Leaders in College Publications Hold Nineteenth Annual Convention.

Meeting in its nineteenth annual convention, the N. C. C. P. A. was the guest of High Point College, High Point, from April 24 to 26. Delegates were present from many of the leading university and college publications in the state.

A dinner given at the High Point Country Club opened the program for the convention. C. M. Wayrick, editor of the High Point Enterprise, was the chief speaker of the occasion. Favors were given to the delegates by numerous business houses in the city.

A business meeting held Friday morning was the next feature on the program. Brief reports were then made by many of the delegates on their respective publications. These reports were followed by meetings of the newspaper group led by Holt McPherson, the annual group by C. M. Beck, and the magazine group by Miss E. Vera Idol.

For dinner the delegates were entertained at a luncheon given at Edgefield Manor, at which time other favors were presented to the visitors. Throughout the afternoon trips were made to various points of interest in the city. Then at 8 o'clock the Greensboro Daily News was host to a dinner given at the banquet room of the Sheraton hotel.

On Saturday morning at 11:30, the final business session was held. The officers for 1930-31 were elected at this meeting. They are: Everett Couch of State College, president; Betty Brown of N. C. C. At the meeting of the seminar last week, Dr. A. M. Jordan of the school of education was the speaker. One of the important points stressed at that meeting was the interest and cooperation the other departments of the University are showing in the mathematics seminar.

they are doing, I believe, as good work as the students here. I admit that the intellectual life of our students at home is not as keen and vigorous as that of the students here; but that is largely the fault of our university. We are not vitalizing college work as much as we ought to and as we could. We are not consolidating and directing potential student tastes and latent talents as we should. While our coaches are organizing and directing athletic abilities, while our socially minded faculty members and their wives are actively interesting themselves in the fraternities and in other superficial social enterprises, while those interested in music are helping the students with their glee club, orchestra, and so forth, and while professors of polemical inclinations are doing something with the debaters, the rest of us are letting the rest of the students, with their multifarious tastes and aptitudes, go to the picture show. We really need something like the Playmakers at home. Playmaking as it is conceived and practiced here has demonstrated that it can make an enormous and permanent popular appeal, both in the University community and in the state at large. It is a species of art that can be quickly appreciated by average people. Carolina has demonstrated that, unquestionably.

Mayhew Has Throat Slashed By Negro

Donald C. Mayhew, operator of a filling station near the local firehouse, was slashed about the throat and body in a scuffle with James Hargraves, a negro employee, late Sunday afternoon. Mayhew was rushed to Watts hospital in Durham, where 36 stitches were required to close the wounds.

Hargraves fled immediately after the altercation and though various rumors have been received in regard to his whereabouts, he has not yet been apprehended.

The Martindale Air Service of Chapel Hill used two planes, piloted by Hicklin and Reynolds, in the search for the negro, while 25 local citizens scoured the surrounding country without any results.

Hargraves was reported as having spent Monday night at another negro's home in Durham, but when officers reached the place he had been gone about 15 minutes.

According to latest reports, Mayhew is resting well, and hospital authorities believe the wounds will not prove fatal unless complications set in.

Mount Wilson Observatory cover that phase of life better than we should ever be able to do. We do, however, consider the history of science as one of the subjects we may well undertake, probably in cooperation with the two institutions I have named."

Later he will confer with a few especially interested in doing and in promoting that kind of research.

the senior regalia would consist of a blue blazer with a white and blue insignia representative of the University. The date of the annual senior dance was set for Friday evening, May 16. Russ Bolin's orchestra will furnish the music.

MAN AMONG MEN SMASHES THROUGH IN MIGHTY STYLE

George Bancroft, the mighty thrill-man, is coming to the Carolina Theatre again. This time the burly Bancroft, who has become a man among men in screendom, will be seen and heard as Joe Forziati, the steel worker who fights his way to success as a building construction contractor.

The picture, "Ladies Love Brutes," is based on the original play, "Pardon My Glove" by Zoe Atkins. It was adapted for the screen by Waldeman Young and Herman J. Mankiewicz.

According to the fascinating plot, Bancroft, having attained a moderate amount of wealth, decides that he now needs social position. He makes a play for Mary Astor, young society matron. But now comes the villainy, purveyed by Stanley Fields, a racketeering labor agitator, and the critical moment finds Bancroft with a big decision to make. He must choose death for his own little boy or for the child of the woman he loves.

"Ladies Love Brutes" comes to the Carolina Theatre Today.
