

KENDALL SPEAKS ON CONDITION OF TEXTILE MILLS

Declares Here That Industry Asserting Constructive Leadership Within Own Ranks.

PRESIDENT KENDALL CO.

The American textile industry is beginning to assert the constructive leadership within its own ranks for the correction of the conditions which have provoked criticism, Henry P. Kendall, president of the Kendall Company, which has nine mills in six states, including five in the Carolinas, declared here last night in an address under the auspices of the school of commerce.

The address was one of a series that have been arranged by the school of commerce with the view to having all sides of the textile situation presented to the students.

Mr. Kendall pointed out that equilibrium between supply and demand must be reached. "It is shattered," he said, "by the chronic overproduction which has burdened the industry, but can be restored and maintained by planning and cooperation."

"The recent voluntary agreement of mills to limit hours of work to 55 weekly on the day shift and 50 on the night shift is a step in the right direction. Our problem of balancing production and consumption is simple compared with Great Britain's. British export comprises approximately 65 per cent of British production, while our export business is only around 7 per cent," Mr. Kendall said.

"Our recurring periods of overproduction causes unemployment, price demoralization and chaos, and benefits neither employer, employee, consumer, nor stockholder. There are encouraging signs that the industry is awakening to its economic and social responsibilities and that an enlightened leadership is beginning to take constructive steps toward lifting this great industry out of the long-hour low-wage class."

Mr. Kendall sketched the growth of the Kendall Company from a single mill in Massachusetts to the present organization comprising nine mills in six states, including five in the Carolinas, controlling its processes, distribution, as well as production, from raw material to finished product which is trademarked, packaged, merchandized and sold by the company, declaring that planning and better merchandising have proven essential factors in the company's growth.

The meeting last night was arranged by Professor G. T. Schwenning of the school of commerce. Members of the local branch of the Taylor Society, the international organization for the promotion of the science and art of management, of which Mr. Kendall is president, were special guests.

JONAS SAYS POST OFFICE LOBBY TO BE OPEN LONGER

Congressman Wires C. T. Woolen Assuring Longer Hours for Local Office.

ACTION EXPECTED SOON

According to a telegram received by Charles T. Woolen, business manager of the University, from Hon. Charles Jonas, U. S. Congressman, the local post office lobby will be authorized to remain open until eleven o'clock in the future. The telegram was in response to a letter written by Mr. Woolen requesting the North Carolina Congressman to seek such action.

The telegram received from Representative Jonas is as follows: "At the close of the personal interview I had today with Mr. Trotter, chief of the division of Post Office service, I was advised that the department would authorize post office lobby to remain open until 11 o'clock."

Agitation for having the local post office remain open later than the customary nine o'clock closing hour was begun some time ago by townspeople. The postmaster and several townspeople wrote the North Carolina senators requesting action thru the post office department.

Means To Interview Electrical Seniors

L. J. Means, factory representative of the General Electric Company, will be in Chapel Hill today to interview senior electrical engineering students regarding the training course offered by the company to graduates of technical schools. It was first announced that Mr. Means would be here Wednesday, which was an error.

Mr. Means is the last of a series of representatives who have made arrangements for interviews with the members of the senior class in electrical engineering. Several members have already accepted positions offered by the representatives who were here earlier in the year.

Royall Will Address Law Students Today

Kenneth C. Royall, president of the North Carolina Bar Association, will address University law students and pre-law students here today.

Mr. Royall will speak on "Bar Organizations: Their Opportunities." His lecture, under the auspices of the Law School Association, will be held in the first-year classroom of Manning hall at 11 o'clock.

All students interested in the law and all faculty members and townspeople are invited, according to Dean C. T. McCormick. He received his A. B. degree at the University in 1914, where he made Phi Beta Kappa and numerous other honors.

His legal training was received at Harvard, where he graduated with honors, and was a member of the staff of the Harvard Law Review.

Shakespeare Players To Show Julius Caesar Here Saturday Under Auspices Of Playmakers

Notice

There will be an important meeting of the Seminar for all juniors and seniors majoring in economics at 7 o'clock tonight in room 309 at Bingham hall. The purpose will be for organizing and formulating plans for the weekly meetings to be held throughout the quarter.

Episcopal Students Asked To Contribute

Over 30,000 college students in the United States are members of the Episcopal church. This Lent, for the third time, they are raising a special student Lenten offering. Their objective is some much needed assistance for St. John's Medical School, Shanghai, and they hope to secure $5,000. Medical schools in China are now sending into the field only about a hundred doctors a year while literally thousands are needed. In eastern China, St. John's is now the only Christian school giving men medical training, and its teaching staff is inadequate. If American Church students secure $2,000, it means a teacher in chemistry or anatomy; $4,000 means both; each added $300 means a scholarship to make possible another well trained doctor. Martin Firth, Hobart College, Geneva, New York, is chairman of the offering committee.

Episcopal students at Carolina are now being asked to contribute to this offering. The local treasurer is Peter Brown Ruffin, S. A. E. House.

Scout Notice

All students who are scouts and are interested in forming a local chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national collegiate scouting fraternity, are requested to meet on the second floor of the Y at 7 o'clock tonight. There will be no expense for the local, and very little for national membership. Any one who is unable to attend the meeting may obtain information from Charlie Powell, 209 F.

Performance Will Be Special Feature of Playmakers' Season Program.

The Shakespeare Players will present Julius Caesar in the Playmaker theatre here Saturday night at 8:30. The company, which is a traveling organization of players now in its third year, appears here under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers, the performance being a special feature of the Playmakers' season program.

The Shakespeare Players are under the direction of James Hendrickson and Claire Bruce. During the first two years the company was known as the Stratford Players. Julius Caesar and Macbeth have been the outstanding presentations of the company, which has appeared chiefly before school and college audiences.

The company is composed of seven experienced players, five men and two women. The services of fifteen other players, ten men and five women, to fill extra parts, will be required for the performance here Saturday night. Persons wishing to take part in the production should give their names to Hubert Heffner, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers. Costumes will be provided by the company.

The regular admission price for the performance will be one dollar. School children and holders of season tickets to the Playmaker performances will be admitted for 50 cents. All seats must be reserved at the Student Supply Store.

Chapel Hillians Entertain

Tuesday night at a meeting of the Durham music club in the home of Mrs. T. E. Atwood, three musicians of Chapel Hill were represented on the program.

Harold S. Dyer, head of the department of music here, spoke on the possible functions of a federated music club. T. Smith McCorkle also of the music faculty, gave two groups of violin numbers accompanied also by his wife, while Mrs. McCorkle gave in addition two piano groups.

State Student Federation Proposed For Carolinians

N. C. EDUCATIONAL GROUP IN RALEIGH

The 46th annual session of the North Carolina Education Association, which was held in Raleigh March 20-22, was attended by a large number of delegates and visitors from the University. The association held its first general session Thursday evening, March 20, and adjourned Saturday morning immediately after the presentation of new officers.

Among the speakers before the convention were Mrs. Beatrice Ensor of England; Dr. Harold Rugg of Columbia University; Dr. Hughes Mearns of New York University; Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Wake Forest College; Mrs. Raymond T. Binford, president of the state Parent-Teachers' Association; and Dr. Garry C. Myers of Western Reserve University. Governor O. Max Gardner addressed the city and county superintendents on Wednesday, March 19. The Governor and Mrs. Gardner entertained delegates and visitors to the convention at the executive mansion Friday evening at 10 o'clock.

Meetings of departments and affiliated organizations of the convention were held from Wednesday through Saturday. Delegates from the University took an active part in several of these meetings.

The University alumni dinner, annually held during the meeting of the association, was given at the Raleigh Y. M. C. A. Friday evening. Dr. E. R. Rankin was in charge of the dinner, R. W. House acting as toastmaster. Several prominent educators addressed the banquet, which was attended by more than 80 Carolina alumni.

P. G. Browning Speaks To Civil Engineers

P. Getty Browning, principal locating and claim engineer of the State Highway Commission, spoke before the senior class in civil engineering Monday afternoon on the problems encountered in highway location.

Mr. Browning, who is one of the foremost highway locating engineers in the country, has done much to advance the science of efficient highway locating.

In his talk Mr. Browning presented ten points of locating among which is usually found the controlling condition in route selection. He illustrated his talk with an imaginary location project, a hypothetical highway joining a coastal area with the mountains.

Mr. Browning is the second engineer from the State Highway Commission to speak before the senior engineers. Before the spring vacation, Wm. Hawkins, chief construction engineer of the commission addressed the group on construction methods employed by the commission and testing procedure used on the state highway work.

Vanity Fair Notice

Students who submitted pictures for the Vanity Fair section of the Yackety Yack may obtain their pictures today at the office of the Yackety Yack in the basement of the Alumni building. The office will be open from 2-4 in the afternoon.

Farris, Lang, and Greene Fostering Movement to Bring Colleges Into Closer Relationship.

FIRST MEETING APRIL 28

Duke, State, and Carolina Will Be Joint Hosts Here to Other Institutions.

Under the particular guidance of a group of three prominent campus leaders, a movement is underway here for the organization of a North Carolina federation of college students at an early date, tentatively set for April 28. As yet no definite official action has been taken in this or any other institution of the state, but recent statements from the presidents of the student bodies of Duke University and State College indicate that these schools are willing to endorse and to inaugurate a federation, under the direction of President Ray Farris of the Carolina student body who has been the leader thus far.

This matter and its relative campus issues were carefully considered during an informal "bull session" Tuesday night in which President Farris, John A. Lang, one of the original instigators of the federation effort, and "Red" Greene, president of the senior class, participated.

President Farris, who has a sincere interest in the solution of numerous problems relating to student activities, is of the opinion that "the whole idea is a splendid one," since it will afford an opportunity to meet and discuss affairs which are common to all, and of which he believes there are an innumerable group. What is more, he is unusually concerned that the affects of the proposed organization shall be widespread enough to reach the average college student in every major school in the state. In this way it is hoped that much of the intercollegiate animosity, which is usually felt most among the masses of students, will be reduced to a minimum.

It was agreed, first of all, that letters be sent to all the college presidents in the state to determine their sentiments on the subject, and to come to an agreement upon the date for a conference here. As has been stated, President Savage of the Duke students announced his pledge of support at a meeting of Duke and Carolina students last quarter. While, President Choplin of Duke stated here Monday night before the Y. M. C. A. cabinets that he too was interested in a student federation. Both of these officials have agreed to the tentative date of April 28. So it remains only to secure the approval and support of the other schools in order to assure a successful convention.

Since President Farris is at present involved with a number of pressing issues of local importance, he has entrusted the issuance of invitations and the drawing up of preliminary plans to John Lang, as an unofficial but greatly interested representative of the student body, and to "Red" Greene, who is a former student council member. During his administration as president of the Phi society Lang was active in the organization of the federation movement.

Greene has said that he be-
