

Freshmen Downed By Baby Deacons

Adkins started the mound work but was relieved by Griffith in the fifth. Pattisall was also relieved in the fifth by Peacock who finished the game behind the bat. Allan was substituted for Dixon in the eighth to hold down right field for the remainder of the game.

Lister led the Deacons in hitting by getting four hits out of four times at the plate. There was no outstanding hitting by any of the Tar Babies.

Golf Course Stopped

W. H. Holderness and Norman Cooper, former students at the University were recently frustrated in their plans to construct a miniature golf course in the lot adjoining the Carolina Inn when it was discovered that the construction of such an enterprise in the location would be in violation of the zoning law.

Holderness and Cooper had purchased their equipment, secured property rights, and begun construction before applying for a permit. City Manager Foushee learned about the undertaking and informed them that the site was outside of the business district and a permit for construction would be denied.

It is rumored that they will attempt to carry out their original plans in the lot adjoining the Tar Heel Club and fronting Franklin street. This property is in the business zone and may be used for such a purpose.

Chapel Hill is divided into four zones namely, Residence A, Residence B, Business 1, Business 2. Paying amusements such as miniature golf courses, theatres, and the like must confine their location to either one of the last two zones.—P. H.

Little Dyer Injured

The four-year-old son of Professor H. S. Dyer sustained a fractured shoulder yesterday morning when he was run over by Professor Peacock of the commerce department who was backing his automobile out of the garage.

It seems as if the young boy had slipped away from home in order to play on the local playground and was not seen by Professor Peacock as he was backing his car.

He was rushed to the infirmary where an x-ray examination was made by Dr. Abernethy, revealing a fractured shoulder. From the infirmary he was taken to Watts hospital in Durham. His father is away on a glee club trip, and his mother accompanied him to the hospital.

Double Forfeit
