TAR HEEL BAT-BOY

(Continued from page three) with the managers in chasing foul balls and filling the needs of the players. In fact, he orders the freshman managers around; these, though they are rising sophomores, are not in the least resentful in taking orders from "Sec," who knows much more about the team than they do.

But being bat-boy and secretary is his least importance to the team. He supplies as much enthusiasm and cheerfulness to the team as anyone. He has to be restrained from razzing the opposing pitcher too much. He exhorts the players by their nicknames and knows as much about them as the most rabid fans and followers of the team.

At the annual Carolina-Virginia game two weeks ago, "Sec" received a ball autographed by the whole squad, a token he prizes highly. At the final Duke game he received a black eye accidentally by the Duke catcher flinging a bat at him without looking; it almost started a riot.

Snake Bite Doctoring Remains A Lucrative Business In Carolina

a few weeks and, God daggit, you know after that she got married and had seven children.

Cured Some Bad Cases

"Now, take that worse case I ever had. That was a problem, too. I took that case when all the medical doctors had given it up. I went to see that gal twenty days 'fore I could make a cure. That was the worst case I ever had or want to have. But her folks made me a present of forty dollars for my trouble."

In spite of the fact that snakes are fast disappearing, Sheriff Jack's reputation as a snake-bite doctor has been steadily on the increase since at the age of 12 he cured his first patient. He learned the secret formula from Frank McGuire, a Confederate soldier who visited his home after the Civil War.

The following summer he had a half dozen cases and three years later, at the age of 16, he took a dozen patients and cured them all. Some had been bitten by moccasins while others encountered the dreaded adders and copper heads.

Although he has served the public as a blacksmith, as buggy maker, and more recently as auto mechanic and deputy sheriff, he has let nothing interfere with his snake-bite practice. He has had hundreds of cases and has never failed to make a cure. He is still widely known throughout eastern North Carolina, having had cases in Hertford, Bertie, Northampton, Gates, and in many Virginia counties.

Medical Doctors Aid Him

Doctoring snake bites, he says, gives him more pleasure than anything he has ever done. "It gives a man a great satisfaction to know he can be a help to the people of his state. I am glad when I look back on the years I've spent doctoring and see that I've done some good and have been a help to the people. I've enjoyed every minute I've spent helping my friends and the medical doctors."

Sheriff Jack went off for a stroll one beautiful summer morning and upon his return found the village doctors waiting for him with a patient who had been bitten by a poplar-leaf moccasin. "That man was stretched out on the office porch helpless. But, God daggit, I had him in his field plowing again in three days."

He has never tackled a rattle-snake bite and says that he'd rather leave "those dagged things" alone and let the medical doctors take care of such cases with "this here new serum."

Believes in Science

"This vaccinating business for rattle-snake bites is a good thing. I can cure any kind of bite from the snakes we have in this section, but I'd rather leave the rattle-snake bites to the medical doctors and their vaccinating needles.

"The scientist sure got the jump on me when it comes to curing snake bites that a way. But I'm glad. It's doing the world a lot of good and is carrying on the snake-bite-curing movement that I started as a pioneer. If it warn't for us old-time snake-bite doctors, there wouldn't be none of this here new vaccinating serum. No, Sir!"

He says no one else living knows the formula for this herb compound, and as yet he hasn't decided whether he'll tell the secret before he dies or not; but he intimates that it would take a lot of money to buy it.

"I might get lots of money with my medicine right now if I'd get some of these scientists to make extracts of it that I could sell in bottles. But I'm scared to trust these scientists. They'd just as likely test my medicine and find what it was made of. You know there's lots of crooked people in this old world today."

Is Active Deputy Sheriff

Mr. Liverman was sworn in as a deputy of Hertford county to serve under Sheriff Scull April 1, 1929. A few weeks later one of the home town boys came in from Atlanta Southern Dental College to find a large gold badge pinned on Sheriff Jack's wool shirt. When the young man asked about it, Sheriff Jack beamed proudly. "Why son, I've been sworn in. Who'd ever a-thought you'd be a doctor and me a sheriff?"

All last summer he was exceedingly active as an officer of the law, covering faithfully the village and the nearby beaches. The August term of superior court demanded some of his time, during which he served 24 papers and assisted in every way possible. "It kept me busy all right, but I like to see the courts come around, as I get to see my old friends who live away from here."

Much of his time was spent at Tuscarora, the local beach, where he represented the law and kept order among the youthful revelers. He says he has never had any serious trouble with any of the young people as he understands them thoroughly and knows how they should be treated.

"I can get along fine with these young fellows and college boys so long as they use common sense, but sometimes you run across these educated fools that can't be controled even by the law.

About Educated Fools

"You can give a fellow all the education you want to, but if he ain't got some common sense I wouldn't give you enough powder and shot to blow him up with. That's the trouble with lots of these educated boys today. They come back here to tear the world upside down. They talk like Bob Ingersoll and Thomas Paine. And these two fellows were crazy—insane—just like half of the people of America today. Still the boys laugh at us old fellows who are trying to help them along.

"What do some of them do—go out and get drunk, then say the old men are the sots. God daggit, there's just as much liquor drunk today as there was ten years ago, but there's a different class a-drinking it now, and that is our boys and girls. Ten years ago our girls warn't drinking it, but look what's happening now. Why, it's even got so bad now that any 12-year-old boy can buy all the liquor he wants for a one-dollar bill.

Offers His Panacea

"The whole trouble with our country today is that we have lost all contact with God and are worshipping Satan. It ain't nothin' else. God don't push Himself on nobody. If we want God we have got to look for Him. But it looks like this country don't want Him at all.

"Take Russia, now. Russia's gonna eat bark off'n trees and it's gonna happen 'fore I die. Russia can't go about tearing down God's churches and carrying out the holy vessels. There was old Belshazzar that did this very thing and his kingdom fell by the will of God, and so will Russia fall. Belshazzar had the vessels, that his father Nebuccadnezzar got from the temple in Jerusalem, brought to him, and he and his wives had a drinkin' frolic. God made the kingdom fall. That's exactly what's gonna happen to Russia. And God daggit, if America keeps on at the rate she's goin' filled up with ungodliness and idolatry, she can't make a success either.
