

CAROLINA CHATTER

By
CARROLL POPLIN

Matters are getting plenty serious when a student can't go through a small portion of the Pre-Flight area to attend a Carolina baseball game. It certainly would save the student the trouble of climbing the fence or traveling halfway around the campus to enter another gate.

Speaking from my own experience, it is impossible to persuade a cadet to let you go through his guarded area into the baseball diamond. You've either got to look through the fence or take the chance of entering another gate and possibly interrupting the ball game. It seems to me that it would be much simpler to let the students go through the main gate whether it is a practice game or the real McCoy.

I personally don't see the harm in passing over only around 30 yards of the Pre-Flight area to enter the so-called Carolina baseball field. Something surely can be worked out before the regular season gets underway. Even a Tar Heel pass doesn't seem to be any good any more.

Murnick At Bainbridge

The war hit deeper into athletics at Carolina last week when Coach Joe Murnick, varsity boxing coach for the past three years reported for induction into the Navy. Murnick is receiving his boot training at Bainbridge, Maryland. Joe succeeded Mike Ronman as head ring mentor and has tutored his last two teams to the Southern conference championship.

Murnick himself was one of the cleverest boxers in Carolina ring annals. He captured the strong 1938 team and went undefeated in six dual meets.

GERMAN YOUTH

problems of postwar Germany.

"We have to go back in history to the years 1929, '31, '32 and '33 to understand why the German youth were psychologically ready for Hitler and his Nazi movement," Mr. Hall stated, "at that time there were 30,000,000 unemployed out of a total of 63,000,000 persons—or approximately half of the total population of the country. He compared the conditions which existed then in the United States and Germany thus: "Here in America, with the same number of unemployed you only had one-fourth of your total population unemployed." Consequently, as Mr. Hall stated, the youth of Germany were much more disillusioned than the youth of the United States. He said that he had actually seen boys lighting cigarettes with million-mark bills on street-corners during those years.

Mr. Hall stated that this time was especially ripe for Hitler's Nazi movement because the people of Germany wanted a change—any change, and they could not see how any change could be any worse.

He divided the youth of Germany into two classes: those that were of college age when Hitler came to power. He said these were the most fanatical since they could remember the lean depression years, but he also said that we would have to worry least about

George Stirnweiss Is Classified 1-A; Signs With Yankees

George Stirnweiss, former Carolina second sacker and now a potent key-stone performer for the New York Yankees has been classified 1-A and it is doubtful whether the fleet-footed diamond star will be able to finish the '46 campaign.

Stirnweiss has already signed his contract and has reported for spring training with the Yankees and is handling second base duties. Stirny led the American league in stolen bases last season by edging out George Case of the Washington Senators.

Gridders Don Heavy Togs In Rugged Drills

Assistant football coaches Reid and Murphy have been busy trimming the spring grid squad down to a reasonably convenient number to work with and at the present the squad is 70 strong.

The football prospects will don heavy equipment this week and rugged drills are slated to get underway now since the squad spent the first part of the spring drills in calisthenics and shaping workouts.

Snavely Is Away

Coach Carl Snavely is still absent from the drills, but the newly appointed grid mentor is expected back soon to direct the spring practice sessions. Prospects seem bright for Carolina's '46 football team, but its too early to predict the outcome of this year's grid campaign.

them because of the eight million Germans killed during this war, six million were of this age class.

Mr. Hall said that we would have to help those who have no memories of the lean depression years re-educate themselves. "This is important," he explained, "the German people must be educated from within and not from without."

He frowned on Sumner Welles's idea of partitioning Germany and Morgethau's plan of destroying German industry because he said that to rebuild a country you have to have a country to be proud of rebuilding and a country needs industry to provide jobs for the unemployed.

Mr. Hall concluded his CRIL speech by saying, "The Bible says 'God created Man in his own image' and if I remember right, it doesn't say 'All men except the Germans and the Japanese.'"

Intramural Softball Starts Into Its Second Week Of Play

Intramural softball will launch into its second week of play as a full slate of games will be run off each afternoon this week.

Four mural loops have been formed with six teams participating in each league.

Vance Is Hot

Vance appeared to be the hottest team in the League A loop by tallying a grand total of 63 runs in two games which is a new scoring record. The V-12ers ran wild in their first two contests, but in Wednesday's tilt with the Phi Gams, the Navy men are expected to run into some stiff competition.

Phi Kappa Sigma pushed into the lead in the League A loop by trimming the Phi Deltas and Med School No. 1 for a good start toward league honors.

Sigma Chi nosed out ATO and Steele lost to Zeta Psi in the other top battles.

The schedule for the coming week is listed below. All teams are urged to furnish referees on days their team is idle.

Tar Heels Win Sunday's Tilt By Score 7-4

With three practice games already behind them, Carolina's baseball team is prepping hard for its first Ration League game of the 1945 season. The initial encounter is slated to be reeled off here April 7 with State.

This game with State will be the first of 19 tilts on deck for Coach Bunn Hearn's charges, and included among the opponents will be the Naval Academy. The clash with Navy will be at Annapolis April 18 and will be the fourth game of the season for the Tar Heels. Also on the Carolina schedule for this season are Duke, Cherry Point, Camp Lejeune, Greensboro ORD, and North Carolina Pre-Flight.

The schedule will run through to June 9.

DiChiara Stars

In tuneup games over the week-end, Carolina and Pre-Flight split honors, with the Cloudbusters winning by a score of 4-2 Saturday afternoon and the Tar Heels copping Sunday's battle, 7-4. Three Pre-Flight pitchers set Carolina back with five hits in the game Saturday while collecting seven off five Tar Heel hurlers. Cookie DiChiara was the big gun for the Tar Heels by collecting two hits in the setback and driving in all his team's runs.

"Red" Hughes, first string player at the shortstop position, will miss action for a week or more due to a twisted ankle which he received in the Pre-Flight game Saturday while sliding into second base.

McAlrath Looks Good

The Cloudbusters rapped on Nelson for three runs in the initial inning for a comfortable lead that was never threatened. McAlrath performed well in his short two-inning stay on the mound by fanning four straight batters. Haine, Forrest and Andrews shared pitching chores for the Tar Heels. Bosik was the man with the heavy stick for the winners as he pounded a triple to account for three tallies.

Coach Bunn Hearn's charges gave Pre-Flight her first practice game licking Sunday afternoon as the Tar Heels overcame an earlier lead to carve a 7-4 victory. The Cloudbusters touched Elliot for three hits and three runs in the first two innings. Coach Hearn sent in Johnny Richardson to cool the fire and the side-arm twirler held the Birdmen hitless in his three innings on the hill. Flick had the Carolina batters puzzled for the first six innings and allowed only three bingles, until the Tar Heels put two runs across the plate in the seventh. Still trailing by one tally, the Hearnmen put on a five-run scoring spree in the eighth frame to sew up the contest. Thompson, Elger, Braxington and Chappell collected hits to count for the winning markers.

Coach Hearn used four pitchers in the nine-inning tilt and the hurlers combined allowed the Pre-Flighters only five hits. Elliot opened the fracas and pitched two innings. Richardson followed and worked until the fifth when Allan Jones relieved him. Pete Lilloy finished on the mound and gave up only one hit and a run to gain credit for the victory.

Inter-Squad Court Tourney Nears Finish

Cliff Tuttle Is Heavy Favorite

Tennis drills will step up this week in preparation for the Tar Heels first match with William and Mary which is just two weeks away.

At the present the racquetmen are engaged in an inter-squad tournament which is now rounding into its final stage. Cliff Tuttle, a pre-tourney favorite, and the only experienced player on the squad is showing up to expectations and is a heavy favorite to cop the championship. Others looking good in the engagement include Duke Wilder, Vernon Cartner, Bud Sandlin and Larry Probst.

Coach Kenfield is expected to have his team pretty well picked out by the end of the week and at the present no positions are sewed up.

A few practice matches with the Pre-Flight school might be on tab before the Carolina netmen face their first opponent next month. These practice encounters are merely designed to experience the players.

Coed Tennis Team Selected From Big Number Of Players

A large number of coed tennis aspirants answered Miss Blanchette's first practice call last Saturday and with the help of Coach Kenfield, a girls' net team was chosen. Shirley Dickinson, president of the Women's Athletic Association, headed the large turnout. Others rounding out the varsity

"Once in a restaurant, I was sitting in front of a boy when Germans entered suddenly. In a twinkling of an eye, he put his revolver in the pitcher, and very innocently allowed himself to be searched by the Nazis, who found nothing. Of course he paid his check quickly and escaped in the street, for perhaps the manager was a Laval partisan. It was a gruelling life."

These former members of the underground movement could tell many more incidents of their acts of outwitting the Nazis, but they are more interested in completing training here and returning to the fight in their country's struggle for freedom.

fighting. Once the camp was attacked by German soldiers of the mountain division and 30 of the group taken prisoners. A few days later, word spread that two German high officials were going to tour that region.

As Cadet B describes it, "We waited for them in a very deserted part of the road, hidden behind rocks, and saw their grey car coming up the twisting road."

"We jumped them and in a moment had them tied down. We brought them back to our camp, where with hair cut and old clothes they spent eight days with us working hard, cutting wood or cleaning the 'chalet.' Then we sent spokesmen to the 'Kommendatur' asking for our 30 boys in exchange for the Nazi officers. We won, our boys were free again, and we sent back the Nazis who had lost their 'German arrogance.'"

Later Cadet B left the Maquis to begin work as an "agent de liaison." All day long he traveled on trains, carrying mail, orders, suppressed newspapers, arms and explosives. This became so dangerous that he changed his identification five times in escaping arrest.

"You cannot imagine those nights in the waiting-room of stations," he says. "We could trust nobody. The old man quietly smoking his pipe is the full backing of E. L. Mackie, dean of students, went to President Benbow, who immediately agreed to issue the call for a freshman meeting. They agreed to define a freshman as a student who has not been here or in any other college, more than two semesters.

Realizing the difficulty of this task under the present wartime program, the council issued this statement to the Tar Heel: "The organization of the freshman class CAN work and be a great benefit to the freshmen and the whole student body if the freshmen will give their full support and cooperation."
