

Tar Heels Open Against Guilford Quakers Tonight

New Combination At Forwards May Be Used By Ashmore.

PLAY IN TIN CAN

The Tar Heel cagers have had scant chance for drill before meeting Guilford in the Tin Can tonight at 8:30. Little is known of the comparative strength of the Quaker quintmen, but it is known that Washington and Lee has one of the outstanding teams of the south this year, and the Generals are scheduled to invade the Tin Can here just two nights later.

Coach Jim Ashmore intimated that another forward shift might be in order before these two engagements. If it comes, it will probably mean that the lanky John Edwards will step into the place of either Tom Cleland or Dave Neiman, who have started the last two games.

Davidson had a fine, smooth-working team, but still the Tar Heels fell far short of what they should have done offensively, if they had continued to run true to the form shown the previous night in turning back Greensboro "Y" 88 to 25.

The Neiman-Cleland forward combination made its debut that night, and impressive enough. Both boys were following and handling the ball in great style, with Neiman breaking away for 23 points. At Davidson Neiman got but one and Cleland never broke the scoring ice.

Both boys are fast but comparatively short. Edwards is a big boy, converted from center, and if he can master forward play, might be a big asset. There was no complaint as to the work of Harper, big center and high scorer against Davidson, and of Marpet and Brown, who played their usual fine game on defense. It was the old story of four forwards graduated, leaving only rookies to fill the gaps.

TEAM PREPARES FOR W. & L. GAME

Generals Have Veteran Outfit In Togs Back This Year: Williams Is Big Star.

The Tar Heel basketballers will face one of their stiffest games of the season when Washington and Lee's Generals invade the Tin Can here Thursday night. The Generals boast the same team of veterans that piled up an impressive tournament record last year, and this season are going stronger than ever.

If comparative scores mean anything, their strength is shown by the fact that they defeated St. John's 51 to 16, while St. John's in turn defeated Virginia 35 to 19.

Though the showing of the Generals in the southern tournament last year was not so good, their pre-tourney record was among the most impressive in the south. They were defeated in only one game last year, while they counted among their victims the strong West Virginia team, which had defeated Pitt's fine quint.

Practically the same string of veterans is back this year, with the team being built around Williams, star football end and one of the south's few four-letter men.

Coach Jim Ashmore, Carolina mentor, is having a great deal of trouble getting a smooth working combination. Thus far, the guards and centers have done good work, but the forwards, all rookies, have been far from consistent.

A hummer's wings moves faster than an airplane's propeller.

Golf Rules

The course committee of the Country Golf Club again calls attention to the local ruling that any non-member wishing to play on the course, must first purchase a ticket, which may be secured at either the Book Exchange or Students Supply Store.

Because the course is a short one and to encourage rapid movement and minimize delay as much as possible, all players are requested to move in "twosomes." This is not a local rule, however, but only a request, so that every one playing the course may experience more enjoyment hitherto.

WRESTLERS OPEN AGAINST MIDDIES

Shift Of Meet With Duke To March 3 Leaves Tar Heel Grapplers Without Contest Until January 25.

The Carolina-Duke wrestling meet, carded for the Tin Can here Saturday night, has been shifted up to March 3. The change was made at the request of the Duke officials, and was announced yesterday by Charles T. Woolen, graduate manager of athletics. This means that the Tar Heel grapplers will have another week of practice before raising the curtain on their season.

The Navy meet, at Annapolis, January 25, will be the curtain raiser instead of the Duke meet. The shift in schedule works an obvious imposition on Coach Chuck Quinlan's matmen. Moore and Cowper, in the middle weights, two of five lettermen back this year, would be eligible to wrestle Duke this Saturday, but will be away from college on co-op engineering work at the later date for which the meet is now carded.

Coach Quinlan is grooming replacements for the veterans as fast as possible, but the task of developing men to fill lettermen's posts is a hard one. Just now J. A. Park, J. B. Spell and W. L. Higdon look the best of the contenders for Moore's 155-pound post, and Sam Spitzer and Bob Kushner for Cowper's 165-pound post.

The other three lettermen in camp are Fred Stallings, 115-pounder; Captain Wayne Woodard, 125-pounder, and Ferguson, 175-pounder.

Due to the change in the wrestling schedule, there will be no meet between the Carolina and Virginia matmen on Saturday, January 18, as previously announced. Virginia meets Washington and Lee on that date, leaving it open for Carolina unless an engagement can be secured with the Concord Y. M. C. A. In case there should be no meet, Carolina's first contest would be with Navy at Annapolis.

This year's squad is rather small with a noticeable lack of reserve material. The team is further weakened by the ineligibility of several lettermen. Coach Quinlan urges new men to come out and fill these vacancies.

The second week of the basketball season ended Saturday with Duke and Alabama tied for first place with two wins and no defeats. Tennessee, Georgia and Kentucky, with one victory each, also boast perfect conference records and trail close in the wake of the pace-setters. All but eight teams have seen conference play to date and most of these will get into action in the 14 games carded for this week. In addition, 18 contests are on the books with non-conference teams.

The Duke Blue Devils, in their triumph over the Cavaliers at Charlottesville Wednesday night ran up the largest score of the week. Fast passing and accurate shooting enabled the Devils to register 65 points while the Virginia five tallied 32. In total conference scoring the Clemson Tigers lead with 105 points. On the other hand, the Tiger opponents, Kentucky, Tennessee, Auburn and Georgia Tech, ran up 121 points to make Clemson the most scored-on aggregation in the conference. Tulane, also, has been rather negligent in the defensive side of the game, having had 111 points scored against it while marking up 83 points for itself.

The Wildcats of Kentucky have shown up best on defensive, allowing only 15 points by Clemson in the only game in which they have engaged.

Even this early in the season it becomes apparent that no individual outfit is going to have anything like supremacy on the court. This has been evidenced by some of the close scores that have been turned in. Duke, after overwhelming the Cavaliers Wednesday, barely managed to nose the Maryland Old Liners 25-24 as Clarence "Doodles" Thomas sank a field goal from the center in the last few seconds of play. Tulane eased out a 27-25 win over Mississippi college in the first of a two game series last week and then dropped the second by a still closer score of 27-26.

The Carolina Tar Heels open conference play with the Generals of Washington and Lee in Chapel Hill Thursday. The Mississippi Aggies have yet to meet a conference antagonist, but showed considerable form in disposing of the Meridian, Miss. Y. M. C. A. Saturday night. North Carolina State, with victories over Lenoir Rhyne and High Point college in the bag, goes into conference play against V. P. I. Friday, takes on Washington and Lee Saturday.

Big five play got under way Saturday when the Davidson Wildcats forced the Tar Heels to bow before them. Big Five games for this week are: Wake Forest vs. State, tonight; Wake Forest vs. Duke Saturday. The next big five game on the card for the Tar Heels will be the Wake Forest game here the 25th.

All conference teams except Alabama saw action the past week, with 28 games in all. On the whole, the conference outfits emerged victorious over outside opponents. Kentucky broke even in a two-game series with Creighton college of Nebraska. V. P. I., Tulane, Vir-

EXPECT 150 MEN OUT FOR WINTER FOOTBALL HERE

Coach Collins Will Divide Material Into Five Or Six Groups.

Head Coach Chuck Collins returns today from his pilgrimage through the North to make ready for the annual session of winter football which begins this week.

Coach Collins, who had a brilliant season during the past year, will be assisted by Coaches Cerney, Fetzer and Enright. Judging from the number of men who reported for varsity football in September together with the freshman material, there will be approximately 150 men out for practice. These will be divided into five or six teams according to strength, each being named for some team that will oppose Carolina in the fall.

Two games will be played each week, and in this way the coaches will be able to replace such men as Farris, Eskew, Ward, Holt, Adkins and others, who graduate this year. This list is not long, but the strength it contains is large. In other words, after a careful inventory of the Tar Heel stock, it was learned that the Tar Heels have a deficiency in four linemen and two backfield men. There, promises to be much scrapping for each of these berths from the appearance of the frosh strength and the reserve power of the 1929 edition of the Tar Heels.

If scholastic work permits, Farris, Ward, Adkins and the others may participate in the games; they will at least be on hand to aid the coaches.

Material will be distributed the latter half of the week.

I Defeats New Dorms

In the game between Grimes and "G," "G" failed to show up and Grimes won by forfeit.

In the New Dorms vs. "I," the boys from "I" proved to be a fast bunch, and they looked as if they had had plenty of previous practice when they defeated New Dorms yesterday by a score of 21 to 19. Captain Leokowitz was a heavy scorer at center, with three field goals to his credit. Turchiavelli was the highest scorer, outdoing Leikowitz by one goal on a foul. The New Dorms seemed to be a little slow in starting, but towards the end they speeded up and almost tied the score.

Steele defeated Best House 26 to 20. Smith, left guard for Steele, played a fast, clean game, piling up four goals. Purser, center, was not far behind with three of his own. All the Steele team were scorers at least twice. Best House fought hard, Davis and Harper being their leaders, but failed to overtake the winners.

Heelettes Travel

The Tar Heelettes will play Greensboro High School tonight at 8 o'clock at the high school gymnasium in Greensboro.

This is the second game of the year for the Tar Heelettes, having lost to the Chapel Hill Lassies Thursday night 26-25.

The co-eds will leave tomorrow afternoon for Greensboro, and return to the Hill after the game.

The Greensboro lineup has not been ascertained, but the Heelettes lineup will be practically the same as in last Thursday's game, with the exception of Kitty Wells, star guard and mainstay of the co-ed defense who was injured in the last game and most likely will not be able to play.

Jo Hill, stellar guard, will be back at her position tonight. Louise Thacker, forward for the Heelettes, played with Greensboro High School several years before she entered the University.

Frosh Five Plays Leakville Tonight

The freshman basketball team will open the season tonight with the Leakville "Y" team at the Tin Can at 7 o'clock. The game will be a preliminary to the Carolina-Guilford game.

This year there will be no cut in the squad as a result of a University policy of having as many men as possible take part in athletics.

Numbered among the squad are several high school and prep school luminaries: Chandler, a Durham boy, was a star on last year's Oak Ridge Military Academy team as was Henry, Dunn, forward, saw service with Oak Park; Hines, center, played with the Charlotte high school team, while Lineberger starred for Woodberry Forest. The reserves who will probably see service are Moore, Riggs, Markham and Ferebee, forwards; Davis, Connor, Watch and Newcombe, guards.

The squad is fast rounding into shape and with a little more practice should reach mid-season form.

The next game scheduled for the Tar Babies will be with the fast Oak Ridge team at the Tin Can Thursday night.
