Phi To Be Revived At Mass Meeting In Gerrard Hall Tonight

Tar Heel Phi Committee To Submit Constitution

Historic Society, Organized in 1795, Will Again Function as Student Forum

A mass meeting for all interested persons will be held tonight at 8:30 in Gerrard Hall to re-organize the historic Philanthropic Assembly, the oldest student activity on the campus. Jack Lackey, head of the special Tar Heel Phi committee, announced that the full matter of re-organization will be decided by vote at the mass meeting.

The committee will submit a constitution to be accepted or amended, and a temporary membership committee will be elected to pass on the qualifications of all who wish to become charter members. Other committees will be elected to perform such functions as preparing the Phi Hall on the fourth floor of New East, nominating officers and arranging for the first regular meeting.

The membership committee will interview all applicants this week and choose the charter members. All members chosen will have a vote at the first regular meeting held in the Phi Hall November 20, when permanent officers will be elected according to the constitution adopted at the mass meeting. After the permanent officers are elected, the Phi will be declared officially organized and will begin functioning as a campus deliberative assembly to deal with matters of concern to the students.

As regulations now stand, any student may join the Phi. At one time membership was restricted to those who lived in the eastern part of the state, but this rule is no longer in effect. Membership in the Dialectic Senate, the Phi's sister society, will not prohibit membership in the Phi, as was once the case.

The re-organization of the Phi has been approved by Chancellor R. B. House, who says the administration is very happy that the historic society will again serve the University.

The Phi, in addition to its impressive hall, together with the Di owns the best portrait collection in North Carolina. These portraits have been accumulated by the Phi and Di for more than a century, and now are valued at over a hundred thousand dollars.

The Phi and Di were organized in 1795, the same year the University opened its doors to students. Since that time the two societies have sponsored every kind of student activity. For many years membership in one of the two societies was required by the University, and the societies exercised all the duties and powers of student government. The societies sponsored the first student publication, the first forensic activities, the first dances, the first library for students, and for over a hundred years were the central organization which regulated all student activities.

Over half the governors of the state have been members of the societies, and every major office in the state and nation has been filled by a Di or Phi alumnus.

A member of the Tar Heel committee said, "We feel that the Phi can re-capture some of its past responsibilities and power, and become a valuable asset to the campus. With a greatly increased student body, the need for such an organization has become a necessity. We urge every student to attend the mass meeting and apply for membership, for the Phi promises to become a powerful force for the betterment of the students and the University."

Registration Figures Top 3,000 Mark

640 Vets Included In New Enrollment

By Mary Hill Gaston

Registration figures for the November-December term released by Chancellor R. B. House show a total of 3,040 students, an increase of more than 700 over the enrollment in the term just ended.

Civilian enrollment alone this term exceeds the total enrollment here last session. Civilians number 2,591, and the 449 Navy and Marine men on campus bring the total to 3,040.

Opening of the November term brought approximately 400 veterans back to the campus. Veterans now number 640, according to the figures just released.

Speculation in South Building is that there is a very definite possibility that enrollment here will go beyond the pre-war peak by September, 1946. This peak came during the fall quarter of 1940, five years ago, when 4,098 students were enrolled at Carolina. Wartime enrollment hit the bottom in the spring of 1944, when 754 civilian men and 747 women, a total of 1,501, were registered.

This speculation hinges on the big jump made in the number of registrants from September 3 to October 29, when registration for this term began. Graduation on October 27 meant the loss of approximately 150 students, bringing the total enrollees down to about 2,200. Over 800 new students showed up for registration this term to bring the total beyond the 3,000 mark.

Figures for this term show a decrease of 63 in the number of military men on campus.

Playmakers Announce Cast For Next Major Production

The Carolina Playmakers have announced the tentative cast for their next major production, T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," to be presented Dec. 5, 6, 7, 8. This is said to be the first poetic tragedy in English since Shakespeare, and will be directed by Mr. Foster Fitz-Simons of the Dramatic Art department.

Douglas Hume, professor of Dramatic Art, will play the leading role of Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury. James Riley is cast as the First Priest, James Crutchfield as the Second Priest and Wayne Bowman as the Third Priest. James W. Geiger is the Herald.

John Shinn, Hanford Henderson, Robert Armstrong and Leroy Love are cast in the dual roles of the four Tempters and the four Knights. Attendees are Colbert Leonard and Harvey Bumgardner.

The Chorus of the Women of Canterbury consists of Mary Jo Cain, Halie Dockery, Frances Pepper, Barbara Illig, Isabel Noblitt, Lois Warnchuis, Elizabeth Pinckney, Madeline Cooley, Marjorie Martin, Mary Jo Twitty, Myra Sklarey and Annette Fulton. Previously scheduled to be the next Playmaker major production was "Liliom," but late last week word was received from Samuel French that the play had been withdrawn from production because of the Broadway run of "Carousel."

Sadie Hawkins Day Success, Campus Returns To Normal

Carolina students feel mighty peculiar walking around in shoes, pressed pants, city slicker clothes. It doesn't seem natural to the thousands who turned out last Friday Dogpatch style in the greatest upside-down sex upheaval Carolina ever saw.

Girls showed more interest than the boys in the affair, with three sororities walking off with the afternoon prizes: ADPi, Chi O. and Pi Phi. In case you never guessed, that was Mr. Young of the Music Department as the Mayor, for which he was awarded one (slightly dead) herring, and Mr. Jurgenson of the Dramatic Art Department was Marryin' Sam, for which he was awarded a bottle of beer, which he really needed after the ordeal.

Nancy Greenwall, the girl behind the scenes in the afternoon activities, announced a picture contest for all those who took snaps of the events of the day. There will be an exhibition, probably at Graham Memorial, as soon as the pictures get in to her at 109 McIver.

A lot of people walked off with prizes last Friday. At Woollen Gym

Pat Hackett wowed them as the official Daisy May, Gloria Chapman as Moonbeam, Del Leatherman as Lil Abner, Ken Willis as Black Rufe, and as Hairless Joe.

Credit for the day's success go to CICA, UVA, and Graham Memorial, sponsors of the events. Special mention goes to the following, according to Nancy Greenwall: to Dick Koral, for publicity so good the dance had to be moved from the Grill to Woollen Gym the last minute, to Bob Levin, who edited the Daily Dogpatch, to Vick Padgett and Ann Nick who lent their artistic talent, to Joe Woodruff and Lindy Beshman for their publicity stunts as Lil Abner and Daisy Mae, Don English who among other things got the horses, to Martha Rice and Ray Levine who put on almost all of the evening's affair, to Paul Young, Kai Jurgenson, Dean House, Dean Mackey, Prof. Hobbs, Capt. Hazlett, Fred Flagler, and Bob Morrison, to the town merchants who donated the prizes, and to many others who really "put out" to make Friday last a memorable day.
