

Atlanta Writers Think Heels Will Turn Tables On Tornado

All Say That Heels Have Power Enough to Score Victory over Tech Team; Jackets Also Have Strength.

The two major games coming off down in Georgia this weekend are causing a landslide of comment from the Southern sports writers, and especially from those of the Atlanta Constitution. Of the two the Tech-Heel game is holding the Southern spotlight, while the Yale-Georgia mixup is attracting inter-sectional attention. That Yale will have a rather easy time with the Georgia Bulldogs is a generally conceded point, so consequently the brunt of the speculation is aimed against the Tornado-Tar Heel struggle.

Herb Clark in a recent article expressed the following opinion: "The Jackets will not win the battle with the Tar Heels. At least, the same team which took the Aggie scalp will not win from the Tar Heels.

"The Jackets showed numerous bad spots in their play. The pass defense was probably the most noticeable from the stands. The Aggies passed 11 times. Eight of these attempts were completed and were made to account for 90 yards. Eight for 11 is an almost perfect average. For the defensive team it is far from that.

"Unless this phase of the Jacket game improves mightily the Tar Heels are going to count often. In the Maryland game Saturday they scored three touchdowns in five minutes, and passes were responsible for each of the tallies. A weak pass defense, facing this type of tossing would mean that the Tar Heels could do all the forcing. And it would mean that the Jackets would be in the w. k. tough spot.

"To cite other factors: the Jackets failed on several occasions to give their own passer the protection which is necessary for success at the air game.

"The Jacket line has not become unified. The charges Saturday were powerful at times and at times a lack of precision in the rush left openings for flank movements on the part of the Aggie linemen.

"The blocking was also up-and-down. On about half the plays the Jackets set sail with grim intent and cut the Aggies down. The rest of the time they were about as effective as a nail file on an oak.

"A good part of the faulty play was due to the fact that the majority of the players were making their debuts. They were carrying the full weight of the national championship reputation on their shoulders.

Friday, with their baptism a thing of the past and with the increased poise and knowledge that the Aggie fray should have given them, they can be expected to be more aggressive and to handle themselves better."

John Staton, also of the Constitution, and former Tech All-Southern end, made certain remarks about the Tornado squad as it emerged from the game with the Mississippi Aggies that have rather close connection with the coming game:

"Power, not wholly harnessed, that is the impression the Yellow Jackets left with those who came to see them defeat the Mississippi Aggies, 27-13.

"It took power of the driving, smashing kind to rack up five successive first downs for a touchdown.

"And yet, in the last quarter everyone was amazed to see that same Tech aggregation stand by while the Aggies passed their way to a touchdown. On this march the Aggies carried the ball exactly 80 yards, and completed six passes without a mis-

Intramural Notice

All Intramural football games between fraternities which were scheduled for Friday, October 11, have been postponed indefinitely on account of the Georgia Tech game in Atlanta. Dormitories wishing to postpone their games on that day are requested to make application for same to Mac Gray at the stadium.

BILL BYRD, END, LOST TO VIRGINIA VARSITY

University, Virginia, Oct. 9.—(Special)—Bill Byrd, veteran end, will be lost to the Virginia team for at least a month as a result of a shoulder dislocation sustained in the victory over South Carolina at Columbia.

Virginia was put in a position to score during the first quarter of the Carolina game when Byrd took a pass from Sloan to the seven-yard line. But he was downed by Eddie Zobel so that he twisted his left shoulder in the fall.

Byrd comes from Baltimore. He played at Peddie before entering Virginia. During his freshman year he played center, but in his first varsity season he was shifted to the wing where he has twice won his "V." He is a nephew of the Virginia governor and of the explorer.

hap, not to mention the nice runs of Pappenheimer, the individual star of the game."

"Tech used an excellent defense to stop the running attack of this formation, but failed miserably to break up the many passes which Pappenheimer threw with accuracy and effect.

"One of the most interesting points in the entire play was the mobility of the Tech defense. There was a time when a defensive set was rigidly adhered to, regardless. But Saturday Tech varied its defense to suit the varying conditions. With the exception of the forward pass work, the defense was excellent."

"Tech used only its standard set and a simple punt formation, relying on power and precision for its drives and accuracy and timing for its passes."

"While the Tech interference as a rule was ragged, there were times when it functioned with amazing smoothness. This was especially true of the short bucks. Many times Mizell would pass the line of scrimmage behind a perfect wall formed by interferers. In this connection it should be mentioned that Dunlap did a particularly fine piece of interfering in the open field. Many times he cut the end out in front of Thomason, who was returning a punt, or for Mizell started on a wide end run.

"Perhaps the most pleasing aspect from a Tech standpoint was the manner in which substitutions could be made without visibly weakening the team. It has been the thought of many that Tech would have a powerful first eleven with few able reserves. Tech played two full teams, and there was little difference between them.

"After Saturday's performance there can be no doubt that Tech possesses a team laden with possibilities, a team capable of extraordinary development, a team perchance that could be developed into a conference winner. But withal, that team, to be really great, must show, week by week, the results of that development."

Crime costs the U. S. about $10,000,000,000 annually.

"Shorty"

If Georgia Tech has her "Stumpy" Thomason, then North Carolina has her "Shorty" Branch. And now almost on the eve of the South's most important game The Tar Heel refuses to budge an inch under the pressure of the praise that has come up from the south in favor of Thomason. Friday's game will have as a side feature the settlement of more than one little personal matter.

"Stumpy"

There is no getting around the fact that "Stumpy" Thomason is a wonderful player; just now few people are trying to deny that fact. Last fall he made a pretty deep impression down in Kenan Stadium, and few Carolina men have found it easy to forget him. Thomason is a wellrounded player and is one of the most dangerous threats in the Tornado backfield.

MANY CANDIDATES DOING MAT WORK

Fall Work In Wrestling Going Ahead Under Supervision Of Peyton Abbott.

Fall work for the wrestling squad has drawn a large following. With one of the best teams in the south last year prospects indicate an even better team this year. Peyton Abbott, former captain of the Carolina team and undefeated wrestler, is conducting classes every afternoon from 4 to 6 in the Tin Can. Assisting him is Wayne Woodward, captain of last year's team.

Abbott is very optimistic over this year's prospects and predicts a team that will hold its own with any team in the south. Last year Carolina lost to Duke and V. M. I. by slight margins, and this year, with a generous number of good reserves and promising men from last year's freshman squad, Coach Quinlan is pointing for an undefeated season.

From last year's varsity squad are Captain Woodward, Ferguson, Moore, Saunders, Stallings, Cooper, Albright, Zealie and Thompson. Last year's freshmen will be represented by Edwards, Spell, Kushner and Allison. New men out for the squad who have been showing some promise are Carmichael, Conkline, Pearlstone, Taylor, Bell, Beecham and Young.

A good sized group of freshmen have given indications of developing into some valuable wrestlers. They will be coached by Peyton Abbott. As usual, men in the heavier weights are scarce for both freshman and varsity squads, and anyone interested in wrestling is requested to see Peyton Abbott or Wayne Woodward in the Tin Can any week day in the afternoon.

Fall work is primarily to give the men experience. Tryouts will be held just after the Christmas vacation and those who have been out all fall will have the additional advantage of being in excellent physical condition.

The schedule for meets will be about the same this year as last with the addition of the Navy at Annapolis. This marks the opening of inter-sectional competition for both the wrestling and boxing teams. The new meet promises to be one of the big lights in the wrestling season. Two years ago Duke defeated the Navy and this year the Tar Heels with a clever looking pre-season team will attempt to repeat the same trick.

It is the hope of many southern coaches to hold a Southern Conference tournament this year. With the usual mix-up at the end of the season it is very difficult to decide on the champions.

TAR HEELS MEET V. P. I. HARRIERS

Varsity and Freshmen Have Tough Schedule This Year; Many Men Working.

The first dual meet for both varsity and freshman cross-country teams will be held at Blacksburg, Va., Friday, October 18, with the V. P. I. harriers as the opposition, according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon by Coach Dale Ranson. Following the V. P. I. meet, there will be another contest for both of the University teams November 2, at Chapel Hill, with North Carolina State college serving as the opposition. The varsity and freshman teams will next meet Duke at Chapel Hill on Friday, November 8. The two weeks after this meet will be spent in preparation for the Southern Conference championship meet which is to be held in Chapel Hill this year on Saturday, November 23.

Coach Ranson also announced that negotiations are pending for a state championship meet for varsity and freshman teams. An open road race in which both collegiate and amateur harriers will be permitted to participate is also being planned.

Coach Ranson, although not underestimating the strength of the teams to be met before the conference meet, is training his men with the idea of capturing the conference title for the fourth consecutive time. Carolina teams have won the Southern Conference championship meets for the past three years. In 1926 the title was captured at Athens, Ga.; in 1927 at Chapel Hill; and last year at Atlanta, Ga. In the meet at Atlanta two years ago the local team scored 17 points out of a possible low score of 15 points. Galen Elliott of Carolina led the pick of the south in this meet. Last year Young of Georgia, who will be back again this year, led the field.

Among the large number of candidates from which Coach Ranson hopes to pick a championship team are six letter men, Barkley (captain), Baucum, Lowry, Wrenn, G. M. Cohen and Medford. Other candidates are Simpson, J. J. Cohen, Brown, Rhodes, Phoenix, Farris, Pierce, Purser and Anderson.

The freshman candidates are Jensen, Jones, Zelly, Cox, London, Lumpkin and a number of other capable men.

On Wednesday, October 9, approximately 850 students were boarding at Swain hall.

Heels Plan Georgia Invasion For Carolina-Tornado Contest

Special Train To Carry Supporters To Atlanta; 62 Piece Band Will Head Student Parade.

North Carolina is planning a big invasion of Georgia on the occasion of Friday's North Carolina-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta.

Tar Heel followers who have seen the big Blue and White Legion trample Wake Forest and Maryland, 48-0 and 43-0, say North Carolina has the greatest chance since 1922 to topple the mighty Tech and maybe win conference honors. And Tar Heel followers are planning to be present en masse if there is a toppling.

Special trains are to be run from every center in the state. Extra low rates have been secured, to take the Tar Heels to both the North Carolina-Georgia Tech and Yale-Georgia games. The humble and the notable are making reservations to indicate that there will be a record and colorful Tar Heel invasion.

The Tar Heels' fine 62-piece band, headed by Director T. Smith McCorkle and Drum Major E. L. Smith, uniformed in blue and white, will lead the student parade. They will ride the special train which is to leave Chapel Hill Thursday night, and which is expected to carry several hundred students.

The Tar Heel band will play for both the Carolina-Tech game

CAVALIERS TO OPPOSE SWARTHMORE'S ELEVEN

University, Virginia, Oct. 9.—(Special)—Virginia is joining with five other southern teams in playing inter-sectional contests on Saturday. The Cavaliers will entertain Swathmore on Lambeth field. Georgia's dedication game with Yale will be the only other inter-sectional affair played in Dixie.

Two other Old Dominion teams go north. Virginia Polytechnic Institute plays Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and Hampden-Sidney again goes to Ithaca to meet Cornell. Vanderbilt's trip to Minnesota and Davidson's invasion of West Point will give grid critics added opportunities to make comparisons of strength across sectional lines.

on Friday and the Georgia-Yale game in Athens Saturday.

With the Tar Heels mowing down all opposition and the Tornado blowing furiously another season, the game promises to be one of the South's outstanding grid affairs and one of the most colorful events on the South's autumn calendar.

The big home-coming game for the University will be played here Saturday week, October 19, when the Tar Heels will meet the Georgia Bulldogs here in Kenan stadium.
