Rear Admiral Hardison Will Speak On Graduation Program

Extra Activities Are To Be Investigated

Final Event Scheduled For February 24

One-Day Affair Is Streamlined

By Barron Mills
Combining for the first time the graduation exercises for civilian and military students, the February graduation ceremonies will be a one-day streamlined affair, Saturday, February 24, with Rear Admiral O. B. Hardison speaker for the occasion.

In this exercise all civilian and naval ROTC students graduating will receive degrees and all V-12s leaving the University will receive certificates of credit.

A full day program has been planned beginning at 11 o'clock in the morning with a review of the V-12 and ROTC unit in which Rear Admiral Hardison will probably review. At 1 o'clock a "dutch" luncheon will be held in the Carolina Inn for all graduating and their parents and friends.

The main graduating program will be held in Hill Hall Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, followed by a reception in Graham Memorial for the graduates, their guests and faculty members.

"Oby" Hardison, as the admiral was known when he attended the University, graduated in the class of 1911, receiving an A.B. degree. He was only 18 years old and the youngest in his class. After graduating he received an appointment to Annapolis and later served in World War I as a lieutenant on the battleship "Texas."

In 1923 he took an interest in naval aviation and went through flight training in Pensacola, Fla. Admiral Hardison became a skilled pilot and took a great pride in his work.

In the present war he served as Captain of the historic U. S. S. Enterprise and in the battle of Santa Cruz the American forces shot down 40 planes. Of this number Admiral Hardison's "Enterprise" shot down 30.

For his participation in this battle his carrier received the Presidential Unit Citation and Admiral Hardison was cited by the President and was given the Navy Cross. Other awards that Admiral Hardison has received include the Victory Medal, the Grand Fleet Clasp, the Air Defense Medal and the Service Fleet Clasp.

Last February Admiral Hardison was promoted to his present position of Chief of Naval Air Primary Training. His headquarters are in Kansas City and among his charges is the Pre-Flight School on the campus.

Among his many honors is one given to him by Lowell Thomas when he included him in his famous book entitled "These Men Shall Never Die."

Rear Admiral Hardison is a native North Carolinian. He was born in Wadesboro, attended the University from Fayetteville and is a brother of Mrs. C. B. Robson whose husband is head of the Political Science department.

War Bond Sales For Victory Contest Near Halfway Mark

Sales totaling $11,650.10 were reached as the campus-wide bond drive sponsored by the War Coordination Board neared the halfway mark Saturday. Goal in the current drive, to run through February 14, is $25,000, the cost of the Navy plane "Foolish Nobody's James."

Still in the lead in the race for the title "Miss Victory" is Mary Hill Gaston, sponsored by Kappa Alpha, who has a total of 27,734 votes, far ahead of Mochie Morton, sponsored by Delta Kappa Epsilon, in second place with 13,910 votes. Morton came up this week from nineteenth place.

Running third is Lou Hull, sponsored by Alderman, with 13,598 votes. Also in the upper brackets are Nancy Kennickell, fourth, sponsored by CICA, with 11,915 votes; Winkie White, fifth, co-sponsored by Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Delta Delta, with 7,904 votes; and Natalie Harrison, sixth, sponsored by Chi Psi, with 5,112 votes. Harrison came up this week from twenty-fourth place.

The mysterious "Miss X," whose identity is not to be disclosed by her sponsor, the Law School, until the night of the Victory Drive February 17, continues high in the running, holding seventh place with 5,005 votes.

A last minute avalanche of bond purchases is generally predicted for the final days of the drive, as each organization tries to put its candidate over the top. Kitty Kelly, chairman of the War Coordination Board sponsoring the drive, is quite pleased with sales so far, which are way ahead of those at this stage in the drive last year.

Three NROTC Students Take Annapolis Exams

Three trainees in the Naval ROTC unit at the University of North Carolina, who made highest ratings on naval examinations given here last week, will compete for one of the 10 non-Congressional appointments to the U. S. Naval Academy along with 78 other Naval ROTC trainees.

The trainees from the Carolina unit are: Robert Eric Comet, Monessen, Pa.; Leland Richard Stegemorton, East McKeesport, Pa.; and Joseph Arvin Walters, Jr., St. Louis, Mo. They will remain on duty here until they are notified of their acceptance or rejection after taking the examinations in April.

Each year three men with the highest ratings are chosen from each of the 27 Naval ROTC units to compete in a nationwide contest wherein the 10 highest receive appointments to Annapolis.

Students Buck Service Act

CPU Poll Shows Campus Opinion

Results of a student opinion poll conducted last week by the Carolina Political Union on the subject of a national service act reveal that a majority here believe present manpower shortages the fault of administrative mismanagement and over-optimism and are unwilling to solve the problem by drafting men into essential industry.

This is contrary to the findings of the Gallup poll published earlier this month which discovered a sizeable majority in all 48 states in favor of a service act.

Said Gallup: "As far back as March 1942 the vast majority of the public in all parts of the country favored the proposal that the government should have the power to tell each citizen what to do as his part in the war effort and require him or her to do it. . . . Moreover, at no time since our entry into the war has a majority of the public been opposed to the principle of national service, provided and assuming that the people were convinced of the need for it."

The most decisive opposition was expressed against the drafting of women between the ages of 18 and 45 for essential industry. To the query "To eradicate the manpower shortage, are you in favor of a national service act to draft all men between 18 and 65 and all women between 18 and 45 for essential industry?"

Magazine To Be Out Some Time This Week

The third issue of the Carolina Magazine, which promises to be a large improvement over former issues, is expected to be distributed some time this week according to the editors.

With the usual conglomeration of humor, so-called literature, photos and features the Magazine has a special theme which even the printers are not aware of . . . so say the editors again.

South Building Plans To Clamp Down On Neglect Of Academic Work

A committee to look into the academic eligibility of students who participate in extra-curricular programs has just been formed and will begin functioning at an early date next semester, according to an official South building statement.

Dean of Administration, R. B. House, found that some students are neglecting their academic work to participate in other activities.

The committee will work in cooperation with and along the same lines as the Athletic Committee. The University catalogue calls for a committee of this type on page 97.

In a letter written to members of the faculty and committee Dean House stated the following facts.

"The academic deans are always having difficulties trying to persuade students to make a reasonable apportionment of their time; but nobody is functioning under the legislation to stop students from holding student positions when, as a matter of fact, they are not functioning as students at all. "Perhaps if students are denied the privilege of holding office and functioning during the term just as athletes are subject to such discipline, we might get more effective warning across to them."

"At any rate, I noticed this year one man deliberately devoted himself to the Yackety Yack until he had flunked out of the University, and the same situation applies more or less to a woman student, though I believe she has been allowed to continue in the University."

"In fact, I don't know but what students should be declared ineligible for dances and a lot of other social functions if they are not doing reasonably good work."

"Please do not take remarks made in this letter as conclusions on my own part. We simply have not had machinery to function as definitely on other student activities as we have had to function on athletic activities, and we are allowing situations to develop which come very near resulting in tragedy from time to time."

Dance Committee Adopts New Policy On Case Decisions

The University Dance Committee voted at a recent meeting to adopt a new policy of publishing in the Tar Heel an anonymous report of the decision made on any case referred to it for disciplinary action.

The following is a statement concerning the most recent case. "A former student who is not now enrolled in school attended a dance on the campus while under the influence of alcohol. He was approached by several members of the dance committee and asked to leave the dance. He refused to leave in spite of repeated requests, and, in fact, became very discourteous in manner."

"His case was referred to the Dance Committee for action, and in view of the fact that the subject man is expected to return to school here next term, the decision was that he be suspended from all dances held on the campus between now and the beginning of the summer term on July 1, 1945."

Literary Club

will be the book for discussion when the Carolina Literary Society meets this coming Thursday in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock and continue until the book has been thoroughly discussed and members have nothing more to say. The public is invited.

Carolina Political Union Brings TVA Head To Campus Scheduled To Start Talk At 8:30

"An American Development Program" will be the topic of the address TVA Chairman David E. Lilienthal will deliver tonight at 8:30 at Hill Hall under the sponsorship of the Carolina Political Union.

LILIENTHAL

Lilienthal will also speak at a meeting sponsored by the Institute for Research in Social Science at 3 p. m. in room 403 of the Alumni building. The session is open to the public and will be followed by a tea.

The speaker has made front page headlines not only as the guiding force of the vast and successful $750,000,000 Tennessee project, but as the recipient of continuous attacks by Tennessee's friend of the canning interests, Senator McKellar. Last year the senator was successful in pushing through Congress a provision directed at Lilienthal requiring senatorial confirmation of all appointments to executive agencies carrying salaries of $4,500 or more. Proposal

The feud springs from a controversy over the erection of the Douglas Dam which Lilienthal had proposed in order to obtain an additional 100,000 kilowatts of power for aluminum expansion. The land to be flooded covered 12,000 acres owned by influential canning interests, friends of McKellar. Having fought an unsuccessful battle on this issue, the senator has since attempted to attach a "dog collar" to TVA to make it run to Congress for every cent of its expenditures. McKellar, attempting to put the New Dealer under his thumb, was chairman of the appropriations committee.

Discussion It is supposed that Lilienthal will discuss his formula for democratic development through government cooperation with the people. He believes in the centralization of government and the decentralization of the administration of its agencies, as is exemplified by the TVA.

The speech will be followed by a question-and-answer period, after which a reception will be held at Graham Memorial in order that the public may meet and converse informally with the TVA chief.

Hinton James Day To Be Celebrated At Convocation

Students and former students of the University will join together February 12 in commemorating the arrival 150 years ago of the first student to enroll at Chapel Hill. The exercises will be held in Memorial Hall as a morning convocation of faculty and students.

High-lighting the program here will be talks by former Congressman William B. Umstead '16, of Durham, who is President of the University Alumni Association, and Douglas Hunt, chairman of the student Sesquicentennial Committee. President Graham and Dean House also will take part in the exercises.

Hinton James, the first student, arrived in Chapel Hill on February 12, 1795—some four weeks after the University was officially opened on January 15, 1795. James came from Wilmington and, following graduation, was a distinguished engineer.

Since Hinton James a total of 44,802 students have matriculated at the University for its regular courses. Thousands of others also have come to Chapel Hill for summer schools, short courses, institutes or have taken correspondence work. Of the 44,802 matriculates, 34,432 are living. Approximately a third of the total matriculates were graduated; others, although they have not received degrees, are nevertheless counted as Carolina alumni and alumnae.

It was the arrival of Hinton James in Chapel Hill which gives the University of North Carolina its claim to being the oldest existing state university. The University of Georgia was chartered earlier than North Carolina. See HINTON JAMES, page 4.

Conduct Set For Finals

Council Explains Exam Procedure

Meeting together to discuss the order in class rooms during examinations, the Student Council and Faculty Executive committee drew up a set of statements which both agree should expedite the effectiveness of the Honor Code.

The full statement from the joint group follows:

Full Statement Recently when the Faculty Executive committee and the Student Council met jointly, order in class rooms during examinations was the main topic of discussion. Because most cases of proven cheating have occurred in disorderly and noisy class rooms, those at the meeting agreed that a statement be made for the guidance of the instructor during the examination, and be presented to the faculty for its consideration and approval. The following points were unanimously accepted at the meeting:

- (1) The instructor sets the questions only on the work for which the students have been made responsible.
- (2) In testing successively two or more sections of the same class, he gives different questions in each section examination.
- (3) He arranges for the students' alternate seating when the size of the room permits; when alternate seating is impossible and when the test is "true-false" or "multiple-choice," he gives alternate examinations.
- (4) He answers any proper query about the meaning of the question.
- (5) He maintains order and quiet.
- (6) He keeps in touch with

Playmakers Ready For Experimentals

Sam Selden, head of the Drama Department, has announced that the 101st Bill of Experimental Productions, to be presented Thursday, February 8, at 7:30 in the Playmaker Theatre, will be composed of the following student plays: "From Childhood's Hour" by Randy Brooks, "Joyful Noise" by Phyllis Sullivan, and "Tears of Poison" by Frances Cheshire.

"From Childhood's Hour," which is being directed by Joan Martin, is a psychological tragedy built around a medically discharged soldier. Sullivan's play, a comedy about an orthodox minister who is shocked by the antics of his congregation, is being directed by Martha Gillespie. Lib Stoney is directing "Tears of Poison," a domestic drama of a woman whose true character is revealed when her husband disrupts her comfortable home life by joining the army.
