

Heel Cindermen Have Penn State On 1930 Card

Big Eastern Team Added to Tar Heel Schedule; May Come Here Next Spring.

The 1930 edition of the Tar Heel cinder path artists will be confronted with an exceptionally difficult task in maintaining their dual meet record of no defeats in eight seasons because of the addition of Penn State to this year's track schedule. Penn State boasts one of the strongest teams in the country and in recent years has not only maintained a splendid team record but has developed a great number of individual performers. Alan Helfrich and Bill Cox rate among the greatest of the former stars. Last year Offenhauser equalled these men in rank when he ran a 4:21 mile and a 1:56 half mile in one afternoon. Penn State's four-mile relay team last year broke the Penn Relay championship record for that distance, and this year's team will number three members of this team with Bill Cox lacking. Both Carolina and Penn State have been noted for exceptional distance runners in cross country and track, the former leading the southern conference and the latter the I. C. A. A. A.

According to University athletic officials, the scheduling of Penn State is a tacit acknowledgement on the part of the University athletic council of the splendid work done by former Carolina track teams and an expression of confidence in those men now on the varsity squad who are being looked to for a continued maintenance of the spirit which has carried the team through so great a number of successful seasons. This meet with Penn State is to be a home and home meet, which means that the Nittany Lions will bring their great team here either next spring or the year after, the place being undecided as yet.

An interesting sidelight on this meeting of the Tar Heels with Penn State is the fact that Coach Nate Cartmell, famous amateur and professional sprinter who coached at Carolina between 1911 and 1914, is now track coach at Penn State. Cartmell's name will be familiar to many Carolina alumni of that period.

SOUTH'S PREMIER HURDLERS TO RACE

Feature Event To Be Staged Between Halves of Georgia Contest.

Four of the South's premier collegiate hurdlers will feature a contest, between the halves of the Carolina-Georgia football game, next Saturday afternoon.

Coach Fetzer's plan is very unique in that an event of this nature has never been staged during a football game at the University before.

Heath Whittle of Davidson, considered best in the south, and Bill Perry of Carolina will face each other for the third time. At the last state championship meet Whittle beat Perry by less than a foot.

Besides these two there will be an entry from the University of Georgia and another from Davidson, who will engage in hurdling.

Not only is this event for the amusement of the football fans, but interest in hurdling is expected to be stimulated among the students.

In 1900 Carolina won six football games, tied one, and was beaten by Virginia for the only loss of the season.

Georgia Captain

Captain Joe Boland (above), who led the Georgia Bulldogs to their great 15-0 victory over Yale, is one of a small number of third-year men who lend the steadiness and stability to Georgia's great sophomore team. Captain Boland was a tower of strength against Yale, and his pivot play, opposite the Tar Heels' fine center, Ned Lipscomb, is expected to feature the North Carolina-Georgia contest Saturday.

Four Carolina Backs

The Tar Heels usually start the backfield combination pictured above. This combine has proved about the smoothest starting foursome the Tar Heel mentors have found, and, with the possible exception of Wyrick, will be the quartet that will open against Georgia in Kenan stadium here Saturday.

Nash was one of the Heels' most consistent backs last season, and with a good start this year, looks to be headed stright for All-Southern. Spaulding is a great man at backing up the line, a fine pass receiver and interference runner, and a hard driver. Wyrick is a brainy field general and a stellar interference leader. Ward, playing his final season, is leading the North Carolina college backs in point-scoring, and is a triple-threat.

Heels Use Strong Offense To Keep Grid Foes From Scoring

The Tar Heel scoring machine was back in high gear this week and with all the fleet corps of backs rounding into shape after last week's gruelling test with Georgia Tech, prospects were looking rosy for the big Georgia battle in Kenan stadium here Saturday.

Not to discount the Bulldogs' strength at all. Far from that. Any team that could shove over 15 points on Yale's great line can be called plenty strong in a scoring way. And this same team beat Furman 27-0. Davidson, Dickens, and Rothstein form a great quartet of ball toters, and Vernon "Catfish" Smith is a constant threat from his flank position.

But the Tar Heels have a sort of super-scoring machine that functions on the theory that the best defense is the super-offense. The team ran up seven touchdowns on Wake Forest, and Eddie Brietz, Associated Press sports writer, lauded them as the "team of a hundred backs."

They ran up seven more on Maryland, and Curley Byrd, Old Line coach, called them the greatest team in the South Atlantic. They bagged three more to beat Georgia Tech, 18-7, and assume national prominence.

These Tar Heels have scored exactly 109 points in three games and had just one touchdown scored on them—a tribute to the greatness of Stumpy Thomason, Georgia Tech's All-American flash.

The secret of all this scoring power lies in a wealth of backfield material. Head Coach Chuck Collins hurled exactly 10 backs at Georgia Tech. It has been likewise all season, only more so. Coach Collins believes in a fresh backfield running top speed, all steam and power.

Strud Nash, one of the Tar Heels' most consistent halfbacks, and Yank Spaulding were both banged up a bit in that memorable, Tech victory but were looking in shape again today.

They will be ready for Georgia. So will Johnny Branch, stumpy potion of dynamite, and Jim Magner, who did the greatest damage against Georgia Tech, and the others of the fine crew—Jimmy Ward, Pap Harnden, Jimmy Maus, Phil Jackson, Rip Slusser, and Chuck Erickson. It looks like two great offensives for Saturday's menu.

At one time the University buildings were for rent.

NOTRE DAME TEST IN GEORGIA GAME

Coaches of Opposing Teams Trained Under Famous Knute Rockne.

When Georgia and North Carolina meet this week-end in what is predicted to be a death struggle, four coaches of one great family will watch silently upon the sidelines. Regardless of who wins this coming tilt, which the sports tribe are saying will show the 1929 southern conference champs in action, a portion of the credit and praise for the style of play must travel up and over to Notre Dame and center upon the football famous Knute Rockne. Chuck Collins, Bill Cerney, Frank Thomas and Harry Mehre all broke into gridiron renown under the tutoring of Rockne.

The clash of the two Notre Dame-coached teams, playing the same general tactics, and showing relatively the same potential strength, should be interesting.

There is just one difference in the Tar Heel and Bulldog attacks. Harry Mehre down in Peachland teaches the Notre Dame system, shift and all, exactly as the master Rockne. Head Coach Collins up in Tar Heelia has left the shift off and adapted the system slightly.

Collins and Cerney starred at Notre Dame in 1922, 1923 and 1924. Mehre played his last season the year before. He was counted one of the greatest centers Knute Rockne ever turned out and played on the great Southbend team of 1920 that blanked the Army 27-0 one Saturday and the following Tuesday did the same thing to Rutgers, only by a seven-touchdown margin. Collins was regular end on the great Four Horsemen eleven of 1924. Thomas was Notre Dame's quarterback in 1922.

The team that Collins and Cerney will send on the field Saturday is a culmination and product of four years of hard preparation. The Carolina mentors did not, when they first came to the University of North Carolina, build for the present. They bided their time and stuck with almost hard-headed persistency to a system which they believed would someday lift North Carolina above the ordinary run of football teams.

Managers To Report

All assistants and sub-assistants of track are to report at Emerson field Friday afternoon at 3:30.

ing out for tennis are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Bo Shepard, the new head of intramural athletics, has his department working smoothly as the second week of the annual tag football race progresses. Several of the dormitory teams have been showing potential strength in the early games. New Dorms, always a team to be feared, is a threat again this fall. The Pi Kappa Phis, winners of the campus championship last year, have a strong aggregation though they will be pushed for honors by several other smooth working combinations.

Fall baseball practice is being held under the direction of Coach Ashmore and every afternoon a score or more candidates are working down on the diamond at the far end of the intramural field. Interest is keen and the men are taking the work seriously with the idea of developing both batting and fielding by this daily practice. Several of the men from last year's varsity are on hand every day and their number is augmented by members of last year's freshman team and by men going out for baseball for the first time.

The cross country season which opens shortly will find the Tar Heels in top shape and ready to make a strong bid for another southern championship. The loss of several stars may have weakened the team to some extent but the acquisition of several excellent performers from last year's freshmen will probably make up for this.

Coach Ranson has been putting his men through a daily set of conditioning exercises and they are fast getting into shape for the five mile grind which will take place when they open the season in a short time.

Fall track practice has been begun and many of last spring's stars are taking workouts every afternoon.

A rapid survey thus shows that athletics at the University are in full swing though the season is on for only one or two teams. The early practices which have been instituted here during the last few years have been very valuable and this season, from advance indications, they will probably bring several potential stars to light.

Smith dormitory, now the graduate dorm, was completed in 1901.
