

New York Papers Praise Playmakers Performance

Three One-Act Plays Well Received by Audience at Mc-Millan Theatre.

TELEGRAM LAUDS THEM

Says Spirit of Carolina Backwoods Was Splendidly Brought to Stage.

The Playmakers made a big hit with New York theatre-goers who watched their performance last Saturday night at the Mc-Millan Academic theatre. All the New York critics praised them. The New York Telegram had the following to say about their showing:

"The spirit of the Carolina backwoods was brought to the stage of the McMillan Academic theatre Saturday night when the Playmakers of the North Carolina produced three of their sixty one-act plays. It's a spirit that mirrors primitiveness, stupidity and stubbornness, a spirit that is strong and weak at the same time, a spirit that craves in no uncertain manner, but merely craves the indefiniteness of the word 'change.'

"Bringing their scenery, their luggage, themselves, and their Southern drawl in a bus all the way from Chapel Hill, the Playmakers attempt to project honesty, not greatness. And their attempt is met with success because of sincerity and energy instead of histrionic ability. Regarding themselves primarily as thinkers and playwrights rather than as actors, their accent stress is always upon the idea behind the play.

"Selecting 'The No 'Count Boy' by Paul Green; 'Black Water' by Loretto Carroll Bailey, and 'Magnolia's Man' by Gertrude Wilson Coffin, as the program, many sides of the famed spirit were exemplified. In 'The No 'Count Boy' there is the day-dreaming propensity of the youthful Negro strikingly contrasted with the emptiness of his material elders. In 'Black Water' there is a longing to get-away-from-it-all fighting against the drabness of the strikes and commonplace marriages. In 'Magnolia's Man' there is pictured the death of romance for a romantic maid.

Each character presented has reasons to be unhappy, has reasons to be inwardly fighting, and it's pretty much the general odds of life they fight against. But in the careless backwoods there is little or nothing to think of, so obsessions are easily formed. Altogether, the Carolina backwoods must be a dismal and substantially depressing environment.

"The Playmakers, living and going to school around those people, have evolved American folk plays that are unique and distinctive. They have strength and character, and with the inevitable growth of the imagination of the playwrights, a folk play that might be comparable to the greatest of our modern plays, the Irish, may some day be the result of this ambitious and worthy group."

Graham in Warrenton

Professor Frank Graham of the history department went to Warrenton yesterday to deliver the address at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memorial of John Graham, the great educator and founder of the Graham school.

VIRGINIA LEADING IN TENNIS CONTEST

Virginia was leading in the doubles and had taken four out of six of the singles yesterday afternoon when the tennis meet was postponed until 10 o'clock today on account of darkness. In the number one singles, Smith (V) won from Yeomans (C) in straight sets, 6-0, 7-5. Smith was national junior doubles champion with Eddie Jacobs in 1927, and in disposing of Yeomans showed his old-time form. Other singles matches went as follows: Merritt (C) defeated Martin (V) 6-4, 6-2; Freddis Johns (C) won from Hendall (C) 6-3, 6-2; Norman Bryan (C) won over Noell 6-3, 6-4; Newell (V) defeated Palmore (C) 6-4, 2-6, 6-4; Hugh Whitehead (V) won from Henry Baggs (C) 8-6, 6-3.

In the doubles Johns-Smith (V) were leading Merritt-Yeomans 6-3, 5-5 when the match was postponed by darkness; Newell-Martin (V) were leading Bryan-Kentall 6-3, 3-1; and Whitehead-Noell (V) were leading Palmore-Baggs 7-5, 4-4. The last match was thrown out because of the inability of some of the players to be here for the play-off today. The other doubles matches will be played off at 10 o'clock.

BERTRAND RUSSELL HERE DECEMBER 3

Bertrand Russell, philosopher, essayist, publicist, will speak in the Tin Can Tuesday, December 3, at 8:30 p. m. His subject will be "Need Moderns Be Cynical."

Mr. Russell is well known as a lecturer. He was formerly special professor of philosophy at Harvard, and is now on the regular lecturing staff of the British Institute of Philosophical Studies. He has recently been invited to deliver a special course of lectures—the Turner lectures—at Trinity college.

He speaks here under the auspices of the student entertainment committee.

Rival Captains

Captain Farris and Captain Sloan are two of the most outstanding men on the Southern grid this year. Ray Farris is a triple threat guard, and the Cavalier leader is a triple threat field general.

Tar Heel Picks All-Time University Football Team

(By Crawford MacKethan)

This article may be considered in the form of an answer to a challenge handed out to me a month ago by Mr. Charlie Woolen, graduate manager of athletics, as we sat chatting about the great athletes of the University of North Carolina. However, the job of selecting an All-Time University football team is one that from habit falls upon someone about every ten years; therefore, since such a length of time has almost elapsed the Daily Tar Heel offers to the student body and the alumni the 1929 All-Time selection.

The following results were obtained from a collection of data sent in by a number of alumni whom we believe have watched football as it was played during their college generation and the following generations. The men who have assisted us in selecting this team are as follows: George Stephens, Roy Abernethy, "Runt" Lowe, Stephen Bragaw, "Pete" Murphy, Edwin Gregory, Bill Blount, "Nemo" Coleman, Dave Tayloe, Dr. Lawson, Dr. Mangum, and Dr. Verne Howell. Of this number Dr. Lawson and Dr. Mangum were invaluable in offering their opinions upon the men as they have seen them since they began following the team "away back yonder."

The style of play has changed greatly in the last ten or twenty years and the selection this year will undoubtedly give evidence to the fact that we were attempting to choose men whom we believe could have by natural ability played the game under any style and especially that of today.

A number of great centers have been nominated; "Yank" Tandy, '16, stands out among this number because of his versatility. He was more than a triple threat; he would and did kick placements and dropkicks from the forty yard line. He was a passer and could run with the ball. "Tandy and Ramsay were the best men physically I ever examined," says Dr. Lawson. Tandy gets a place at the pivot position on our first team. Bill Blount, '20, '21, '22, gets our second vote. He was brainy, and was one of the Carolina centers to be used as a roving pivot. Although frail, he was a fighter both on defense and offense. Harry Schwartz, "Mink" Cunningham, Herman McIver, Pete Murphy, Stewart, and Council all in their day stood out as powerful centers.

As guards two men have been chosen who represent two entirely different ages and styles of football: "Bear" Collier, '94, '95, '96, and Ray Farris, '27, '28 and '29. Dr. Lawson makes the following statement: "I have experienced real joy following the play of a number of guards and Carolina has had her share of good ones, but there is one that we all know, his play is flawless, his leadership fine. I

TAR HEELS DEFEAT VIRGINIA GOLFERS

The Carolina golf team scored a decisive victory over the University of Virginia at the Hope Valley course yesterday, taking three of the four twosomes and both of the foursomes. Loftus, Virginia, won over Goodes, Carolina, in the first match 2-1. Goodes recently won the Carolina golf tournament. The next meets in their order were: Stewart (C) and Miller (V) divided points, 1½-1½; Chatham (C) defeated Burkett (V) 3-0; Willis (C) won over Rainey (V) 3-0. In the foursomes Goodes and Stewart defeated Loftus and Miller 2½-1½ and Chatham-Willis won over Burkett-Willis 3-0. The total scores were: Carolina 14, Virginia 4.

Many New Books for Sale at Bull's Head

The number of books on the bargain shelves of the Bull's Head book shop is steadily increasing. Among the new books on sale are: On the Bottom by Ellberg, God's Country by Ralph Barton, Lay Sermons by Lady Asquith, Last Nights of Paris by Philippe Soupault and many more new books. There will be a baggage check room and also an information bureau in the Y. M. C. A.

34th Game Between Old Rivals Expected to Draw Largest Crowd in History of Rivalry.

GAME CALLED 2 O'CLOCK

Virginians Will Have Full Strength in Contest; Wyrick Magnor and Farris Ready.

(by Will Yarborough)

"Before probably the largest crowd ever to witness a football game in North Carolina the football teams of the Universities of North Carolina and Virginia will clash this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Kenan Stadium for the thirty-fourth time.

Tradition dating back to the introduction of football in the South and hopes of Tar Heel supporters for a smashing victory over the Cavaliers causes this game to be the climax of the Carolina schedule for North Carolinians. Memories of long years with repeated victories for Virginians and the sting of overwhelming defeats administered the Tar Heels by the Cavaliers have whetted the appetites of Carolina followers for a victory.

Coach Chuck Collins has developed the most powerful team ever produced at Chapel Hill. With the greatest assortment of backs in the South and a line which yields little to any, Carolina has amassed a 32-point average score for the eight games played this season. Only three teams have held the Tar Heels below thirty points—Georgia Tech, Georgia, and Davidson. Wake Forest, Maryland, V. P. I., State, and South Carolina fell before the rush of scoring.

Virginia has suffered defeat only twice this fall, V. P. I. and V. M. I. turning back the Cavaliers 32-12 and 20-7 respectively. Two tie games, however, with Maryland and Washington and Lee prevent an otherwise good season. With the coming of Coach Abell a new coaching system was installed. This coupled with repeated injuries to stars has made the road rough for the Virginians. But today marks the last appearance of the 1929 Cavalier eleven. As with North Carolinians the Thanksgiving contest marks the climax of the season with Virginians. One supreme effort is made to topple the Tar Heels before the players turn in their uniforms.

Starting line-ups for the teams will find two powerful lines and speedy backfields opposing each other. The average weights of the teams are about the same. Coach Abell plans to start Turner and Byrd on the flanks, Day and Williams at the tackles, DeButts and Lankford at guard, and Taylor at center with Captain Sloan, Kaminer, Thomas and Faulconer in the backfield. Opposing these will be Fenner and Holt, ends, Koenig and Adkins, tackles, Farris and Fysal, guards, and Lipscomb, center with Branch, Nash, Ward and Spaulding in the backfield.
