Genial George Is Long-Time UNC Fixture

By Tom Parramore

To some folks, George the dog may be just another mongrel, but to his friends George is the embodiment of all that is good and traditional at UNC.

The rust-colored collie seen so regularly about the Y Court and South Building is today's standard-bearer of a local tradition that is almost as old as the University itself.

Chapel Hill has long been famous for its dog population. George's most famous predecessor was Dan who was Carolina's pride back in the middle '40' when a dog was really somebody.

Dan was so highly regarded that he attended football games with the team and had the University's official sanction to attend all classes and sports events.

When Dan died in 1948, the administration put a ban on Chapel Hill dogs which was lifted only after students had staged angry demonstrations protesting the measure.

A favorite of the Monogram Clubbers a couple of years back was Brownie. Then there was Cap, a boxer with an aversion for coeds, and, later still Radar, who, some folks claim, was the (See GEORGE, page 4)

Mase Chapin Is Festival Queen; 1,500 At Varied Music Program

Mase Chapin, a vibrant, blue-eyed beauty from Richmond, Va., was crowned queen of the Watermelon Festival Friday night.

Ruling with her was King Jimmy Wallace, newly elected director of Graham Memorial, who was voted on along with the coed queen contestants. Wallace was chosen from among the faculty melon eating team.

Miss Chapin was sponsored by Kappa Alpha fraternity. She is a sociology major and will graduate in February. Her campus activities include membership on the Graham Memorial board of directors, vice president of the YWCA, officer in Delta Delta Delta social sorority and a member of the Student Council.

As queen she was presented with a silver tray. Miss Chapin won the title in a runoff with four other coeds.

The students beat the faculty in the watermelon eating contest, winning on two out of three points.

Roy Armstrong was master of ceremonies. He frolicked as much on the stage as the audience of some 1,500 did off stage.

Among those on the program were a "quartet" of the Rev. Maurice Kidder, Joel Savell and John Riebel and his guitar. Tap dancer Ann Sutherland and Bob Cole and his folk music band also were on the program.

Armstrong announced a "command performance" for the night, it being Lanier Davis, who works for him. Davis sang several numbers including "Song for a Friend," which was written for him by Hank Beebe, former composer and campus piano wizard. Mrs. Davis, who is Beebe's sister, accompanied her husband at the piano.

Chancellor Robert House played a tune or two on his harmonica, and his better half also took part as she was one of the judges for the eating contest.

Armstrong, highly touting himself as a musician and then bringing daughter Patricia to stage, did a flute duet with his daughter. Another musical personage on the program was Melon King Jimmy Wallace who at the request of his Boy Scouts zipped through a snappy rendition of "Maple Leaf Rag."

Final Examination Schedule Is Listed For Both Sessions

The final examination schedule for both Summer Sessions was released yesterday by Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records.

No student may be excused from a scheduled examination, Lanier said, except by the Infirmary, in case of illness, or by his adviser or dean, in case of any other emergency compelling his absence.

AKPsi Is Rated First In Country On Efficiency By National Office

Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration at the University has been ranked the foremost in the nation of 78 college chapters in the 1952-53 efficient rating.

Raymond G. Woolever of St. Paul, Minn. Grand President of the national fraternity, who advised the chapter here of this honor, wrote:

"The Grand Council and Executive Committee believe that Alpha Tau was the top chapter in Alpha Kappa Psi during the past year and although there may be others who will technically accomplish the 100,000 mark in the efficiency rating, the quality of Alpha Tau's work in this accomplishment ranks here at the top of the 78 college chapters I plan to recognize your chapter accordingly at our national convention in New York City in September.

All college chapters are inspected periodically during the school year and final ratings are published in June. The efficiency rating includes professional activities, scholarship, general administration, membership, and finances.
