J. C. B. Ehringhaus Will Be Speaker At Senior Smoker

President Green Says Meeting Is Most Important of Year.

TO BE IN SWAIN HALL

Seniors Will Select Superlatives, Class-Day Officials and Dance Leaders; Officials Urge Large Attendance.

The senior class will hold its winter quarter smoker tonight in Swain Hall at 9 o'clock with J. C. B. Ehringhaus, well known Elizabeth City lawyer and alumnus of the University, as chief speaker. President Green will appoint the committee on the class memorial, in addition to bringing several other executive matters before the class.

The following class day officers will be elected: Poet, Prophet, Historian, Statistician, and Lawyer. A chief dance leader and two assistants will be selected, also.

The following senior superlatives will be chosen: most influential, best writer, best looking, chief politician, most dramatic, biggest nut, biggest bull shooter, biggest ladies man, brightest, biggest villain, best natured, best executive, most popular, best speaker, best business man, most social, most retiring, best athlete, and best all-round.

The co-ed superlatives to be selected are: most popular, prettiest, and most dramatic.

This will be the most important-smoker of the collegiate year, owing to the number of executive matters upon which the class is to act. Officials of the class urge that all members attend.

MRS. MOSHER TO ATTEND MEETING

Is State President Of A.A.U.W., Which Holds Annual Meeting In Charlotte Friday And Saturday.

The North Carolina Division of the American Association of University Women will hold its third annual meeting in Charlotte on Friday and Saturday, February 7 and 8, with headquarters at the Hotel Charlotte. The members of the Charlotte branch, acting as hostesses, have arranged to receive the visiting speakers and delegates on Friday afternoon with a drive around the city followed by tea at the home of Mrs. F. O. Clarkson. The banquet on Friday night, with Mrs. Andrew Blair, president of the Charlotte Branch, presiding, and at which Dr. B. B. Kendrick, professor of history in the North Carolina College for Women, will speak on "The Changing South," will mark the formal opening of the two days' conference. Saturday morning's session will be devoted to the business of the conference. Following the state president's greeting and general items of business, there will be reports from the ten North Carolina branches and from chairmen of the five standing committees of the state division, and a brief resume of the Geneva Conference by Miss Catherine Allen, professor of French in Meredith College and former president of the North Carolina Division of the A. A. U. W.

FEBRUARY ISSUE LAW REVIEW HAS ARTICLE BY DEAN

"Some Phases of the Doctrine Of Exemplary Damages," Subject of McCormick's Article.

The leading article in the February issue of the North Carolina Law Review which appears this week is by Dean McCormick of the law school. It is entitled "Some Phases of the Doctrine of Exemplary Damages" and is to form the substance of a chapter in a book on damages which Dean McCormick is writing for publication by the West Publishing Company. It discusses the interesting matter of allowing exemplary damages or "smart money" in certain cases where compensation does not give redress for conduct which deserves punishment. Dean McCormick acknowledges the assistance of two students, John H. Anderson and H. B. Parker, in collecting authorities for the article.

The second article is by Professor Van Hecke and B. Thorn Lord, a third-year law student. It discusses the North Carolina doctrine as to parol trusts and is technical in its nature. Jefferson B. Fordham, who is now Sterling Fellow at the Yale law school, writes an article on "Some Legal Aspects of Employee Stock-Purchase Plans," and thus raises some vital questions concerning those plans which are now being tried out by many business concerns, large and small. Mr. Fordham graduated from the law school last year and is well known to the students and faculty of the University.

There are 13 student notes and comments, John H. Anderson and Harry Rockwell contributing two each. Probably the most important note is by Mr. Anderson on "Tax Advantages of Incorporating North Carolina Enterprises Outside the State." He shows by statistics just why it pays to incorporate a North Carolina business outside of North Carolina because of the heavier tax burden incurred by incorporating at home. Mr. Rockwell's two comments deal with legal problems in connection with checks and banking practices. In addition to these topics, the student material includes the subjects of Income Taxation, Constitutional Law, Employers' Liability, Insurance, Marriage and Divorce, Bank Deposits, Partition of Real Property and Quasi Contracts.

The most picturesque case is discussed by Thomas W. Sprinkle. It concerned the application of an accident insurance policy to the case of a man who died as a result of drinking wood alcohol which, unknown to

TWO DANCES SET FOR BYNUM GYM OVER WEEK-END

Law School To Give Annual Dance On Friday Night; Gholson To Lead.

GRAIL DANCE SATURDAY

(By Holmes Davis)

After a rather strenuous week of mid-terms for the general student body, and a short relapse of time after the semi-annual exams of the law school, the two sets will be allowed some amount of diversion this week-end in the form of dances. The law school celebrates Friday night and the Grail will have its second dance of the quarter Saturday night.

The winter quarter is generally rather devoid of dances but it is expected that quite a few girls from various parts of the state will be present on the Hill over the week-end to attend these functions. Both the Grail and the law school are planning unusually gala affairs as this will probably be the last big week-end before the mid-winter dances to be held the 21st and 22nd of this month.

The law school dance will be held in Bynum gymnasium. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Mendenhall's Tar Heels. The affair is to be formal, and no one will be admitted without a ticket. Each member of the law school will receive two tickets, including his own.

A. W. Gholson, Jr., will lead the dance with Miss Evelyn Stephenson of Abington, Va. He will be assisted by John Lewis with Miss Emily Dewey Mitchell of Chapel Hill; O. A. Warren with Miss Kathryn Barnette of Winston-Salem, and J. H. Chadbourne, whose partner has not been announced. Members of the faculty of the law school and their wives will act as chaperones.

One of the campus orchestras will play for the Grail dance, which will also be in Bynum gymnasium. The usual admission fee is to be charged. Regular German Club rules will be in effect at both affairs.

Play-Likers To Appear Here In "Children Of The Moon"

Play To Be Given In Playmakers' Theatre Friday And Saturday Nights; Fourth Number On Playmakers' Season Program.

The Play-Likers of North Carolina College will appear here Friday and Saturday in Martin Flavin's modern tragedy "Children of the Moon." The production, which is the fourth number on the season program of the Carolina Playmakers, will be presented at the Playmakers Theatre. A matinee will be given at 2:30 Saturday.

"Children of the Moon" was presented by the Play-Likers at the Aycock auditorium, Greensboro, in November with considerable success. The play is considered probably the most difficult production yet given by the North Carolina College players. The stage and lighting effects added much to the realism of the play.

The play centers around the love affair of a normal young English woman who is engaged to an aviator, but whose marriage is discouraged in every possible way by her selfish mother. Finally, the mother tells her daughter that insanity is here-

EXTENSION WORK IS OUTLINED BY R. M. GRUMMAN

Says Division Is Responsible For Bringing Educational Resources Of State To People.

AIDS HIGH SCHOOLS

"The University of North Carolina extension division is the administrative agency of your state institution for making the resources and educational leadership of the University available to the people of North Carolina." These are the words of Mr. Russell M. Grumman, head of the extension division, in the February issue of the Tar Heel Topics, in which he briefly outlines the extension services of the University. Mr. Grumman's message goes to "prospective students and their parents" who are the intended readers of Tar Heel Topics.

Described as an institution that serves the high school graduate before and after graduation, through the agency of a variety of school relations activities and bureaus, the extension division originated as a University bureau in 1912. Since its organization as a separate department in 1921, the enrollment of extra-mural students has grown to equal the number of students in residence at Chapel Hill.

In his article Mr. Grumman

A. Milne. Altogether there are nine male parts and seven female parts to be cast, offering excellent and varied opportunities for new talent.

ROBERTSON AIDED BY DISCOVERY OF LOST ARCHIVES

Authenticity and Realism Given To Life of Miranda; Recovery of Old Documents.

UNIVERSITY PRESS BOOK

It is to the discovery of the lost archives of Francisco Miranda that much of the authenticity and vivid realism of The Life of Miranda by William Spence Robertson is due. The book, in two volumes, is the latest publication of the University Press, appearing the first of this month.

Recognized as a foremost authority on Latin-American history, Mr. Robertson has produced in this work an excellent account of the most spectacular career of the South American revolution period. As the first person to gain access to the voluminous private records of Miranda, he has opened a vast store of hitherto unpublished details about the romantic adventures of the "knight-errant of Spanish American liberty."

Among the copies of The Hispanic American Historical Review, published by the Duke University Press, is found an article written by Mr. Robertson soon after he made the discovery of the lost archives in the library of Lord Bathurst in England. At that time, May 1927, the author stated that "their discovery will make imperative the rewriting of Miranda's life story." Therefore, the appearance of his book through the University Press has caused a revival of interest in Mr. Robertson's account of the research involved in unearthing Miranda's long-lost memorabilia.

When, in July 1812, General Miranda was forced to submit to Spanish Royalists in Venezuela, the tomes containing his manuscripts were carried secretly to the West Indies by the captain of a frigate upon which Miranda had intended to embark. There they were taken over by a British officer who dis-

Mrs. Watson is a graduate of the George Washington University at Washington, and is actively concerned in fraternity matters.

In Speech Here Noted Rabbi Blames Christianity for Jews Not Accepting Faith.

LEAVES FOR DANVILLE

In Hurry to Make Train Connections; To Deliver Lectures In Many Mid-Western Cities.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, founder of the Zionists Organization of America and noted rabbi of the Free Synagogue of New York, delivered his second address in Chapel Hill yesterday morning in Gerrard hall to approximately 800 students and citizens. The subject of the lecture was "Jew and Christian: Agreements and Disagreements."

He began by stating that the old enmity between Christian and Jew expressed by the saying that "Orthodoxy is my doxy, heterodoxy is your doxy" should no longer prevail.

"Christianity and Judaism are closely related," Dr. Wise stated "because after all Jesus of Nazareth was the son of a Jewess mother and knew nothing of the apostolic creeds which were later to compose the New Testament."

"The whole ideal of collective worship," he said in enumerating some of the agreements of the two religions, "was borrowed from the Hebrew religion. Many of the hymns that are sung today came from the Hebrew Psalter, which was the soul of Judaea, and the quest of holiness is the aim of both religions." In short, Dr. Wise considered the two religions but two branches of the same divine church.

"The point of departure between the two faiths," Dr. Wise said in discussing some of the disagreements, "is Jesus of Nazareth. Christianity accepts Jesus as 'uniquely divine,' and holds that the Messiah is yet to come, not in the form of a personality, but in the self-redemptive power of the human race, not through the death of one,

Former Student To Seek Governorship Of Western State

C. J. Hagan, former student at the University of North Carolina, has recently announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor of California.

In planning a state-wide campaign, Mr. Hagan will present as his platform the repeal of the Wright act and the modification of the Volstead act. "I don't drink," he said, "but I'll vote wet for the defense of personal liberty. And in the forthcoming primary and election, not only the man but the issue will decide the outcome of the campaign. I stand for the repeal of the Wright act and modification of the Volstead act, and am ready to meet any opponent on these questions."

Charles J. Hagan was born in Greenville, N. C., in 1879. He attended the state university for the year of 1896, being initiated into the Sigma Chi fraternity. Afterwards he was a student at Horner Military Institute and also at St. Mary's college in Belmont, N. C. Becoming a resident of Los Angeles in 1909 he became engaged in the real estate business. For the past two years he has been prominent in city and state politics.
