INAUGURATION OF STUDENT OFFICERS

"Red" Greene, who has unofficially taken office as president of the student body, will officially assume the duties of this position at chapel exercises Monday in Gerrard hall.

President Greene will make a short speech on his administration and on the history of the student government at the University. The members of the new student council will be introduced to the audience, and the student government will be officially handed over to the incoming regime.

While the chapel is compulsory for freshmen, all members of the student body have been urged by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw to attend the exercises.

It is customary for the incoming student body president to make a short address, and precedence will be carried on this year.

On February 12, 1879, the medical school was established by the executive committee.

Chapel Hill's Old English Architecture

Mary deB. Graves, Chapel Hill artist, has pictured the Old English beauty of the Old Episcopal church here in the village, in a pen and ink sketch.

In the days when the horse and buggy was the fastest means of travel employed by the students and modern street lights were unheard of, the men of the University used to use the steps and walks around the Old Episcopal church for their "courtin'." The building is now incorporated into a handsome new structure which, while new, has few of the traditions the old church had.

Hunt of Charlotte and Frank Smith of Charlotte.
