

NORTH CAROLINA VS. GEORGIA TECH TODAY

Tar Heels Primed For Clash In Georgia City

Squad of Thirty-five Men Took Light Workout on Grant Field Yesterday; Team in Good Shape for Contest; Wyrick Only Man Definitely Out of Game.

North Carolina's football squad of 35 men arrived in Atlanta yesterday morning and took a light workout on Grant field during the afternoon before one of the south's leading grid clashes of the 1929 season, scheduled for today.

The Tar Heels arrived in Atlanta in fine physical condition, except for a back injury to Quarterback Pete Wyrick, who will probably be out of the game for several weeks. Henry House had not completely recovered from an ankle injury sustained in a scrimmage two weeks ago but it was thought that he would be able to play should he be called. Both men made the trip, however.

Johnny Branch, Carolina's diminutive quarterback, will probably general the Tar Heels with Phil Jackson as first substitute for the post.

Sports writers throughout the south this week have praised the Tar Heels very highly and many of them predict that Carolina will conquer the almost invincible Tech Tornado. Eddie Brietz, associated press sports writer, made the following statement in an article yesterday:

"The North Carolinians are taking two sets of the sweetest backs in all Dixie to Grant field and all the Atlanta sports writers are agreed that anything is liable to happen when Coach Chuck Collins, the youthful Tar Heel mentor, hurls his collection of passing artists and ball luggers against the remnants of the team that bowled over both Notre Dame and California last season.

"Tech scouts who saw Carolina smother Maryland 43-0 last week, came back to Atlanta with notebooks of Tar Heel stuff. They told Coach Bill Alexander that unless radical steps are taken to stop the menace from the north, the Tech season is apt to end before it gets well in motion."

It is a well known fact that the Tar Heel backs are unusually good, but there is some doubt as to the strength of "The Hill" line. Up to the present they have not met a very powerful offense, but it is believed that they can hold up very well under the strain which they expect to meet today.

The Tar Heel offensive has chalked up 13 touchdowns for a total of 91 points in the two games played, while Tech has succeeded in conquering the Mississippi Aggies last Saturday, hurling a number of passes in spite of a steady rainfall throughout the clash. Thomason and Mizell will be matched against the stellar Heel backs and a number of passes and fast runs should come from both teams when such offenses oppose each other.

The Tar Heel does not predict a win for the Chapel Hill team but it does say that it is a golden opportunity for them to come through, and is expecting big things of those Tar Heels.

The coaches announced today that the starting lineups tomorrow would probably be as follows:

Carolina	Pos.	Georgia Tech
Holt		Jones
	l. e.
Koenig		Watkins
	l. t.
Farris (capt.)		Westbrook
	l. g.

Georgia-Yale Scores

The spectators at the Duke-Carolina freshman game tomorrow will hear the quarter score broadcast of the Georgia-Yale game at Athens, Ga., according to an announcement made yesterday by C. T. Woolen, graduate manager of athletics. This announcement is expected to meet with the approval of those who will be in attendance at the game and should prove an interesting feature of the afternoon's entertainment.

BARRETT TO LEAD CHEERS IN ATLANTA

Expects to Get Fine Cheering Today; Campus Moans Death of Rameses III.

Jack Barrett, recently elected cheerleader of the university, stated that he was going to Atlanta for the express purpose of wringing "gross issues" of cheers from all Carolina supporters present. Approximately five hundred students will make the trip, and a number of alumni will be present, hence much vocal inspiration is in store for the Tar Heels.

The only contrary element in cheerleader Barrett's plans is the unfortunate demise of the time honored mascot, one goat by name, Rameses III. Poor old Rameses III had spent a happy summer around Caldwell hall looking forward to the big trip, but he passed away only a few days before the event which he had so long anticipated. Barrett has sent out pleas for Rameses IV and some kind alumnus may have him on the way to Atlanta now.

Snead Is Eli Flash

Charley Snead showed his ball-carrying ability again Tuesday, scoring two touchdowns as the varsity scrimmaged against the Yale scrubs. Snead kicked both goals after touchdown.

Football Music

The student band is closely related to football in most of the big colleges. New York U took the band to its camp.

The Tar Heels, 34 strong, have led the advance on Atlanta and Georgia Tech. A great number of students left yesterday and last night by car and by special train for the Georgia city which temporarily is the center of the football world. Additional thousands will journey from all parts of North Carolina to support Coach Collins and his fast stepping team of "a hundred backs" as they make their great attempt to overthrow the 1928 national champions. All in all there should be almost as many Tar Heel supporters as there are rooters for Tech if the advance indications prove correct.

The Carolina team invades Atlanta this year as the first team in a long while which, on a basis of early season showing, is picked to down the mighty Tech grid machine. However, while sports writers in this state and in the Georgia capital have predicted that the Tar Heels should come out on top after a very closely fought game, Coach Collins and his squad were far from appearing overconfident when they entrained Wednesday night. Instead a spirit of determination to fight to the end against a team which they realized was no ordinary foe seemed to pervade the 34 men.

Since Henry House and Pete Wyrick will both be out of the game because of injuries, the line-up which will face the Georgians this afternoon will probably be composed of Fenner and Holt, ends; Adkins and Koenig, tackles; Eskew and Farris, guards; Lipscomb, center; Ward and Nash, halfbacks; Branch, quarterback, and Spaulding, fullback. In addition to these men the following made the trip: Brown, Tabb, Nelson and Parsley, ends; Gregory, Thompson and Dortch, tackles; Crew, McIver, Hudson and Fysal, guards; Alexander and Gilbreath, centers; Wyrick and Jackson, quarterbacks; Maus, Magner, Erickson, Slusser and Redfern, halfbacks, and Harden, House and McAlister, fullbacks.

With the Athletics two up on the Cubs we find them journeying to the Quaker City for a brace of games. If Connie Mack's hurling staff continues to function as in the previous contests, the trip might be only an elongated funeral march as far as the Bruins are concerned. But the chances are that the Cubs will take one of the games in Philadelphia, and Wrigley field will be the scene of the deciding game. To date the youthful fench-crasher Jimmy Foxx takes the lion's share of the series spotlight by his Ruth-like tactics of a homer a day, and it seems as though his teammates are stealing a march on the well known Hornsby, Wilson and Cuyler of "Murderers Row," at least as far as timely blows are concerned.

Among the spirit lenders at the Tech game will be the 60-piece University band which will be attired in its new uniforms. Much work has been done in preparing formations for this game and it is certain that the crowd will be well entertained between the halves. The band will also play and perform at the Yale-Georgia game, and will represent Yale in the cheering section.

Al Marsters is showing well at quarter for Dartmouth.

Jimmy Ward

Ward Tops Scorers

Last Saturday's games saw "Pete" Williams, Elon fullback, ousted from the top of the scoring heap in North Carolina. Williams added but one point to the twenty he had last week, while Ward scored three touchdowns against Maryland to add to the two he scored against Wake Forest.

Individual scoring:

Tar Babies Hope to Keep Up With 1928 Frosh Team; Duke Imps Seek Revenge.

With North Carolina, Davidson, and State all playing out of the state this coming Saturday, and Duke and Wake Forest both carded to lie idle, the North Carolina-Duke freshman game to be played in Kenan stadium here Saturday afternoon is assuming varsity proportions as far as sporting interest goes.

The game was originally carded for October 18, but was moved up one week to keep from being as near the North Carolina-Georgia game on October 19. It will be called at 3 o'clock.

Johnny Branch and his Tar Baby cohorts licked the Blue Imps last season, 6-0, later winning undisputed claim to the South Atlantic championship.

With both teams inheriting the traditional Carolina-Duke rivalry, and with both camps boasting a fine outlay of former high and prep school stars, Saturday's battle promises a revenge affair and a mighty nice football exhibition for the fans who can't follow their varsity favorites out-of-state.

The Tar Babies showed great potential strength against Roanoke college's first year team last Saturday despite a close 13-7 score. Their offensive was rough, due to the fact that their offensive drills had been mighty few at that time, but the Tar Baby outfit showed a real big line and a scrappy outfit that packed a big punch.

The Duke freshmen are reported to have one of the best outlays of prep and high school stars in this section. The Tar Babies have a precedent to live up to, in the form of a South Atlantic championship, and with the Blue Imps one of the principal barriers, they will probably be "shooting the works" Saturday even as the Tar Heels are against Tech today.
