

ALL TICKETS ARE TAKEN FOR ORGAN RECITAL PROGRAM

Sunday Concert Planned To Take Care of Extra Applications For Dedication Event

Dr. Dyer of the music department announces that all tickets for the organ dedication programs on Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15, have already been taken. In view of the fact that a large number of faculty members, townspeople, as well as others who had planned to attend, have failed to make application; it is found necessary to continue Mr. Eigenschenk's program over Sunday afternoon. From now on applications that have been for the Friday or Saturday performance will be filled for the Sunday recital at four o'clock.

Dr. Dyer states that, of 1500 applications received, less than 1000 are from students. 200 are from faculty members and Chapel Hill people, and the remainder are from other towns. Large delegations are expected from Raleigh, Greensboro, Burlington, Charlotte, and other cities. Practically all cities in central North Carolina will be represented.

It is not unlikely that Mr. Eigenschenk will change his program for Sunday afternoon. In view of this, duplicate applications may be made beginning next week. In other words, persons who have already applied for their tickets for the Friday or Saturday performance, may also apply for a ticket for Sunday, also. Requests for extra tickets for Sunday will be filled in the order received, after the requests of those who have been unable to get tickets for Friday or Saturday.

LOCAL PLAYFOLK REHEARSE PLAYS

Saturday evening the Carolina Playmakers presented in rehearsal two of their new bill of three plays for the members of the Southern Conference on Education. Professor Koch explained to the delegates that he felt they would be more interested in rehearsals than in the finished production.

After the first play, Cloey, a romantic Carolina folkplay by Loretta Carroll Bailey, the curtains were opened and Samuel Selden explained the stagecraft while the delegates watched the change of scenery. The second play was a farce of Mississippi folk life by Arthur Palmer Hudson.

LECTURE DEALS WITH BRIEFS AND ARGUMENTS

A medium sized crowd attended the lecture of Colonel W. T. Joyner, of the Raleigh bar, which was delivered in the Law Association room in the basement of the law building, Monday. Colonel Joyner's talk was on the subject of "The Preparation of Briefs and the Argument of Cases in the Appellate Courts in North Carolina." Due to the length of the lecture, it was divided into two parts: the first being delivered at 3 o'clock and the second at 7:15.

The lectures dealt with the preparation of records and briefs as well as the composition of oral arguments. Reading from briefs or referring to them during the rendition of the oral argument was discouraged by Colonel Joyner.

Di Will Debate On Campus Comic

The Di Senate meets tonight to discuss the two bills on the calendar, which are the question of the continuation of the Buccaneer and the present situation of the Carolina football squad.

The bills which will be discussed tonight in New West at 7:00 at they appear on the calendar are: "Resolved, That the Carolina Buccaneer should be abolished"—Beatty Rector; and "Resolved, That the sports writers of North Carolina are largely responsible for the inferior condition of the Carolina football team, and that they are, therefore, deserving of condemnation"—J. C. Williams.

VILLAGE WATER IS AGAIN NORMAL

Vegetable and Phenolic Substances From Leaves and Tar Road Caused Taste

The taste and odor trouble in the Chapel Hill water supply, which has vied with the Georgia Tech game as the principal topic of conversation in the community since Friday, has been corrected, according to advices from Messrs. J. S. Bennett, Supt. of the University Consolidated Service Plants, and H. G. Baity, Prof. of Sanitary and Municipal Engineering. Since the development of this very unusual condition, which unfortunately occurred at a time when twenty thousand visitors were in town, and in greater intensity than heretofore experienced at Chapel Hill or in the state, the officials in charge of water purification have been busy day and night attempting to locate the source of the trouble and apply treatment processes to alleviate it. The current impression of townspeople seems to be that the nauseating taste and odor were due to chemical treatment in the purification process. Such is not the case. Extreme care has been taken in chemical application, and the purification plant is under continuous control by experienced and scientifically trained operators. The amount of chlorine used for final

FOERSTER EDITS BOOK OF ESSAYS

Copies of "American Critical Essays," edited by Norman Foerster, are now obtainable at the Bull's Head Book Shop. This is the latest of a series of books edited or written by Professor Foerster, who is professor of English here.

To have been selected by the Oxford Press to edit this book is considered quite an honor by American literary men.

Anilorac Cafe Goes By The Board Sunday

One of Chapel Hill's legion of cafeterias has faded from the picture. The Anilorac Cafe failed to open its doors Sunday morning. The proprietor of the cafeteria has given no reason for his action in discontinuing his business. It is thought, however, that the poor condition of trade was the reason for the closing of the cafe.

Buccaneer Staff Meeting

There will be an important meeting of the Buccaneer art and editorial staffs tonight at 7:15 at the Buccaneer office.

LAND DISPUTES SEEN AS CAUSE OF SOUTH'S PART IN REVOLUTION

Unorthodox View Upheld by Henderson in Leading Article of "Mississippi Valley Historic Review" Likely to Produce Changes in History of This Period.

The leading article in the September issue of the Mississippi Valley Review was "A Pre-Revolutionary Revolt in the Old Southwest," written by Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor of mathematics. This article was based on the intensive research which Dr. Henderson used in an address before delegates from the University of North Carolina and Duke University at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association in Durham.

In this short historical account Dr. Henderson presents his rather radical ideas of the causes of the revolt of the southern states against Great Britain. He opposes a view which has prevailed unbroken until the present. This view is that the causes of the revolution were in no way economic; Dr. Henderson's view is that the real and most outstanding incentive drawing the south into the war was disputes over land policies. This view he presents with impressive evidence taken from documentary sources.

By short excerpts from the letters of such leaders as George Washington, Patric Henry, Jefferson, and Clark, he points out the disputes caused by the blundering land policies of the mother country. The historians—Fisher, Fiske, Channing, Van Tyne, and others—point out as the causes of the war, the Boston port bill, the Townshend acts, and the violations of contracts between the colonies and Great Britain, but no mention is made of the many British land policies that caused so many disputes.

For twenty-five years prior to the Revolution, Virginia as well as many other states had been promoting land development along her western border. The land companies formed were led by such men as Washington and George Mason. These statesmen were more interested in their land holdings perhaps than in the affairs of the colonies.

At the appearance of the land acts these statesmen were disturbed and aroused to action. Many men had bought vast tracts of land from the Indians for small sums, and the mother country was trying either to collect taxes or in some cases to make new states of the newly developed land. The pioneers who owned small tracts were aroused as well. The first act, the orders in council of 1763, was ignored by Governor Dunmore, and the land regulations of 1774 were suppressed.

When Lord Dartmouth learned of those measures, he strictly censured Governor Dunmore. The Governor in turn explained the hostile attitude of the pioneers and statesmen and expressed the opinion that they would not endure such laws. This was many years before the revolt.

Then, on the very eve of the Revolution, the Virginia convention led by Patric Henry, Thomas Jefferson, George Mason and Pendleton voted in 1775 absolutely to disregard the land policies forced upon them. Coinciding with this was the action of the Mecklenburg patriots of North Carolina on May 31, 1775.

This is summarized the view of Dr. Henderson. This view, contrary to those that have up to the present time been accepted as true, may cause many changes in the historic accounts of this period.

Order Of The Coif Is Modelled After English Law Institution

In twenty-eight of the leading law schools of the United States, chapters of the Order of the Coif, an honorary law-school society, have been established. These include Yale, Pennsylvania, Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, and Stanford. A chapter was established at the University of North Carolina in 1928. Professor A. C. McIntosh is its president and Professor F. B. McCall, secretary.

Membership in the chapter in the University has been awarded to the following: Class of 1927: Samuel Elton Vest, Joseph Lapsley Cantwell, Jr., and William Harrison Abernathy; Class of 1928: Charles Raper Jonas, Clarence Windley Hall, and Frank Bird Gumme 2nd; Class of 1929: Jefferson Barnes Fordham and Susie Marshall Sharp, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy (honorary); Class of 1930: John Huske Anderson, Jr., Alfred Waddell Gholson, Charles Francis Rouse, Allen Kendrick Smith, Judge John J. Parker of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals (honorary).

The Order of the Coif was organized in 1911 as an honorary law school society, membership in which was designed to mark with distinction those who had attained a rank in their legal studies among the highest ten percent of the senior class.

It was modelled after an institution with the same name which flourished in England for about seven centuries, but with this difference: The English Order of the Coif consisted exclusively of lawyers practicing before one court, the Court of Common Pleas, and the judges of the court could only be selected from that membership. The English order died out following the reorganization of the English court system in 1875. The word "Coif" originally designated a silk cap much like a small baby's cap worn by the lawyers of an early day. In later times, the "Coif" designated a silk rosette worn on top of the barrister's wig.

The national officers of the Order of the Coif are Professor M. T. Van Hecke, University of North Carolina, president; Dean O. L. Rundell, University of Wisconsin, vice-president; Professor E. W. Puttkamer, University of Chicago, secretary-treasurer.

Bible Class

The student Bible class of the Chapel of the Cross will meet in the parish house tonight at 7 p.m. Subject: "Christianity and War."

Two Bills On Phi Calendar Tonight

The following bills will be discussed tonight by the Phi Assembly:

Resolved: That the present high tariff is the cause of the present business depression in the United States.

Resolved: That in voting, the party should be considered rather than the man.

These bills were carried over from the last session because there was not sufficient time for their discussion.

ELECTIONS WILL BE HELD TODAY

Four Chapel Hill Democrats Among Those To Be Voted on By 1300 Eligible Persons

The people of Chapel Hill will go to the polls today to probably send in the sixteenth consecutive Democratic administration. The people will vote in the general election for senator, congressmen, county and state officers. There were 1300 persons registered to vote in this election as compared to 897 registered to vote in the primaries in June. There are a greater number of students voting absentee ballots this year than ever before. The poll holders for the election today are: W. O. Sparrow, L. J. Phipps, Paul Stead, and Paul H. Robertson.

The candidates from Chapel Hill who are running in this election are: John W. Umstead, Jr., for state senator; S. W. Andrews, for register of deeds; S. A. Nathan, for coroner (Nathan has served three terms and is up for his fourth term); M. W. Durham, for county board of education; W. T. Sloan, who is running for re-election as sheriff and was a resident of Chapel Hill before his installation. All these candidates are Democrats and will probably be elected.

The cooperation of the voters is asked so that there will be as little confusion as possible at the polls. Citizens are asked not to loiter within ten feet of the booth, and not to occupy a booth longer than five minutes. All rules in regard to the election will be strictly enforced.

CORONER SPENDS BUSY WEEK-END

The Orange County coroner was quite busy this week-end. Three deaths were reported in the county on Saturday and Sunday.

Bruce Carpenter, who attempted to rob the bank at Efland, died as a result of gunshot wounds. Carpenter entered the bank and threatened S. C. Forrest, one of the officials of the bank, with a pistol, when Forrest attempted to call for help. Forrest managed to gain possession of his own pistol and fatally injured the robber. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of self defence in favor of Forrest.

Lawrence Bright of Red Springs, North Carolina, succumbed to an attack of angina pectoris just before the football game on Saturday afternoon. Bright was forty-eight years of age and apparently in good health, the coroner's opinion is that the excitement concerning the game brought on the fatal attack.

Lester Jenkins, nine months old, was found dead in bed Sunday morning. The cause of death has not been determined.

NEIBUHR'S SERMON MARKS CLOSE OF EDUCATORS' MEET

Crowd Hears Clergyman on Topic, "Social Intelligence and Spiritual Dynamic"

"The intricacies of our commercial and industrial civilization require a new type of social intelligence without which our civilization is doomed," Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, noted clergyman and writer, who is professor of applied Christianity in the Union Theological Seminary, New York, declared here Sunday morning in a sermon which marked the closing session of the third annual Southern Conference on Education at the University of North Carolina.

Making indirect reference to the industrial situation throughout the country, Dr. Neibuhr declared that "the people of America are lacking in social intelligence. We are too mechanical. What we need is more of the human touch."

Dr. Neibuhr spoke from the pulpit of the University Methodist church which was filled to capacity. His utterance was regarded as remarkably brilliant and forceful and was received with enthusiasm. The sermon brought to a close the four day session of the conference which visiting delegates declared to be the most successful of the three held so far. The attendance was larger than last year, and the program was notable for the effectiveness of the speakers.

Dr. Neibuhr was introduced by President Frank P. Graham of the University. Rev. C. Excel Rozelle, pastor of the church, presided and offered the invocation, and President W. L. Lingle of Davidson College said the benediction. The University glee club under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer ren-

GATE CITY ALUMNI FORM UNIQUE CLUB

Five former Carolina students have formed an eating club in Greensboro which is composed of men from some of the other institutions in the state as well. Former students of Guilford, Wake Forest, and several other universities and colleges in the state are members of this Cavalier Club, as it is called.

This small group of men, all of whom have jobs in the Gate City, have formed this club, and have rented a house on Lake Drive. The club resembles a campus social fraternity in that membership in the organization is by invitation only. Two meals are served daily, and a large majority of the members live in the house.

Organized in November, 1928, with sixteen charter members, the Cavalier Club today has a total membership of thirteen. Five former Carolina students now in the club who were charter members, are Homer Coltrane, '25, Hal Marsh, '26, Rufus White, '27, George Wright, '28, and Red Routh, '26.

The members of the club are at present planning to form a basketball team which they intend to enter in the Gate City league. Special uniforms have been ordered.

It is one of the rules of the club that when a member marries, he loses his active membership. "A home away from home," is the motto of the group.
