

RESEARCH WORK IS DISCUSSED AT SIGMA XI MEETING

Members of Faculty and Visitors Present Outlines of Studies Before Fraternity.

At the meeting of Sigma Xi, national research fraternity, held last Tuesday evening, brief outlines of research work were presented by two doctors from outside the University and by four members of the faculty of the school of medicine.

Dr. Davison of the school of medicine of Duke University, Dr. Carrington of Rainey hospital, Burlington, and Doctors MacNider, George, McPherson and Brooks of the University faculty told of their recent work.

Dr. Davison told of his work to determine whether Northerners are more susceptible to yellow fever than are Southerners. His conclusions were that Northerners are less susceptible to the disease, but that cases in North Carolina are less virulent than those further north.

Dr. Carrington described his recent research work in obstetrics and told of a case of bringing about the cure of a patient suffering from a ruptured diaphragm.

Dr. MacNider explained his later research work on Bright's disease and chronic nephritis, in which he used dogs as experimental animals. He also told of studies made of pregnancy toxemias.

Dr. McPherson told of studies in pus-forming bacteria, the organisms of secondary infection.

Dr. George reported on research conducted with Mr. Brown and others conducted with Mr. Rose.

Dr. Brooks described studies made on the structure of cholesterol and argesterol and the relation of these to vitamin B. In addition to this he told of a recently published study of the protein consumption of medical students. This study was made simultaneously at Northwestern University, Tulane and the University of North Carolina, in an effort to determine whether temperature had any bearing on protein consumption. The results of this study showed that protein consumption was apparently not affected by temperature.

Fraternity Property Not in Tax Sale List

The town of Chapel Hill, according to John Foushee, city manager, will soon begin the sale of property upon which tax liens were levied in September, 1928.

The property involved in these liens for assessments and taxes amounted to $31,000 at the time of the lien. Much of this has been redeemed, however, by owners who have paid the penalty of 1 per cent per month provided by law for the first year, and 2-3 per cent for the next half year, after which time sale of the property must be completed, according to a new state statute.

There is no fraternity property involved in this amount, which indicates a good financial condition of local fraternities generally during this period. Ordinarily there are several pieces of real estate owned by fraternities upon which taxes are not paid on time.

DR. KNIGHT TO SPEAK TO SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Professor Edgar W. Knight of the school of education left yesterday afternoon for Clarksburg, W. Va., where he will deliver two addresses before the West Virginia State Teachers' Association. Dr. Knight will return to Chapel Hill tomorrow.

Rabbi Wise Says Chapel Hill Bulwark Southern Liberalism

"We of the North think of Chapel Hill as one of the few bulwarks of southern liberalism—a reasoned liberalism, not a wild radicalism. I regret that so many of the faculty members were not present to face me," said Rabbi Wise, eminent publicist, lecturer, and founder of the Zionist Organization of America in an interview yesterday.

"We Northerners," he declared, "consider Chapel Hill the seat of one of the most significant universities in the nation and I am delighted to have been able to pay you a visit at last. I hope I shall again have an opportunity to visit Chapel Hill and the sunny south, which today is not so sunny."

Rabbi Wise's lecture at the Methodist church Tuesday night was on the subject of "My Vision of America." "My vision of America," he said, "is the vision of a foreign born American. Foreign, my friends, but not alien. You do not know how hurtful is the use of the word 'alien.' It is an indication of the dubiety, hostility and indifference with which the foreigner is treated. Foreigners are not 'things.' They are not cases to be solicitous over. You can't help a man by treating him as a problem.

"A man is not an American because he has touched the soil of America—nor because he was born there—but because the soul of America has touched him.

"My vision of America is the vision of a land wherein there shall be a reasoned conception of Truth."

Dr. Wise then related the incident of his conversation with a Boston blue-blood. "The man told me, with humble pride in his voice, that his great-grandfather had been a signer of the Declaration of Independence. So I answered that my great, great, great, great, great grandfather had written the Decalogue.

"The Bible, both the old and new testaments, except for one or two epistles, was written by a Jew. The Asiatic world lives on the fruits of the life work of my people. One of the greatest treasures of the spiritual world, the Shepherd's Psalm, was written by a Jew. One of my fathers found that written in his soul. Yet some people tell me that because I am a Jew I cannot become completely, wholly an American.

"Remember, my friends, that it is not safe to ask a man to change his faith. A Jew anchored in his faith is a potential asset to the republic, but a Jew who forsakes his spiritual and racial anchorage bodes no good to our spiritual life. Don't try to wean him and win him from his ancient moorings. If you would help the foreigner, Slav, Chezk, Teuton, Jew, Celt and all the rest, instead of trying to make him ashamed of being a foreigner, evoke from his spirit a noble and enriching loyalty.

"My vision of America is the vision of a land in which there shall be brotherly love toward one another."

The lecture was well attended by townspeople and students—a fitting tribute to his fame and an indication of the respect the world accords him.

Hillsboro Student Winner in Contest

Samuel Lockhart, representing the Hillsboro high school, was elected Wednesday afternoon to represent Orange county in the American Legion oratorical contest on the subject, "Our Flag." Raymond Andrews of Carrboro won second place.

The county elimination contest was given as a part of a public patriotic program at the Hillsboro school on Wednesday. Paul Robertson, commander of the local post, Owen Robertson of Hillsboro, and E. R. Rankin of the University extension division and county chairman of the contest, made up the board of judges.

To the winner a prize of $10 was given by the Chapel Hill post, and to runner-up an award of $5. In addition, Lockhart, by virtue of his victory, will be eligible for the district elimination contest to be held in Reidsville on February 14, for a prize of $25, a gift of Julian Price of Greensboro. The winner in the district competition will speak in the state finals. To the successful speaker in this contest a gold medal and a prize of $50 will be awarded.

Presbyterians To Organize Vestry

The student vestry of the Presbyterian church will be organized at a meeting of the Presbyterian students interested in church work at their second meeting Sunday. The students held a meeting last Sunday, and formulated plans for the organization of the student vestry.

Life Of The State Is Stimulated By Research Work of The University

University which have done most to establish a record that carries with it this national distinction is the Institute for Research in Social Science. Beginning in 1924 with a grant of $97,500 from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial to cover a period of three years, the Institute was successful enough to merit at the end of that period a second grant of $240,000 to be used over a period of five years. According to the terms of these grants, the Institute of more than a score of members is engaged in a specific program of regional social research, study, and interpretation. It now has on the press or ready for publication 22 volumes. Family problems, negro culture and development, North Carolina's railroad development, North Carolina social history, North Carolina's methods of handling criminals, county and municipal government, the changing attitude of the South toward women, Welfare Work in North Carolina mill villages, human factors in cotton culture, and labor unions in the South, are some of the studies on which its members are now engaged.

In the short space of eight years the University of North Carolina Press has attained a national reputation. This year's book-list for example carries such titles as "The Virginia Plutarch," "The Tree Named John," "The American Scholar," "Human Factors in Cotton Culture," "American and French Culture" and "Lectures on Egyptian Art." Naturally the stimulus of a press eager for manuscripts prepared for a discriminating group of readers is another powerful incentive to research.

Research Through Publications

Co-ordinate with the work of the press in giving to the outside world the results of the study and the laboratory workers are the official publications sponsored by special groups: "The Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Society," the publications of the North Carolina Historical Society, "The North Carolina Law Review," and "Studies in Philology" all foster and spread information of interest to special readers.

Recently paid the high complement of being called "the leader in the new research movement in the South," the University has presented in this booklet what would seem to be conclusive evidence that the tribute was not unmerited.

If volume of research means anything, it would seem that Dr. F. A. Ogg, professor of political science in the University of Wisconsin—for it was he who paid the University the compliment, in a survey of American research he did for the American Council of Learned Societies—was well justified in his appraisal.

Or if quality of research be considered, a glance at the sort of projects being done would seem to be equally impressive.

Incidentally, the University is the only institution in the country that summarizes the results of its research through publication in this form. The material for the booklet is assembled by the Graduate school, of which Dr. James F. Royster is dean.

"By common agreement," Dr. Ogg said in his survey, which was published in a book entitled

"Research Into the Humanities and Social Science," "the leadership in the new research movement in the South is traceable to one institution, and to certain men and women in it, namely the University of North Carolina."

"The explanation of this leadership," he goes on to say, "seems to lie in an unusually keen appreciation of the possibilities of service to the people of the state, in the presence of the faculty of many vigorous, ambitious, and productive scholars, and in the liberal support of research interests by administrative authorities, facilitated, no doubt, by the notable economic and industrial development which the state has of late experienced." Further statistical evidence back of the high rating given the University by the American Council of Learned Societies may be drawn from the report of Dean Royster of the Graduate school. This report shows that the 224 graduate students enrolled last year came from 20 different states (9 of them above the Mason-Dixon line) and from 80 different colleges and universities. In 1919 there were only 40 graduate students enrolled in the University.
