to begin between the ages of 18 and 21. Mary Lib Barwick, Secretary of the CRIL, has compiled a complete bibliography of the material which may be studied by the debaters for reference.

The CPU, likewise showing interest, sponsored Friday evening of last week an open forum on the peace-time conscription as a permanent policy. Faculty professors participated in the discussion.

UNC To Enter Nationwide Bond Contest

Opening Days Of Drive Are Successful

Sales for the first half-week in the War Coordination Board-sponsored "Miss Victory" contest totaled $3,372.20, with Louise Hull, sponsored by Alderman, leading the race with 10,695 votes. Running second is the Kappa Alpha sponsoree, Mary Hill Gaston, with 10,080 votes.

Third and fourth places are held by Nancy Kennickell, CICA, with 5,074 votes, and Marky Parsons, Pi Kappa Alpha, with 5,012.

Kitty Kelly, chairman of the War Coordination Board, sponsoring the drive to sell $25,000 in war bonds before February 14, expressed herself as gratified over sales the first four days of the drive. Sales for the first week in last year's campaign totaled $1,300.75.

Adding mystery and intrigue to the contest was the announcement Wednesday by the Law Association of its candidate, "Miss X," whose identity will not be made known until after results of the contest are published. However, full length pictures of the fair lady—with her face blacked out—have been posted in the "Y."

The "Miss Victory" bond drive at Carolina has taken on a national scope with the announcement that campus war bond chairmen may win national recognition for their college on a network radio show dedicated to the college and picked up on the campus. The college in the United States which reports by April 1 the best all-around war bond program, not just top sales, will be so rewarded.

The small college has as good a chance to win as the large one in this contest. The winner will be selected on the basis of college participation, group initiative and ingenuity, and how the college war bond program is tied up with the educational program.

Every campus war bond chairman who submits a report may submit at the same time a list of those individuals who have worked hard on the campus bond program and are deserving of a special Treasury citation for their work.

Entries from the 48 states will be judged by a committee of outstanding citizens and the winning college will be announced and honored about the end of April. Kitty Kelly has stated she will enter a report on Carolina's "Miss Victory" drive in this national contest.

She also announced that anyone See BEAUTY QUEEN, page 4.

Stage Crewmen and Costumers Do Work Behind The Scenes For 'The Gondoliers'

"The Gondoliers," to be presented on January 26-27 in Memorial Hall at 8:30 p. m., will fulfill all expectations for another gay and exciting Gilbert and Sullivan Production.

Despite the war time shortages of materials, costumes and scenery for the show, it will be as colorful as ever.

Scenery construction, under the supervision of Bob Burroughs and Betty Taylor, has gone on despite the handicaps of material and labor shortages.

Two highly stylized settings, designed by Foster Fitz-Simons, convey the spirit of the colorful 18th century Italian period.

The first act is set in a mythical Venetian piazza done in a variety of rich and vibrant colors. Adding interest to the design is the circular step unit surmounted by a twelve-foot fluted column.

The second and much more formalized setting is the interior of the Palace of Barataria which shows an interesting contrast with a color scheme of soft blue and white.

The costume department, under the direction of Irene Smart, is also feeling the pinch of wartime restrictions and is relying on the large stock of costumes on hand from previous productions for a great part of its material.

Many beautiful colors are attained by dyeing unbleached muslin and organdy, of which the girls costumes for the show are made.

In the first act, gay Italian peasant costumes predominate with the boys wearing loose knee breeches, bright sashes and socks.

The Comic Duke of Plaza Torro wears one of Lib Stoney's stylized wigs and is colorfully overdressed in keeping with his character. The Duchess wears a rust and green taffeta outfit with touches of black. Daughter Casilda retains her youth in a pastel pink and blue satin creation.

Showing their ability to meet any demand, the costumers fashioned the outfits for the Lord's Court in the Second act from pink and blue baby blankets.

Behind It All

The student body should be concerned with a recent practice of the student council (or rather should we say a rumored practice of the student governing organization) which conducts the Honor Council. It is not anything to cause the world to come to an end, but it is open for wide questioning.

In the first place, a review of student council procedure on the matter of trying cases should be established. Initially the council is closed. Members of the council are the only ones who are supposed to be admitted to the session. Whether or not this is a written rule we do not know, but one thing is certain—the common practice of the council has been to admit no persons except elected members to its trials.

This situation now exists in the council: Two students who were formerly on the council are sitting in on the trials. According to reports their participation in the discussions (if they can be called such) is considerable. This shouldn't be. Why should any particular student other than an Honor Council member be allowed to take part in the trial? If these particular students are allowed to sit in on the sessions, why shouldn't all the students be allowed to find out what goes on in the council?

The Tar Heel is not trying to criticize Charlie Frank Benbow, Bill Crisp or any of the members of the present council. In reality these student leaders might have the idea that such a procedure is all well and good. It is possible that they are of the opinion that these former members will be a great asset to the council. This may be true, but if the students who are now serving on the council and who were placed there by student elections are not capable enough for the job, the President of the Student Body should let someone know about it.

These old members can wield a mighty hand of influence in council sessions. The newly elected members will of course take a back seat if they think that the more experienced old members are given the upper hand. No members other than HONOR COUNCIL members elected by the student body should be in on these meetings, and if the council has changed the rules, the Student Body should be informed of the matter.

This is no light matter. The decisions of the Honor Council vitally affect every student at this University. If we come to the time when elected officers are not capable enough to make such decisions, the administration can take over lock, stock and barrel.
