HELEN PUGH TO GIVE RECITAL IN SWAIN APRIL 7

Young Pianist To Appear Here Under Auspices Student Entertainment Committee.

Helen Pugh, 22-year old pianist from Asheville, who has received wide recognition as being a young musical genius, will appear here on April 7th at 8:30 in Swain hall. She comes under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee as the next number arranged by them for this quarter.

Since the time of her first appearance in recital, when she was five years old, her genius has been recognized and acclaimed by such men as Walter Damrosch and Josef Hofman. The latter expressed the conviction, "That child will develop into one of the great musicians." Although she has given a number of concerts from the time she was a child it is only recently that she has been appearing regularly before the public. Her parents and her patroness, Mrs. Crosby Adams, of Montreat, preferred that she spend her time in studying and perfecting her talents.

Miss Pugh recently appeared at Ormond, Fla., as piano soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, one of the foremost orchestras in the United States. The following appreciative account of the evenings offerings appeared in the Daytona News Journal:

"A slender girl in her early twenties stepped to the front of the stage last night at Peabody auditorium, took her place at a grand piano behind which were ranged the eighty-five players of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henri Verbrugghen, and gave a flawless interpretation of a Grieg concerto, with full symphonic accompaniment.

"She was Miss Helen Pugh of Asheville, N. C., and Ormond, guest player with the orchestra, to whose youth and ability conductor Verbrugghen graciously yielded not only his position in the front of the stage but all his skill and experience as a director.

The laws and codes of Austria rapidly are being revised to conform with those of Germany, looking toward the future union of the two nations.

Sartorial Sway
By Beau Gent

The dogma of art that beauty is a curve was laid down by Hogarth, the English painter. The eminent German, Mengs, went farther and declared that beauty is a serpentine curve. Fashion, however, seems to disagree with both of them. It maintains that the angle, by its very unconformity, is, in a rugged, masculine way, more pleasing. And this tendency toward angular effects one will find more pronounced alike in evening coats and evening waistcoats and in the spade-shaped tails instead of the shovel-shaped.

Waistcoats are deviating from the orthodox sloping contour of the lapels. They are now cut with squarish or abruptly slanted lines at the bottom, lending a sharp cornered effect. The waistcoat thusly assumes a more characterful appearance. It is better looking than the set look of the conventional "U" or "V" cut.

Warbled a poet, "Oh, nose! I am as proud of thee as any mountain of its snows; I gaze on thee and feel that pride a Roman knows." The practice of wearing a white linen handkerchief with a white shirt is spreading. It is symbolic of the simplicity which underlies true fashion and sound taste. Yet, though in effects less bold, the colored handkerchief is as good form as ever.

Perhaps the smartest handkerchiefs are those of white linen with diminutive figures in offset colors, as black, green, blue, purple, tan, etc. Or these colors may be superimposed upon a white background.

The cap gave way to the general acceptance of the lightweight felt hat some years ago and has since been the drifter and ne'er-do-well of fashion. Yet, because of its nifty appearance, youthfulness, and undeniable kinship with sport it is coming back.

One must remember that the smartness of one's cap is all in the way it's worn, for the line of demarcation between sportsman and highwayman is thin. It should be swung on, rather than drawn on, and kept at an angle a bit devil-may-care.

It is extremely important that the cap be well made. It should be of soft-nap woolens and the visor should be neither too short nor too long.

We saw two very smart looking young Carolinians for the first time in two years. Try to spot them. One wore a suit of dark brown, plain, somewhat lighter brown overcoat, brown, shirt of wine red and white stripes with dicky bosom, white collar, tie of dark red satin, and muffler of dark brown with wine red all over the pattern.

The second Beau combined with a suit of navy blue, and dark brown overcoat, a dark tan shirt, collar to match, tie of dark blue striped with tan, and muffler of tan with dark blue figures.

We, too, thought we were a well-dressed man until we read in the Beaunash column of causerie that the National Association of Merchant Tailors through its annual bulletin of What's What and What's Not has decided that it takes three dinner suits to make a well-turned-out man. These are the single-breasted cut, the double-breasted affair, and the shawl-collar jacket and they are said to be the trinity necessary to draw the correct line of demarcation among the different degrees of formality.

TAKING OF CENSUS BEGINS APRIL 2ND

Enumerators, with Government Blanks, Will Seek a Variety of Information

CO-OPERATION IS ASKED

The enumeration of the inhabitants of Chapel Hill for the 1930 census will begin next Wednesday, April 2. June L. Cheek is the enumerator here. He will go from house to house, equipped with the blanks issued to him by the government, and will seek information about every household.

The census bureau has for its task not merely the counting of the people in the United States. It is to collect data about racial origins, the relative numerical strength of various races, occupations, conditions of employment, the division of the population between the two sexes, immigration and emigration, migrations from state to state, and the growth or decline of industries in every region.

Success in this project depends largely upon the co-operation of the people. Everybody is asked by the government to give the desired information fully and freely, to the end that the canvass may be completed rapidly and that the final report may be as accurate as possible.

Atlanta, Leavenworth, and McNeil Island (near Tacoma, Washington), the Industrial Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, the Federal Detention Headquarters in New York City; or one of several prison camps in various parts of the country.

A man enters the Federal prison service as a guard with a base pay of $1,620 per year and allowances which bring the total remuneration to $1,860, the equivalent of a beginner's salary in the teaching profession. Within the guards' grade it is possible to reach a salary of $2,100 a year, and salaries in administrative positions for which one may qualify after experience range from $2,100 to $7,000.

College men with specialized training for prison work have their place in the progressive penal program laid down by the Attorney General and the Superintendent of Prisons and embodied in bills now before Congress. An urgent appeal is made to the undergraduates and recent graduates of American colleges and universities to consider entering the Federal prison service at this time.

Very truly yours,
SANFORD BATES,
Supt. of Prisons.
