

Better Weather, Horses Is Desire Of Shirley Hartzell

Shirley Hartzell, BWOC editor of the Carolina Mag who will soon publish her last edition at Carolina, finds two things that Carolina needs most—better weather and horses. She spent two years at Sullins being scared of horses, but—"When I move to California I'm gonna get me a horse."

California is just one of Shirley's long list of used-to-lives, along with Boulder, Colorado, where she was born, and Denver, Sandusky, Ohio, and now Bristol, Tennessee.

California didn't seem half as wonderful to Shirley when she was there as it does to her now. Then the only thing she liked about it was the rose parade, but now she spends half her life wishing she were back.

When asked what she would like most to accomplish this spring, Shirley replied that she'd like to see "more people working on the Carolina Mag. Something ought to be done on the campus to help people get into things. Some girls who want to do things are too shy. Maybe it could be worked out in orientation, to get girls to do things."

In her rare spare minutes Shirley may be found at the Pi Phi house. She pledged Pi Beta Phi in October a year ago and is now a busy member. Her pet hate is tap dancing. "Really I'm the despair of the class. I room with a tap dancer, but it doesn't do any good. If I weren't taking tap dancing I wouldn't mind gym so."

Incidentally—in this rebel territory—Shirley is a Republican. And along with that comes a feud with TVA. Her father is in public utilities so the TVA keeps the Hartzells pretty much on the go as it creeps over wider territories. For a while he was in journalism. Perhaps that is where Shirley got the interest she has today. She wants to go into advertising after graduation—New York or Milwaukee, if possible. "You never know until you get out of school, but I would like to get more newspaper experience. It's the best experience in the world."

In addition to literary talent Shirley is also artistically inclined. She majored in art for two years at Sullins before changing to journalism here at Carolina. Maybe the fact that she was day student editor of Sullins annual had something to do with the change.

Adventure Her most exciting adventure, says Shirley, was one time when she climbed on a gentle looking horse which took off at top speed with Shirley clinging desperately. Everybody else around was an expert horseman so it was a double disgrace.

Dogs have been her main pets. There was one in particular which reflected the Hartzell personality—Danny, a cocker. These two similar personalities clashed, as is so often the case, and so Danny had to be given away. "Nuisance," says Shirley.

Advisement Center Here At Carolina Helps Veterans

When the U. S. Veterans Administration set up the Vocational Advisement Center here in Peabody, it did not create an employment bureau. It will provide training for veterans which will enable them to lead useful civilian lives. It is not concerned with employment for any veterans other than those for which it has furnished training. Since there are many kinds of jobs, training for the individual soldier will differ widely. The returning serviceman may be trained in a college, a garage, an office, an electric plant, a factory, store, restaurant or theatre.

Every serviceman and servicewoman, whether white or colored, who, having entered any of the armed forces after September 16, 1940, and being now discharged, will be provided adequate living accommodations by the center for whatever length of time he needs to stay in Chapel Hill.

Every person who is helped by the center will go through a similar procedure: Presenting himself at the center's offices in Peabody Hall, he will be interviewed by Ben Husbands, vocational adviser for the Veterans Administration, who will examine his papers, including a "Physical Condition" statement, and who will learn his family and educational status, his capabilities and what occupation he prefers.

If Mr. Husbands thinks it desirable, the applicant will undergo a series of tests by the University Testing Service, conducted by Dr. W. D. Perry, as an adjunct to the Veterans Administration.

Mr. Husbands, with or without the aid of the testing service, decides upon an "occupational objective" in every case. Mack E. Kelly, associate of Mr. Husbands in the Veterans Administration will help place the veterans in training. This is done through contracts between the government and the individual or organization conducting the training program. Finally, the Veterans Administration keeps a watchful eye on the trainees until they finish their course of "apprenticeship."

Alumni In England Save To Buy Books Published At Hill

Carolina alumni in England, headed by Lieut. Archibald Henderson, Jr., of the Second Combat Wing of the AAF, a former UNC tennis champion here, have begun a campaign to buy from 75 to 100 books published by the University Press for some library in France, such as the one in Lyons which the Germans stripped.

Lieutenant Henderson, in a letter to William T. Couch, Director of the Press, described the plan of about 40 alumni who attended a Hinton James Day dinner in London which coincided with the Hinton James Day celebration at the University last month.

Harold J. Laski, professor of political science in the University of London was principal speaker at the London dinner, according to Lieutenant Henderson.

Dr. Laski praised the University Press highly and expressed a hope that the alumni in England and France would contribute. He emphasized his belief that they would thereby definitely be carrying on the Carolina tradition.

Senate To Debate Russian Proposal

When the Dialectic Senate convenes in Gerrard Hall tomorrow night at 9 o'clock, the problem to be debated will be the Russian proposal to draft German labor for compulsory reconstruction in Russia after the war.

All visitors are welcome.

Institute Of Human Relations Names Speakers On Program

A number of well-known authorities representing varying shades of social, economic and political opinion are listed on the program of the University of North Carolina's eighth Institute of Human Relations to be held April 3-10.

Three of the speakers, one now a member of the UNC faculty, another on leave and a third a former faculty member, will be among the 15 speakers featured at the coming Institute, which is sponsored by the YMCA.

Dr. Ervin Hexner, of the political science department, a noted authority on world cartels, will be among the six principal speakers, leading discussion one evening on the stabilization of world economy.

Dr. Rex Winslowe, on leave in Washington from the commerce faculty, will discuss stabilization of national economy, and Edward Bernstein, formerly a member of the commerce faculty and now with the division of monetary research of the Treasury Department in Washington, will lead discussions on finance.

Planned as a social emphasis program with sufficient scope and depth to capture the attention and thought of the entire campus, the coming Institute will be the eighth held here since 1927. The last was in 1943.

General purpose of the Institute is to awaken on the campus a social consciousness of the major problems in the fields of international relations, human relations in business and industry and inter-racial relations. The week-long event is financed entirely by funds raised especially for its budget, independent of any University funds.

Harry F. Comer is director of the Institute and Edith Owen and Douglas Hunt are student co-chairmen. Theme of the Institute is "Prices of Peace."

Principal speakers, those conducting the evening public assemblies,

Board To Meet

A meeting of the War Coordination Board is slated to be held in Graham Memorial at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

'POINT CHARTRES'

"Point Chartres," the winning play in the Carolina Dramatic Association's contest for servicemen in North Carolina is being directed by Elinor Martin and will be presented again at the Carolina Dramatic Association Festival, April 12-14 along with one of the other plays on this bill.

will include six widely known authorities on social and economic matters. They are Dr. Eduard Heimann, of the faculty of the New School for Social Research in New York; Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, of the Justice Department in Washington; Dr. Ervin P. Hexner, of the political science faculty of the University; Senator J. W. Fulbright, of Arkansas, who will speak three consecutive evenings as the 1945 Weil lecturer; Morris Ernst, of the law firm Greenbaum, Wolf & Ernst, New York, and counsel for the Civil Liberties Union; and Dr. W. T. Stace, of the philosophy faculty of Princeton University.

In addition to the evening assemblies there will be a number of special forums, panels and classroom seminars conducted by other guest leaders. Probably the most popular feature of the week's program will be the class seminars. Under the leadership of the guest speakers students will use their class hours to study the relations between their fields of study as compared with those of the lecturer.

Widely known throughout the state and nation, the Institute has in former years attracted many visitors from distant places, but transportation difficulties will probably limit their attendance this year.

AMERICAN HEROES
by JULIAN OLLENDORFF

WHEN the tanker Virginia was struck by enemy torpedoes and exploded, Mike Kuzma, seaman, suffered severe burns in the blazing gasoline. He ignored his hurts, however, when he saw two shipmates worse off. He succeeded in towing both men out of the flaming area and supporting them until picked up by a rescue crew. Kuzma was awarded a Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in War Bonds must be sold to replace that tanker and the fuel.
