

DR. FOERSTER IS TO DIRECT UNIQUE SCHOOL

Accepts Call To Become Director Of School of Letters At University of Iowa.

Norman Foerster, for 15 years professor of English in the University of North Carolina and a noted authority on American literature, has accepted a call to organize and head up a proposed school of letters at the University of Iowa. A previous announcement in the newspapers stated erroneously that he was to become head of the department of English at Iowa.

The school of letters, of which Professor Foerster is to be director, is to be an educational experiment of wide significance. There is said to be no such school anywhere in the country. It will embrace the departments of Greek, Latin, romance languages, German, and English, and will have the cooperation of the departments of History and Philosophy, the school of fine arts, and the graduate school.

The plan of the school of letters is in line with a general tendency in our universities to break down departmental barriers and coordinate learning. Its special object is to move gradually in the direction of the type of literary teaching and scholarship outlined in Professor Foerster's recent book, "The American Scholar" published by the University of North Carolina Press, which created quite a stir in literary circles when it appeared last fall and gained for its author much of the credit for initiating what has been called the "new Humanistic movement."

Professor Foerster soon found himself in the thick of a controversy. Unwilling to stand by and look on, he edited a series of essays entitled "Humanism and America," in which he defended the attitude the "new Humanists" through a survey of American scholarship and modern civilization.

It is understood that a group of New York journalists are to reply to Professor Foerster soon with a volume entitled "The Critique of Humanism."

Professor Foerster is a native of Pittsburgh, Pa. He was awarded degrees by Harvard and by the University of Wisconsin and has studied abroad. He is the author of a number of books and essays and a contributor to various journals. His resignation is a serious loss to the English department of the University.

ENGLISH BAGBY SPEAKS AT PHI ALPHA BANQUET

Dr. English Bagby was the principal speaker at the second anniversary banquet of the Phi Alpha fraternity last night at the Carolina Inn. Many alumni and undergraduate members attended the party at the fraternity house immediately following the banquet.

The visitors will all attend the annual Carolina-Virginia classic in Greensboro today.

Pi Kappa Phi To See Free Show Tonight

Members of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will be entertained by Manager E. Carrington Smith at the seven o'clock show tonight, according to an announcement recently made.

Mr. Smith's policy is to have a fraternity or dormitory group at the theatre as his guests once a week. Throughout the year he has entertained various athletic teams and organizations at one time or another, making a regular practice of giving a show to a campus group at least once a week. In his way, he says, he expresses his personal appreciation for the efforts of the various teams and organizations.

North Carolina Student Federation Will Meet Today At 11 O'clock

clared themselves heartily in favor of such an organization and action was taken at once to create the federation.

John Lang, senior in the University, is largely responsible for the organization of the congress, having acted as secretary of the unofficial student federation club and having headed the committee on drawing a constitution for the federation. This unofficial club, headed by President Greene, has been working for several weeks in preparation for today's event.

According to the plan of representation each college is allowed two representatives. Colleges having over 500 students may have one extra delegate for each additional 500 students. Under this arrangement Carolina is allowed six delegates. The delegation includes Ray
