Prohibition On The College Campus

According to persistent rumors about the campus, the Chapel Hill bootlegger army suffered heavy casualties during the summer months.

A brief observation tour through the business district or past the fraternity houses during the late evening and early morning hours will convince the most optimistic of prohibitionists that liquor is obtainable within or near the village, however.

Prohibition has been a colossal failure in this country, as millions of citizens realize. With typically American hypocrisy they vociferously champion the 18th amendment in public and hurry home to receive their favorite bootlegger on his regular visit.

"Orange County cawn," notoriously vile as it is, will continue to be sold to University students despite whatever pressure the prohibition men may bring to bear upon the bootlegging gents.

A drastic change in the undergraduate attitude toward habitual drinking is perhaps the only means of doing away with the liquor orgies which occur frequently on nearly every college campus.

Behind the Smoke Of the Smoker

The Senior Class, composed of the oldest and presumably wisest heads among the undergraduates of the University, announces the holding of the first smoker of the year, to be held for get-together purposes.

and occasionally cheer a speech of the president of the class or the chairman of the Executive Committee? Not at all.

Senior Smokers, and those of the other classes as well, are held for a definite purpose, and that purpose is not mere bulling. There is generally a light supper, a little music, and then serious class business is transacted, accompanied, of course, by plentiful free cigarettes.

Of recent years special efforts have been made to get the shy co-ed to attend these meetings, formerly reserved only for the dominating male.

The Senior Smoker leads off the season with a combined business and social session, to which all members of the class are invited. It is not so much their duty to attend as their privilege, if they are to know what is happening and where their money goes, as well as meet the men and women who are their classmates.

The University Holds Its Own

Plans were laid for the one hundred and thirty-sixth session of the University of North Carolina under circumstances which were decidedly unfavorable. The prevalence of hard times and the probability of even harder times causes officials of the University no small amount of worry.

That the scarcity of money and the lamentable agrarian discontent have placed a damper on the progress of the state cannot be denied. Be this as it may, the fact of a larger enrollment this fall proves conclusively that the spirit which underlies the activities of the people of the state has not been diminished.

Although this progressive spirit of the people is a potent factor, the aforesaid unexpectedly large fall quarter enrollment is due in large measure to another force—the untiring efforts of the officials of the University.

When the people of the state of North Carolina cease to back their university, then its enrollment will decrease from year to year; but as long as they continue to stand behind it material growth is a certainty.—J. C. W.

Bob Martin, heavyweight boxing champion of the A. E. F., is said to be a state policeman in West Virginia.

YACKETY YACK NOTICE

All men wishing to try out for the business staff of the Yackety Yack will please meet the business manager at 7:30 at the Yackety Yack office in the basement of Alumni Building.

All old members of the staff will be expected to be present if they intend to remain on the staff.

Sunday morning, and here's your paper. You can use it to clean your razor as you shave, put under your feet when you lie on the sofa in the front room for an afternoon snooze, keep the coffee-stains off the tablecloth, or even read it.

The first question generally asked about the Sunday issue of the Daily Tar Heel has been whether or not it will have a comic section. Of course, of course—hasn't the Tar Heel always aimed to please? Not only a comic section on Sunday, but every day in the week, Monday's excepted, four whole pages of comics.

That new rear campus is a delight to look at, but we do miss our old locomotive and freight train. It used to go through every day a little before one o'clock in the afternoon.

He would wait for a few minutes for the noise to calm down, then give it up and dismiss the class before the end of the hour—Starvation Hour, too, just before the midday meal.

The Isadora Duncan Dancers will be here soon to inaugurate this year's program of merry-making. Last year's program was extremely successful, and by the looks of the program drawn up by the Entertainment Committee, this year's will run it a close second.

We see by yesterday's Tar Heel (we get all our news from the Tar Heel) that a Pajama Club is being organized by the Frosh, or such of them as wish to emulate the eminent W. O. Saunders of Elizabeth City.

The Carolina Theatre had its face lifted recently, and as a result, (in case you didn't know, and we can't see how you don't), it now talks in clear accents, and some not so clear.

to see Coach Chuck trip a few of the light fantastics.

For a glimpse of beauty, we recommend a stroll through the new library. The decorations, on the whole, are tastefully done, the arrangement of the various rooms sensible, and the building imposing.

Changes—The gals in Gooch's . . . and the new semi-private dining section in the rear . . . Jack Lipman's new front . . . his store, not his waistcoat . . . sounds of loud talking issuing from the Carolina during a performance . . . the erstwhile organist of said theatre reduced to changing phonograph records during the news reels . . . the absence of back-slapping and assumed heartiness for the freshmen . . . Boss' new tie . . . Prof. Potter's new car . . . a whole new section of grass behind South for Freshmen and such to walk on . . . the Tar Heel inflicted on a groaning population every day.

R. B. House To Speak In Chapel Tuesday

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, will speak in the chapel period Tuesday morning on the subject, "Literary Society Work and Debating."

This talk is part of a series which are presented to aid and encourage the freshmen in the selection of a worthwhile campus activity. Many freshmen desire to affiliate with some organization or institution, and it is the plan of the college to give them a comprehensive summary of the available activities.

Lutheran Students To Hold Services Tomorrow

The Lutheran Student Association of the University is organized to care for the highest interests of all Lutheran students and Lutherans in the community, as well as to promote the best interests of the campus. As there is no regularly organized congregation in Chapel Hill the Association provides for services held every Sunday morning in Gerrard Hall.

Loan Fund Now Available

The University Loan Fund is now available for distribution to students desiring pecuniary assistance. Mr. Sprinkle in 204 South will handle the fund. It is requested that students report for the aid between the hours of 12-1 and 3-4 in the immediate future.

Seniors To Smoke And Elect Student Councilman Tuesday

Election of a student councilman will feature the first Senior class smoker of the year in Swain Hall Tuesday night at 9 o'clock, it was announced last night by Ralph Green, senior president.

Bill Chandler, who was elected student council representative from the senior class last spring, will not return to school this fall.

New Publication Has Story by Former Student

A new literary publication, edited and published by Willis H. Kinnear at Indianapolis, Ind., has created favorable comment from many prominent literary men. The magazine caters to the younger writers throughout the United States, primarily to those who are in the universities and is distributed on a national scale.

The magazine is filling a place among the literary publications that has long been neglected, and has the co-operation of the heads and members of the English departments in the largest universities of the country.

Four Patients Confined To Infirmary

With one day of classes gone the University Infirmary took on a business-like air. Four cases were reported yesterday; all of whom were minor ailments.

G. L. Cornwell, H. M. Gilbert, Fred Wardlaw, and Miss Mary Carter are confined to the infirmary with minor sicknesses.
