The Debate Squad

Students at this University find themselves surrounded by such a large number of extra-curricular organizations that the task of choosing one or more with which to become affiliated is indeed baffling. The chief fields of extra-curricular activity here are publications and athletics. It is not wise, however, to affiliate with these branches of student enterprise merely because they demand more attention than the others. Students should choose a medium for spending their spare time in lieu of the profession which they intend to pursue after leaving the University.

For those who are to pursue the practice of law or any other profession entailing frequent speeches and public addresses, the debate squad affords excellent training. The sole purpose of the squad is to train in the art of public speaking. Since the number of students who are interested in debating is relatively small (the active membership of the squad being about twenty-five), the debate coach can give each member individual attention.

The present organization of the debate squad is finely developed. Tryouts are held only after the query in question has been discussed by two, or more faculty members who are experts in the field of the query. Compulsory attendance for these discussions insures well-informed debaters and keen competition for places on debating teams.

The striking similarity which intercollegiate debating bears to public life makes the debate squad well worth the consideration of activity-pickers.—J.C.W.

OPEN FORUM

A NOCTURNAL VISITOR

Friday night, about midnight, one of the dormitories was visited by an apparition that could be duplicated near the river Styx, and probably nowhere else. This person, his clothes in tatters, with a patch over his eyes, and false, protruding teeth, called at several dormitory rooms. He would call to the occupants of the room in an attempt to get them to come to the doors. A few of them did so, but most of them thought he was drunk or crazy.

Of course, all this was really just a prank to scare the persons in the room, and the whole dormitory was following this person to each room, to laugh after the roomer had come to the door. Naturally, no harm was meant, but harm might have been done unintentionally.

To see such a gruesome sight, leering at you around the door would be, to say the least, startling. To those who can take a joke, it would be just so much fun, but to those who cannot, it might cause hard feelings. Hard feelings are to be avoided, so, if this person was determined to throw a scare into someone, he should not have aroused those who were already asleep.

Perhaps the greatest harm that this might have caused would have been due to the actual fright involved. To those who are naturally of a nervous temperament or to those who have a weak heart, the reaction might have been dangerous, perhaps causing the person to faint. It was a good joke, but such tricks should be reserved for times such as Hallowe'en or April Fools' Day, when everyone would be expecting some sort of trick to be pulled on them. The joke would have been funnier and less dangerous.—W. E. D. Jr.

ARE FRATERNITIES FRATERNAL?

As a freshman, I have been rather disappointed in fraternities. I came up here with the idea that fraternities were brotherly, not only inside their own fraternity but with other fraternities. If I had a brother that said the things about me that fraternities say about each other, I'd shoot him.

If the best thing that a man can do to boost his own fraternity is to knock some other fraternity, his fraternity must be a pretty poor one. It seems that you upperclassmen have forgotten the time when you were freshmen. You appear to believe that cutting the throat of your rival frat is a fine way to aid your own cause. But you can be sure that the right kind of boy will have contempt for the fraternity which uses such methods. A freshman just can't help liking a frat which praises its rivals.

That's the way fraternities should be. And if freshmen will remember how much they dislike any fraternity which practiced cut-throating, high-pressure talk, and over-friendliness that seems unnatural, fraternities next year will stop using such un-fraternal methods.

The old Jewish motto, "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," seems to be the motto of practically every frat on the Hill. "I heard that they cut our throats, so we'll just cut theirs."

It's every freshman's duty to keep clear in his memory the things he dislikes about fraternities and to see that his own one does not use such methods next year. In this way fraternities here will some time become real brotherhoods, with each other as well as in their own fraternity.—C. P.

WAS IT WORTH IT?

Editor of the Daily Tar Heel:

Recent news dispatches from Raleigh tell us of the legal execution of a negro lad of seventeen. The negro was charged with burglary, which is punishable by death in this state. Juries often refuse to convict for this crime for they feel the penalty is too harsh. It may have been that the jury and the court were influenced by two factors: first, that he was a negro; second, that there was an added element in this case of an attempted criminal assault. However, I will not quarrel with that.

Neither will I quarrel with the fact that the court ruled that there was no prejudice in that national guardsmen were stationed around the court house pending the trial. Nor will I quarrel with the court in overruling the contentions of defense counsel that the negro was intoxicated and therefore lacked that 'Intent' which is a necessary element in the crime of burglary. Nor will I disagree with the highest official in the state who ruled that mental incompetency on the part of the negro would not prevent the state from exacting the death penalty.

Mob Justice—in burning a negro at the stake would be universally condemned. But an execution by the state—legal murder so called—that is quite different. The methods may vary but the results are the same. In both cases you have burnt flesh. In the recent execution by the state, charge after charge of electricity was sent through the negro's body which caused one of the official witnesses to exclaim: "Does it take that long?" The official executioner did not turn off the switch until the odor of burning flesh permeated the whole prison. The prison physician then decided that the corpse was well done and brown.

The Peace and Dignity of the glorious state of North Carolina was upheld. The official witnesses returned to their daily tasks. Advocates of Law and Order breathed easier. The official executioner homeward plod his weary way—twenty-five dollars richer for his simple task.

I merely ask the simple question of the people of North Carolina: "Was it worth it?" JOSEPH E. JAFFEE.

Glider Is Launched By Electric Club

After its first successful flight at Wilkinsburg Airport, the Westinghouse Club glider "Electron," was christened by Thomas Spooner, president of the Westinghouse Club and assistant director of research for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Miss Ruth Smith, sponsor of the glider, and Captain Donald F. Burr, a former member of the Royal Canadian Flying Corps and coach of the glider club, took part in the ceremonies. The craft, an all-steel primary type Evans, was received unassembled, and built by members of the club. Instead of the usual "shock-cord" method of launching, the "Electron" was towed by automobile until it had gained sufficient height.

The club has a membership of nearly 100, many of whom are executives of the plant. It is thought by the directors to be the largest club of its kind in the United States.

RUSHING SEASON ENDS WEDNESDAY

future, according to the fraternity council.

Last year about 350 bids were accepted, and from the looks of things this year, probably more will be accepted than ever before.

Fraternities as well as freshmen are looking forward the close of the rushing season, not only because of the fact that new men will have been taken into the different social orders, but things will settle down to the "old grind" again.

The term "freshmen" is applied to any man who is being rushed by any of the fraternities on the campus. Many times violation of the rules comes as the result of a misunderstanding of the term "freshmen."

tempt to solve his problem, rather than his wish to avoid it. Having built up this personality, Professor Koch succeeded in keeping it alive and vibrant throughout the unfolding of the drama.

When one realizes that this effect was produced without stage settings and the usual theatrical trappings, one is moved to express a sincere admiration for the genius of Professor Koch.

The second reading of the series will be given some time in November. Paul Green will read one of his own plays; probably Tread The Green Grass.

Why do Most Students buy Sheaffer's?

It is a fact proven by sales figures that among America's hundred leading colleges, each with 1700 or more students registered, Sheaffer's outsell all others. Is such leadership ever an accident? You know the answer. These sophisticated pen users have found that they like Sheaffer's individualized pen points, that they like the comfortable Balance° designed into Sheaffer's, that they like the streamlined, modern contour of the Balance° pen and pencil, and that Sheaffer's Lifetime° guarantee of satisfactory service means something.

That explains Sheaffer's college sales leadership, and prompts the suggestion that if you'll give Sheaffer's Balance° Lifetime° a class-room test, you'll adopt that pen for your Lifetime°.
