UNIVERSITY MEN ATTEND MEETING IN WILMINGTON

Seventh Annual Session Of Southeastern District Teachers Of North Carolina Education Association Held Last Week.

The seventh annual session of the Southeastern District Teachers of the North Carolina Education Association, which was held in Wilmington last Friday, November 15, was attended, in the capacity of visitors and speakers, by several members of the University faculty.

General sessions of the meeting were held Friday morning and night, while the afternoon was given over to the meeting of the various departmental groups, in whose programs several of the University's professors took part. Professor J. M. Gwynn of the school of education, addressed the Latin teachers' association on the subject, "Some Possibilities for the Use of Virgil in the High School." Professor A. K. King, who is president of the North Carolina Council for Social Studies, spoke to the social studies group on "The place of the Social Studies in Improving International Relations." Dr. W. M. Dey, head of the University's department of romance languages, addressed the department of romance languages on "The Teaching of Pronunciation of French and Spanish. In the dramatics art section, Professor J. O. Bailey of the English department, spoke on "Writing the Play," and led in an open forum discussion.

Other visitors from Chapel Hill were Dr. R. W. Adams of the English department, and J. C. Griffin, executive secretary of the University summer school.

Stray Collie Fails To Find Hospitality In Quadrangle

(By Stanley Weinberg)

A medium-sized white collie arrived on the campus last week. Large, dirty brown areas on his head and side proclaimed his collie blood, but the collie was evidently only one of many breeds that had flowered into this homeless specimen of Orange county doghood.

Perhaps the newcomer did not get on well with the other Carolina dogs; perhaps the others had neglected to plan an orientation program for him. Anyway, after two or three days on the campus, the collie had not yet made any dog friends or learned the ropes of Chapel Hill dogdom.

In the evenings he generally hung around the dorms in the easternmost quadrangle; he even tried to crash several rooms on the first floor of "I" dorm. The dog had to be pushed and dragged out of two rooms before he learned that "I" dorm, for some strange reason, would not lodge brown and white collie dogs of uncertain ancestry.

That discouraged him. Satur-

Town Begins Drive To Stop Parking In Congested Areas

Sophomore Class Committee To Meet

President Ben Aycock of the sophomore class has called a meeting of the Executive Committee of the class to meet this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Dean Bradshaw's office. All members of the committee are requested by the president to attend the meeting. The meeting scheduled for Saturday was postponed on account of the inability of many of the members to be present.

Y Deputation Teams Begin Year's Work

The Y. M. C. A. deputation teams, consisting of some of the Y cabinet members, began training last night for their year's work.

These teams are sent out each year by the Y to many of the cities in the state to deliver programs which usually consist of talks, music and discussions. The teams generally remain at one place from three to five days.

Greensboro, Wilmington and Rocky Mount are the only cities scheduled to be visited. Many other engagements are being planned, but at present no definite arrangements have been made. The first teams will be sent out sometime during the latter part of this quarter or the first of the spring quarter.

COKER WRITES BOOKS

The bureau of fisheries recently published a bulletin written by Dr. R. E. Coker of the University. The bulletin is entitled Keokuk Dam and Fisheries of the Upper Mississippi River. It represents the results of experiments and inquiries conducted by Dr. Coker during a period of 14 years, beginning shortly after this dam was completed across the Mississippi in 1912.

Dr. Coker was a resident on the river at that time and some years afterward was a director of the U. S. Fisheries and Biological station at Fairport, Iowa.

New Regulations Issued By Board of Aldermen To Restrict Traffic in Chapel Hill.

A drive to eliminate parking in congested districts, especially on the campus, was launched this morning by the Safety Committee of the Chapel Hill board of Aldermen, according to P. L. Burch, chairman of the committee.

Traffic policemen will leave copies of the ordinance regulating parking in all cars parked in the restricted areas, and the license number of the car will be taken. In case of a second violation owners of the cars will be summoned to appear before Recorder's Court.

"No Parking" signs have been placed in the restricted areas for the benefit of the drivers.

To aid the enforcement of the ordinance a new parking space has been established back of Manning hall and in front of Emerson field.

The "No Parking" ordinance was made to apply to the campus by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen at the request of University officials.

The ordinance reads as follows:

Ordinance Regulating Parking—Town of Chapel Hill—Passed June 13, 1927:

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN OF THE TOWN OF CHAPEL HILL:

SECTION 1: That no motor vehicle shall be parked on the north side of Cameron Avenue from Columbia Street to Raleigh Street.

SECTION 2: That no motor vehicle shall be parked on any parkway area, or any space which has been planted with grass or shrubbery in any part of the Town.

SECTION 3: That no motor vehicle shall be parked in any other place or section where there is displayed an official sign of the Police Division, bearing the notice, "No Parking."

SECTION 4: That each person violating any section of this ordinance shall be subject to fine of $50.00 for each and every offense.

In commenting upon the drive, Chairman Burch stated to a representative of the Tar Heel yesterday afternoon that the heavy traffic congestion this fall has made necessary a concerted effort on the part of the town officials to enforce the parking ordinance.

Tobacco Chewer Draws Ire Of Female When He Misses Mark

Week-end in Chapel Hill. No football games. No fires. No automobile accidents. No lightning and thunder storms. Nothing, nothing to break the dreadful monotony of an actionless Saturday and Sunday. But wait—late Sunday afternoon finds that Chapel Hill has not been utterly devoid of excitement.

Five students are sitting on the wall near Vance dormitory. They all hail from approximately the same remote section of the state, where the old-time recreation of tobacco-chewing has not been scrapped for these new-fangled cigarettes. And as is the wont of any group who have something common among them recall by-gone days whenever the opportunity presents itself, these five young men are soon recalling the "good old days" when they used to gleefully chew "tobacco" on their

ETHICS SUBJECT OF CHAPEL TALK BY DR. WILLIAMS

Professor Emphasizes Importance of Honesty As A Trait.

Professor Horace Williams spoke to the sophomores in their first chapel meeting in Gerard hall Monday morning. Touching in a general way upon the subject of ethics, Professor Williams emphasized the importance of honesty as a trait of a noble character.

Professor Williams began his speech with a unique illustration. He wrote on a black board two figure 7's and then asked the sophomores what result he would obtain by bringing two together. He received the answers 49, 14, 1, and 0. Professor Williams admitted that any of the answers might be taken as correct, but he pointed out that this was the only possibility of variation in the process. The two figures must remain exactly the same.

Professor Williams deplored certain indications of the prevalent laxity in honesty. He mentioned the fact that in the last eight years five thousand banks in the United States have failed as a result of dishonesty. He said, also, that one of his classes had been willing to agree that there was not a single absolutely truthful man in the University. Professor Williams told men he had known who would not lie and lamented the lack of such strong individuals today.

Professor Williams holds that it is not enough for a man to be honest most of the time. Such a character is not dependable. Complete and persevering honesty is a necessary attribute of any character that stands out, and it is such individuals that the world of today needs.

Second Student Entertainment Will Be Held Here Thursday In Tin Can.

The Jean Gros French Marionettes who are to appear at the Tin Can on Thursday, November 21, under the auspices of the student entertainment committee, represent the most complete marionette theatre in the world. Two performances are to be given, a special matinee for children and a regular night performance for adults. In the afternoon, "Uncle Wigley at the Circus," a play by Howard R. Garis, will be presented while "Skippy," by Percy Crosby, will be given at night.

Until a few years ago marionettes were presented on very small stages ranging from six to ten feet. The puppets were very small, generally about 12 to 18 inches high. The result was that for years the marionettes made appearances only in the vaudeville theatres where they were looked upon as a novelty that could be enjoyed for a period of a few minutes.

In the past seven or eight years a number of companies have attempted to enlarge the idea of presentation, but it was not until Jean Gros bravely started a tour with his stage that covers about 30 feet of space that the American public was able to realize that marionettes could be taken seriously as an integral part of the theatre and capable of presenting truly great plays with effectiveness.

Whereas other companies have carried up to two thousand pounds of baggage these French puppeteers have an equipment of over four thousand pounds, representing a complete miniature theatre, miniature, however, only in the fact that the equipment is set upon another stage. Intricate lighting effects, backdrops, wings, curtains of every description, famous transformation scenes and over 150 puppets are carried.

Phi Calendar

Phi calendar for tonight: Resolved: That self-help is not to be encouraged except in cases where there are no other sources of income.

Resolved: That the state of North Carolina should repeal the law preventing vaudeville shows coming to Chapel Hill.

Resolved: That the Phi assembly does not agree with the recent action of the Baptist state convention in condemning such practices as dancing, card playing, and petting.

Charnley Speaks

William Charnley, C. P. A., president of the state board of accountants, lectured here Friday to the students of accounting at the University.

Mr. Charnley has been doing auditing work for 15 years, and it was said by all those who heard his talk on cotton mill auditing that his subject was an instructive one; as cotton and its milling represents a good portion of the state's industry.
