

KOCH WILL GIVE FIRST LECTURE TOMORROW NIGHT

Will Show Slides of Dakota
Players and Carolina
Playmakers.

Professor Frederick Koch will give an illustrated lecture on "Adventures in Playmaking" Friday night at 7:30 in the theatre. A variety of stereoptical slides will show phases of Professor Koch's work.

Part of these slides are of the original productions of the Dakota Playmakers of the University of North Dakota where Professor Koch began playmaker work. Others show the development of the Carolina Playmakers.

The lecture will include photographs of productions on the Playmakers' first stage in the auditorium of the Chapel Hill high school. Pictures of productions in the present Playmakers theatre, and slides of productions in the Forest theatre will also be used. The lecture is open to the public.

Dormitory Club Elects Officers

The occasion of the first meeting of the Carolina dormitory club this year was a good supper prepared by the ladies of the Episcopal church at the parish house. This first supper-meeting is becoming an annual affair with the dormitory presidents and managers, as this is the third successive year it has taken place.

The main purpose of the meeting was for the dormitory officers to get together and get acquainted. A good social hour was enjoyed. Don Wood played the piano with consummate skill. The members, getting better acquainted, went into a huddle over some of the more popular songs, and mirth and comradeship held sway.

After supper was safely stowed, R. B. House reminisced through his subject of "Dormitories as Wuz and Is," as only Mr. House can reminisce. There was a time when practically all of the three hundred students of the University stayed in dormitories. The senior, with his pipe, his book, and his bedroom slippers, would take his easy chair in front of his fireplace in his room in Old East and study, while his body servant prepared his bed and his night-cap. Those were the Oxfordian days of our existence, when the rich men brought their negro body servants to school with them. But, one should not romanticise too much about the good, gone days. Consider that the student of that time had to contend with numerous noises, disturbances, and other deterrents from study, that are but unusual in this civilized era. One had a perfect right to ring the college bell, make speeches at the well, visit, bull, and disturb anyone else at will. It would have been an insult to ask another man to

Everyone is invited—guests are welcome.

Former Carolina Student To Deliver Series Of Speeches

Noted Y. M. C. A. Leader Will Speak Here October 13 and
14 on the Chinese and Oriental Situation.

Mr. Eugene E. Barnett, a graduate of the University, and for two years secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here, will be here next Sunday and Monday to deliver a series of addresses on the subject of, "The Chinese and Oriental Situation Today—Politically, Religiously and Educationally." Because of the convenient location and the size of the auditorium of the Methodist church, the Y. M. C. A. has been given the privilege of using it for Mr. Barnett on Sunday. Mr. Barnett will speak there Sunday morning at 11:00 and then again that night at 8:00. He will also speak several times to the students on Monday, and will meet in conferences for all students desiring to see him.

Mr. Barnett has for the past 20 years been in charge of the Y work in China among the universities and colleges. During all the late Chinese revolutions he remained at his post, and kept in intimate contact with the government leaders as well as diplomats and other foreigners.

Mr. Barnett was the founder of the Young Men's Christian Association in Hangchow, a city of 800,000, the imperial capital during the splendid days of Marco Polo, and still the seat of a province of 17,000,000 people. This association has become the rallying point of a great religious and civic enterprise supported and participated in by governors, bankers, educators, silk merchants, and other leading men. When Mr. Barnett was called to the National Committee in 1921 he left a strong organization in Hangchow, housed in a modern building, generously supported by the community, and led by a Chinese successor in the general secretaryship.

Mr. Barnett was executive secretary of the student division of the national committee of China from 1921 to 1923. During this period he, and his colleague, T. Z. Koo, were responsible for the entertainment by the China movement of the World's Student Christian Federation Conference. T. Z. Koo succeeded him as head of the student work.

Since 1923 Mr. Barnett has headed the city division of the national committee of the Y. M. C. A.'s of China. This position brings him in intimate touch with all parts of the country. During the past few months he has visited twelve of the eighteen provinces and has interviewed many of the prominent leaders in the contemporary scene. Since 1926 he has served concurrently as senior member of the National Christian Council and of its executive committee which has brought him unusual opportunities with present leaders of the churches and other Christian organizations of the country. He has also served as college trustee in Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist institutions.

Most of Mr. Barnett's public speaking in recent years has been done in the Chinese language. His main work in China is that of trusted counselor and friend of Chinese leaders, both in the association movement and outside it. What he says about China grows, therefore,

LETTER EXPLAINS NOVEL CREATION

Rev. H. G. C. Hallock Writes Dr.
Stuhlman of Oriental Ideas
Of Earth's Formation.

(By B. H. Whitton)

The man who made the world was something over 7430 miles high when he died, according to the figures given by Chinese teaching of the origin of the world.

This enormous size was figured from data contained in a letter received by Mr. Otto Stuhlman, Jr., from Rev. H. G. C. Hallock, of Shanghai, China, who wrote to the University professor telling him of a Chinese explanation of the origin of the world.

This statement of the creation was obtained during a Bible Class in which the story of the creation as recorded in Genesis was being discussed. The thought came to those attending the meeting that the Chinese teachings "could go them one better," and this explanation was given.

The impressive things of this story are that the creator of the world was born of "the male and female principles, Yang, and Yin." This man, Pan-Ku, was a short stubby fellow with horns, who had the remarkable capacity of growth which enabled him to grow six feet a day for the entire period of 18,000 years during which he was engaged in making the earth.

He obtained possession of an axe, and then proceeded to cut the world out of apparently nothing. After his work was almost completed, he had to die to finish the job. He died, and his various features became the physical features of the earth.

The origin of man is explained to the entire satisfaction of the evolutionists, because this story states that they were once the in-

'JOB'S KINFOLKS' CAST IS SELECTED

The cast for Loretta Carroll Bailey's play "Job's Kinsfolks" was selected at a tryout held in the Playmaker theatre last Friday night. The play will be presented in its three-act form as an alternate bill on the Playmakers' northern tour November 15 to 30.

Members of the cast were selected with a view to their taking part in both this bill and the alternate program of three one-act plays. Loretta Carroll Bailey has the role of Kizzie, having played this part in the production last year.

UNIVERSITY GRAD WILL SPEAK AT HISTORICAL MEET

State Literary and Historical Association To Meet In Raleigh.

Dr. William Starr Myers, graduate of the University in 1897, professor of politics in Princeton university since 1918, widely-known lecturer on historical and political subjects, and author of several books, has been secured for the main address for the twenty-ninth annual session of the state literary and historical association which meets in Raleigh Thursday and Friday, October 31, to November 1. Professor Myers' address will be on the evening of Nov. 1.

The association program will open Thursday evening, October 31 with the presidential address by Dr. H. M. Wagstaff, professor of history at the University of North Carolina and editor and author of several books on North Carolina history. Following the address there will be a reception to members and friends of the association.

A program of brief papers on North Carolina and southern history by Miss Adelaide L. Fries of Winston-Salem, Dr. G. G. Johnson of Chapel Hill and Dr. B. B. Kendrick of Greensboro will be presented Friday morning.

The North Carolina folk lore society will hold its annual meeting on Friday afternoon, November 1. The officers of the folk lore society are Mrs. S. Westray Battle of Asheville, president; Mrs. Josephus Daniels, Raleigh; Mrs. Maude Minish Sutton, Forest City, and Miss Lucy Maria Cobb, Raleigh, vice-presidents, and Frank C. Brown, Durham, secretary-treasurer.

Research Group Is Studying Failure Tobacco Association

Since the Tri-State Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association failed in 1926 members of the University Institute for Research in Social Science have been conducting a study to determine the causes of this failure. The work was begun with the idea of avoiding mistakes in any future organization, a number of which have been encouraged since the receivership of the old association.

It is the intention of Dr. T. J. Woolfer, research professor in charge of the work, to complete his report of the matter at an early date. For almost three years the process of collecting the material for the final account has been under way. As yet Dr. Woolfer has not a title for the paper, but he has planned and announced a definite arrangement of the topics that will be treated.

In the beginning, the background of southern agricultural life with its problems of negro labor, tenant farming, and systems of finance will be presented. All of these factors will be shown in their relationship to the failure of the former association. The second section will present a body of statistics on tobacco production, prices, supply, and demand; in section three, methods of organization will be discussed; in number four, the operation of the association; and the last division will be devoted to a discussion of the receivership of the old organization.

Dr. Woolfer was assisted in

Alumni Gifts Stimulate State Funds, Says Chase

Team Given Send-Off

Last night a mammoth pep meeting was held in front of Swain hall to send the Carolina team off for the Tech game in Atlanta. The team will arrive in Atlanta early this morning. This afternoon they will work out for the last time before meeting the powerful Atlanta outfit. At the pep meeting cheers were given for the team and for individuals.

Engineer Students Go To Raleigh for Observation Labs

Tentative plans for several observation labs to be taken at the Raleigh field of the Curtiss Flying Service by the students of aeronautics in the department of mechanical engineering were announced yesterday.

Professor E. G. Hoefler and Mr. N. P. Bailey, members of the engineering faculty, were in Raleigh Monday evening to attend the formal opening of the Curtiss Service ground school there, and arrangements for these labs were made at that time.

At the Raleigh field, the Curtiss Service has eight or nine different types of planes, and the trips will be made for the purpose of observing the types of planes as they are studied in the aeronautics courses.

At the opening Monday, Professor Hoefler and Mr. Bailey spoke briefly of their plans for the University courses in aviation, and D. Allen Harrell, University student from Scotland Neck, spoke on the construction of model aeroplanes.

Appeal Is a Systematic Effort To Get Alumni Into Habit of Giving to University Each Year.

In making an appeal for private gifts with which to supplement state appropriations, the University of North Carolina is only doing what every other state university in the country is doing, with the exception of Wisconsin, President Harry W. Chase told Orange county alumni and University faculty members at a smoker held here Tuesday night.

It has been shown conclusively that private gifts tend to encourage and stimulate state appropriations, Dr. Chase said.

The University president was explaining the purposes of the appeal recently launched by the Alumni Loyalty fund of the University.

"Such an appeal should not be regarded as an emergency measure," Dr. Chase said, but rather as an effort to get the alumni into a systematic habit of putting something aside for the University each year just as they contribute regularly to their lodge or their church."

Citing examples of private gifts recently made to state institutions in other states, Dr. Chase said that one donor expended for the Michigan law school ten times the amount used for building here in the last ten years. Private gifts made to the University of California have amounted to $5,000,000 in the last three years. Every building that was constructed here at the University prior to 1905 was built with private funds.

The Alumni Loyalty fund is based on the idea that, while the state may supply the essential things, state appropriations should be supplemented with private gifts with which to provide excellence in University life.

"That was the motivating idea when the fund was started under the administration of the late Edward K. Graham, and it is the same idea today," Dr. Chase declared. "The fund should be regarded as the presentation of an opportunity rather than of a drive or campaign."

Following Dr. Chase's address the following new officers of the Chapel Hill alumni association were elected: Louis Graves, president; Obie Harmon, vice-president, and Herman Baity, secretary.

Miss Isabel Busbee Talks To Garden Club

Miss Isabel Busbee, secretary to the president of State college for a number of years and a noted authority on art and landscape designing, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Chapel Hill Garden Club held Tuesday afternoon in Davie hall. Miss Busbee received her training in landscape designing at the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture, Gardening and Horticulture for Women at Groton, Mass., and at North Carolina State college in Raleigh and is an authority especially on an authority on North Carolina horticultural problems.

More than forty members of the club were in attendance at this meeting which was presided over by Mrs. H. R. Totten, president.
