

MRS. MOSHER IS ON LEAGUE PROGRAM

Wife Of Professor To Take Prominent Part In Women Voters Convention In Goldsboro This Week.

The program of the League of Women Voters is divided into work and study categories and the "work" in most cases suggests legislative action. The legislative program for 1930 will be proposed and discussed at the convention yesterday and today in Goldsboro by chairmen of standing committees.

Mrs. E. R. Mosher of Chapel Hill is chairman of the committee on education and is also president of the N. C. American Association of University Women. Mrs. Mosher will propose that the league work again for the attainment of the sixth grade as an added requirement in the compulsory education law.

Miss Harriet W. Elliot, chairman of the committee on efficiency in government, is professor of political science at N. C. C. W. She is a lecturer of note and is in demand both within and outside North Carolina. Among the measures which she proposes are a "permanent registration" law and an improvement in the new election law of North Carolina. Miss Elliot is also chairman of legislation for the Federation of Women's Clubs and a member of the Legislative Council of North Carolina Women.

Mrs. Chase G. Woodhouse, also of N. C. C. W., where she is vocational director, is internationally known for her work in home economics. She is director of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, maintained by the American Association of University Women. As chairman of the committee on living costs of the N. C. League of Women Voters, she has made a year's study of the gas and electric rates in the state and will give the results at the convention luncheon on Tuesday, February 11. She has been in charge of the division of economics, bureau of home economics, United States department of agriculture, conducting research on the standards of living of business and professional families.

Mrs. Bulus B. Swift of Greensboro, chairman of the committee on child welfare, was formerly president of the Parent Teacher Association of North Carolina and is now spending all her time working for better conditions for children.

Mrs. Charles G. Doak of Raleigh is perhaps best known to the movie fans, as she broadcasts daily. She is chairman of the committee on women in industry and proposes work for a 10-hour day and 50-hour week law in North Carolina. Mrs. Doak, Mrs. Mosher, Mrs. Cowper, chairman of legislation, and Mrs. Swift, make up the committee on the working child, which will demonstrate a study group at work as a part of the convention program.

Mrs. W. B. Pruett of Belmont, chairman of the committee on the legal status of women, probably knows more about the laws relating to women than anyone else in the state. She is advocating a change in the laws regarding inheritance of property of spouses, so as to equalize the rights of husband and wife.

Mrs. C. W. Tillett, Jr. of Charlotte, chairman of the committee on international cooperation to prevent war, is known for her social, political and civic work. Her chief interest now is to urge U. S. adherence to the world court, and effective work by the London Conference.

DI SENATE AGAINST FREE PHILIPPINES

After more than usual discussion last night, the Dialectic Senate voted by large majority against the bill, "Resolved: That the Philippine Islands should be granted complete independence." Senator Shreve, who introduced the bill, spoke on both sides of the question as an introduction. Those favoring the bill were Senators Rector, Rose, Ramsay and Gentry. Those opposing the bill were Senators Wright, Hamer, Dungan, Goode and Little. The bill was discussed from angles of world-wide interest, benefit to the United States, benefit to the Philippines, etc.

President McPherson reported that the debate held recently under the auspices of the two literary societies was considered a success. Four new candidates were proposed for membership, and will be initiated at the next meeting.

ASSEMBLY FAVORS CAMPUS POLITICS

The Philanthropic Assembly declared itself to be in favor of campus political frame-ups at its weekly meeting last night. The resolution "Resolved, that political frame-ups for student offices are detrimental and should be discouraged" was defeated by a narrow margin after a heated discussion, in which the merits and faults of frame-ups were stated. The discussion centered around the desirability of the presence of one or two political organizations on the campus.

Speaker Lang stated that the joint session of the two societies would be held in two weeks in the hall of the assembly. He named Representatives Baldwin, Yarborough, Montgomery and Carr as a committee to consult with him in the selection of a subject for discussion at the joint session. Speaker Lang called a meeting of the constitutional committee to meet with him Friday night. He announced the results of the Williams-Woodhouse debate, and thanked the assembly for their cooperation in sponsoring the debate.

W. W. Blackman, N. B. Woodard and C. A. Renn were presented for admission into the assembly. Speaker Lang extended them the privileges of the floor, and announced that the initiation would be held at the last session of the quarter.

Readers' Opinions

finds "simply the fact that a boy and girl in a country town, spent the night together." I would advise one not to look for true happiness in life until one has sensed that abstract something around which all life is centered and on which all ideals, for which we work, fight, and live are founded.

Maybe the critic has been disappointed in love and has temporarily lost his ideals, for I cannot believe that one could be so materialistic and still find beauty in diction.

As for the "almighty Literary Supplement to the Daily Tar Heel taking on the general aspect of the Buccaneer," I would say that he who looks for smut looks not outside his own mind if he finds in a passive treatment of a beautifully passionate subject.

Saturday Review Of Literature Praises Virginia Plutarch

with success, except for the appearance of "only one important gap—that of the Reconstruction period, when Virginia was barren of great men . . ."

"Because he aimed at continuous narrative of deeds, Dr. Bruce has fixed his attention not upon subjective aspects of his various heroes, but upon what they contributed in action to American life. The emphasis upon action gives the book movement, sweep, and variety. It leaves it a little poor in one Plutarchian quality, the presentation of intimate traits of character . . ."

"In any such collection the sketches must be of uneven merit. Dr. Bruce is at his best in dealing not with his greatest men, nor with his least, but with those of middle rank. After all, nobody can treat Washington adequately in 35 pages . . ."

Concerning those men of "middle rank" the critic says that "in all . . . there were salient and picturesque qualities," and for examples mentions a few of the best sketches. Of the lesser characters presented in the "Plutarch" it is said: "Now and then it can be objected that Dr. Bruce is too favorable to his subjects . . . But it is pleasant to respond to the enthusiasm with which he writes of men who really deserve it."

In conclusion Mr. Nevins writes thus in compliment to the book, and to Virginia, the home state of its author: "It is an interesting and measurably impressive panorama which Dr. Bruce has spread before us. The reader, as he finishes it, will find himself wondering why it was that Virginia proved so far-sighted men of action . . . prolific of these energetic and whatever it is, the Old Dominion has a proved record."
