Construction Begins On Commerce School; Hope To Finish In '51

In the last few weeks contractors have been working hard in the old parking lot behind Memorial Hall on the groundwork for The School of Business Administration's new buildings.

The buildings will be placed opposite the triangle composed of Manning, Murphy, and Saunders Halls so that they will complement these three buildings. Contractors hope to complete the work by September, 1951.

The main building, opposite Manning Hall, will be the administrative building with the two other buildings housing classrooms and laboratories. The center building will also contain lecture rooms for conference, institutional meetings, and seminars. The laboratories will be used for marketing, accounting, finance, production, and personal classes.

Head of the department of commerce and economics, John B. Wessley said that Bingham Hall, which was once adequate for all of the School of Commerce's work, has been overcrowded recently to a great extent.

"Only 50% of the classes are held in Bingham, while the temporary buildings hold 50% of the Commerce Department's classes," he said.

The school, which was organized in 1919, originally held classes in Alumni, but then transferred to Saunders and finally landed in Bingham.

The School of Commerce was admitted into membership of the exclusive American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business in 1926. By action of the Board of Trustees, the name of the School of Commerce was changed to The School of Business Administration recently.

Plans Are Released For Gray Inaugural

"The State and Its University" will be the general theme for the inauguration of Gordon Gray as president of the Consolidated University, to be held on the three campuses October 8, 9, and 10.

Preliminary plans for the three day inauguration period have just been announced by William B. Umstead, Durham, chairman of the Trustees' Committee; Acting President W. D. Carmichael, Jr., and W. H. Piemonts, director of the inauguration.

Enrollment To Be High For 1950-51

Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong indicated that there would be 7000 to 7500 students enrolled in the University for the school year starting in September, or about the same as last year's enrollment.

Dean Armstrong pointed out that there would be fewer veterans this year, but still a large number of students. The policy of admitting not more than 15% out-of-state students in any term had to be continued because of the large number of applications and the housing shortage.

Asked about the war situation and its effect on enrollment Dean Armstrong commented that selective service won't affect enrollment unless a new law is passed. Under the present law, the Selective Service Act forbids induction of a person under 19. It will also postpone the induction for the entire academic year of students already enrolled.

The local draft board for Orange County is in Hillsboro and is set up so that it will be able to meet the needs and quotas that the government has made. Students that are far from home may go to the Hillsboro board if they have been ordered to take physicals by their local board, and if they request it.

The present draft bill calls for those in the 19-25 age bracket, including those who did not serve 12 months in the previous war. Merchant marines are classified as non-veterans.

Out-of-state students who become 18 while here in school, can register for the services in South Building at the Admissions Office, 208.

New Dean To Arrive Soon

The new head of the School of Business Administration will arrive here at Chapel Hill about the second week in August. Dean Thomas H. Carroll and his family will come to live here after a short vacation.

Dean Carroll has already been to Chapel Hill, visiting here in July with University officials. The former assistant dean at Harvard Business School and former dean of the College of Business Administration since 1946 at Syracuse will assume his new duties September 1.

Dean Carroll replaces Dean Dupley D. Carroll who will be Dean Emeritus of the School and also professor of Economics.

Heat Recording Device Installed In Planetarium

A device that keeps a continuous record of the intensity of the sunlight in Chapel Hill has been installed in the Morehead Planetarium of the University.

Visitors who pass through one of the basement exhibition rooms can see written out on a paper record the increase of sunlight from sunrise to noon and the decline to sunset, with interesting interruptions as clouds block off the direct light of the sun.

DR. DAVID M. BEIGHTS, CPA, head of the Department of Accounting in Florida State University, who is the principal instructor at the Institute in C.P.A. Problems which opened at the University Monday, July 24, and continues for five weeks.

CPA Meet Held Here

Beginners in the accounting profession with good training are making twice the salaries they did five years ago, and there is an opportunity in this field, particularly in government agencies and institutions.

Such is the considered opinion of Dr. David M. Beights, head of the Accounting Department at Florida State University, who is in charge of a five-week Institute in Certified Accounting Problems that opened at the University this week for the benefit of those wishing to prepare for the CPA examination.

"The increased controls due to the war effort are creating an increased demand for well trained accountants," said Dr. Beights.

"While the supply is catching up with the demand for accountants in general, there is still a great lack of men in the top-flight brackets, where the salaries range from $10,000 to $12,000 and much more in many cases," he said.

Dr. Beights said the tendency of colleges and universities is to put greater emphasis on professional training for the CPA certificate. More attention is being given to economics, statistics, finance and law. The man with a bachelor's degree, plus the CPA certificate, can usually demand a much higher salary than one with a master's degree without a CPA certificate, other things being equal, he said.

"Many of the leading universities, recognizing the need for broader and more thorough training for accountants, are adjusting their curricula accordingly, and some are adding a fifth year in graduate and professional training," Dr. Beights said.

The enrollment in accounting students rose rapidly after World War II, but is leveling off now, he added. "The demands on ac-

Presidents of the leading universities, colleges and learned societies in the United States and foreign countries are being invited to attend the celebration. A general statement from the committee on arrangements says "everything feasible will be done to re-impress upon the consciousness of our people the manifold services and benefits which the State receives constantly from the Consolidated University. Radio programs, news stories, civic club programs, and various other means will be utilized in an all-out effort to focus the interest of our citizenry on the Consolidated University as never before."

The inaugural ceremony will open with a sermon at the Woman's College at Greensboro at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, October 8, to be followed by a luncheon for delegates and guests. Addresses on "The State and The Human Spirit" will be a feature of the afternoon session beginning at 3 o'clock. A dinner for delegates and guests will follow.

The program of the second day opens with addresses on "Higher Education in American Democracy" and "Science and the Spirit of Freedom" at the University in Chapel Hill at 10 a.m. Monday, October 9. This will be followed with a buffet luncheon for delegates and guests.

The afternoon session, beginning at 2:30, will feature addresses on "The Responsibility of Higher Education to the State" and "The Responsibility of the State for Higher Education." There will be a dinner for delegates and guests, performances in the Morehead Planetarium, and a reception.

President-Elect Gray will be formally installed at 10:30 Tuesday morning, October 10, in the State College Coliseum in Raleigh. A luncheon will follow.

Committee chairmen on the inauguration are as follows: from the Board of Trustees, William B. Umstead, Durham; William D. Carmichael, Jr., from the Administration; Miss Jane Summerell, from the Woman's College; Louis R. Wilson, the University at Chapel Hill, and John W. Shirley, State College.

Sid Turner, chairman of the Men's Honor Council, announced that the council met last Thursday in regard to releasing from probation a student who was accused of violating the campus code when he was found arguing and swearing at a girl.
