

Carolina Trackmen Win Over Tech 104 To 27

Varsity Sprinters And Fieldmen Take Thirteen Of Fifteen First Places

Charlie Farmer Bests Ed Hamm in 100 and 220.

FAST TIMES MARK MEET

Barkley And Farmer Tie For High Scoring Honors; Mile Relay Team Misses Record One Second.

Setting a fast pace in every event and taking 13 of 15 first places, a well-balanced University track team overwhelmed Georgia Tech here yesterday afternoon by a score that was a decided upset—104 to 27.

The Tar Heels dropped first places only in the broad jump, in which Tech presented the world champion Ed Hamm, and in the javelin in which Tech presented the sophomore Doug Graydon, who threw 192 feet 4 inches yesterday, and who has thrown 205 feet, far better than the southern record of 193 feet 8 1/4 inches.

Fast times and good performances marked the varsity meet, although no records were broken. The real feature proved to be the two sprints in which Charlie Farmer, Tar Heel sophomore ace, twice beat Ed Hamm, southern champion in the 100 and 220, both times by a margin of slightly better than three yards.

Minor Barkley, Tar Heel distance star, turned in fast times for first places in both the half mile and mile, and a tie with Farmer for high scoring honors.

Farmer also ran anchor man on the Tar Heel relay team, which finished a fast mile, nearly a third of a lap ahead of Tech, in 3 minutes 28 seconds, just one second slower than the University record.

Carolina Co-Eds Beg Stickers, Ask Dates With Harvard Men

least," she continues, "favor me with the courtesy of an answer to this letter."

From what the Rover could learn after an extensive cross-examination of recipients of these request-notes, Harvard men are not prone to answer the fair co-eds of the North Carolina college. At least none was willing to say that he did. Some of them blushed when the Rover asked this pointed question, and on this alone he is tempted to believe that not all Harvard students tell the Press the truth—all of the time. He admits, however, that he has no proof upon which to base this opinion.

Longs For Poetry

One correspondent who uses the address of a dormitory in this North Carolina institution remarks that she appreciates above all things a love for poetry. "I have heard it said," she comments, "that Harvard men are noted for their quotations of verse as answers to rhetorical questions. I know that I would like to hear such retorts, for they show a superior mentality, and practical application of poetry."

Another confesses that her list of men friends is sadly lacking in a single Harvard man, student or graduate, and that she realizes she is missing something. Then she suggests that perhaps she may be fortunate enough some day to meet the young man to whom she is writing.

"If you may ever come to W—(the Rover omits the name of the town in deference to her feelings), I do hope that you may see fit to look me up. I would be delighted to meet you, and promise that I shall do whatever I can to make your visit a pleasant one."

As far as the Rover could find out there is not the least bit of jealousy among the students as to whom such letters are delivered. The Rover took a good look at the recipient of a letter addressed to "Mr. Harvard's Handsomest" and concluded that there were at least other students in the university who could outstrip him in a men's beauty contest. Some one told the Rover that a letter addressed to "Mr. Harvard's Best Sport" was delivered, on suggestion of the dorm porter, to the one student in the building who complained to him most often that there was "never any hot water in the wash room."

"Bull-Thrower" Gets One

Some may deduce that the Yard letter-carrier has enough duties without considering to whom he will deliver such epistles, but such is not the case. Mr. Postman, when one of these letters happens to be in his sack, shows it to the several dormitory porters and asks them to suggest the student to whom it shall be delivered. Invariably it is reported, the letter is never returned to the sender, marked "No such person at address given below."

But it is a matter of record that there was plenty of noise when a certain non-letterman was handed a letter to "Mr. Harvard's Best Athlete" with the remark: "Bull-throwers are athletes, aren't they?"
